juvenile spelling....lol..repeated throughout your posts and indicative you have the unyielding inner need to be something you never can...Lol. Such desperation at trying and sell someone a bag of goods that says you are another other than who you are, is peculiar enough to the unitiated.

See, junior, your arrogance gives you away every time..your disdain for the group. Anyone who pays attention, can not reasonably believe that Sparky posts here for years with flawless and meticulous spelling, disappear, then return with a penchant for spelling incompetence on a regular basis, through an anonymous posting service. That you have the desperate need to be another is fine with me,,,,I just needed to point it out and let you know it needn't be an issue, if you can muster the self-control to put it behind you.

>Ok, let's talk about your desperation for any >kind of validation to >support your delusions;

That's pretty funny. Your entire cyber life has been upended by little old me..look at to what extent you find yourself...hahahha! The only one who seems unable to "get over" any delusions, is yourself. Feeling that any type correction to your usually-wrong posts is somehow "criticizing" you, is most definitely a delusion, and it's all yours of your own making.

a) my spelling, and b) your delusion that I'm >someone else.

Hey, why do you feel such a compulsion to explain your idendity? LOL! Gillilands spelling was flawless. Yours is atrocious through and through. Gilliland isn't as ignorant as you..if that upsets you, so be it.

Nevertheless,,again, Gillilands posts are not chock full of errors like yours are. You're not sharp enough to be another, which lends to the reason of WHY you so desperately have a need to be another.

--< when I started responding to your trolling --<

That's pretty funny..you responded to nothing..you came out swinging at me as soon as you lost access to posting to this group...lol.saying you did one thing when you did another has always been what to expect from your mildly retarded self..you can't realistically separate fact from fiction and have problems getting over yourself, in addition to the plethora of a problem you have created for yourself.

>your warped interpretation of relevance is not >only disturbing,

Certainly it's disturbing,,truth has haunted you since you were a green newbie here and found you couldn;t do what you pleased whenever you wanted....you learned the hard way, as you must have ISP's taken away from you prior to realizing the rules pertain to even the mildly retarded and that you are not exempt, special, above the rules, revered or respected by anyone in any manner whatsoever.
For some unknown, this continues to anger you to the point of hemorrhage. Wait a sec..everything angers you..lol!

LOL,,,which YOU can not seem to get over as you have demonstrated a propensity for sheer lack of self-control...lol.

>So start with that word and go play on Google. I'm sure you will find a multitude of examples where my spelling hasn't been very meticulous. <

Absolutely. You are nowhere near the level you should be when it comes to spellling. Just the fact that a grown man can live to be your age and gain so little knowledge is testament to your anger and ignorance.

Already proved you wrong, nocode, each and every time you expressed that unhealthy, overt and personal concern over an internet stranger...lol..Your communication deficit and mild retardation simply will not allow your twisted psyche to grasp such a concept...but that's alright, by me.

The diode is basically a "crowbar" device.
If the supply is reversed, the diode allows a large current to flow, bypassing the main components and burning out the fuse.

The usual (as stated by Jay) is the 1N4001 type, which is rated at 1 Amp.
This should take the surge for as long as it takes to pop the fuse... unless the fuse is too high a value or has been shorted out - in which case the diode pops under the strain.
Most cases I have seen have left the diode short circuit, although either way is possible.

If cross wiring does cause the diode to go open circuit and the radio is switched on, the reverse voltage will get to the ICs and transistors in the radio. If it goes short circuit, it will continue to protect the radio components.
So, although the diode cannot cause the reverse voltage, the fact that it has popped means that one is present and will get to the main components if the diode is open circuit.

Sometimes the 1N5400 series diodes are used in some higher current devices.
These are rated at 3Amps.
Fuses can also be two types - Quick blow or slow blow. The slow blow type are for uses where there may be a short surge of power at switch on, reducing quickly to the usual level, which those fuses will allow.

So, if all is well, the diode should not pop, it should kill the fuse.
I always suggest that the radio should be switched off on the front panel whenever connecting it to a supply. This way, the main components are usually isolated in the case of a slip up. I say usually because some higher powered radios have the output devices connected direct, bypassing the switch.

Regards,

Peter.

The 4148 will only take about 75mA. It could pop before the fuse does, in which case a 4148 is likely to go open... leaving the radio open to the full effect of the cross wiring.
1N4001 diodes are cheap enough, just a few pennies here, unless you buy in quantity and get them even cheaper.

If you mean Radio Shack (in the UK, RS is a different company), Radio Shack components were distributed here by Tandy, who have now shut down. But then there were always plenty of cheaper places to get your components.

Peter.

Ya know I always know better but for some reason this time I didn't heed my own warning. I had advertised a HR2600 with a chipswitch and 2 - 150 amps for sale. One having a preamp switch problem and needed a new switch but the amp side worked perfectly. And I got alot of action but no sales. Well after 2-3 months I got an email from

MITCH N2RADIO [mitch@n2radio.com] MITCHELL Robertson [MR_CPTN@militaryministry.net]

Stating that he had a 6900TB to and an Boomer 600 amp to trade for my stuff. I was like ok, no problem. I got everything packaged up in bubble wrap and boxed real well. And waited for ups to pick it up. And he was to do the same. Well he gave me a tracking number 2 days later and the package was on its way to me. Well mine left and went to him. I triple checked the operation of all the equipment before I packaged it up. Just because I did a trade earlier that month (Sept) and had a DOA problem with a scanner. So I made sure that the equip worked perfectly. Well I found out that Mitch was in the military and was being shipped out. And his family is moving. So they wouldn't be able to get email for some time.

Well the package arrived at completely the wrong address, which was intentional because Mitch and his wife Laura had both double-checked the shipping addy with me. I finally get the package and guess what? Its 3 Chilton's repair manuals no equipment to be found. Well did I get hosed but bad. So over the next 4 months I emailed both addresses well over a hundred times. And no response at all. Well I have a few connections in the military and I'm making some requests. I'll see what happens it should be interesting to say the least. The last email I sent Mitch and his wife I told him this and told him by Jan 1 If I didn't hear anything I would take action. Still no reply!!

Well as I'm typing guess what, I get a box in ups!! SO I open it up and there is my 2600 back and one 150 amp that I sent to him. And a note that the 2600 doesn't receive, the first amp is dead, and he kept the other amp and sent me 2 beat up 15.00 microphones one with an echo. DAM JUNK!! And a mini para dynamics meter DOUBLE JUNK!!! Then he has the balls to throw in a pc board for an amp kit. Well I just wanted EVERYONE to know what happened to me. So if you do business with him BEWARE I warned you.

Site #9: Wilderness Park, Hillsborough River at FL 579, NE of Tampa Wilderness Park was a wonderful nature area with boardwalk trails along and over the blackwater, which formed wide marshes off a narrow, winding waterway. Many plecos were found either dead or dying near the shore, along with the live ones collected.

Because this crude protection scheme only works if the diode conducts and effectively shorts the power source before it can get into the radio with reverse polarity. Many ICs (if not all) are intolerant to this mode and will be destroyed instantly. You will note that the diode they use is rather large. This is in preparation of taking a large current (the rated fuse intalled) to hold the clamped power leads until the fuse can blow. Most of the time, this large current surge will also have the side effect of ruining the semiconductor junction in the diode, rendering it shorted forever. When this happens, even hooking up the power in the correct polarity will keep blowing the fuse until the diode is replaced...

P.S. On rare occations, the diode shorts only momentarily before the junction is actually burned in two. This renders the diode "open" and therfor allows the reverse polarity into the radio with disasterous results. So you see that this is a crude (cheap) method of protection and nowhere near 100% reliable...

Top posting intentional so D or D will understand.

Times change, things become more complicated, with more features, and are more disposable. You cannot hope to keep time with the changes if you still live in the 70's. What you are doing is attempting to revive a dying breed. It's not going to happen. Elvis is really dead, and so are full sized components. SMD's and IC's are the way to go, no matter how it complicates your small corner of the world. Get over it and find something you can make a living at. You obviously are not good at electronics or you would not be whining here. Sorry to be so blunt, but you understand nothing less.

You still don't get it, do you, Twist? You see, in the USA we can openly scrutinize that which appears to be unethical conduct by members of our government and defence contractors (as if YOU have the ethical foundation to criticize anyone else for breaking federal laws ... LOL). And in the USA we have the right... nay, responsibility to make our government officials behave within certain moral and ethical guidelines. That's not an easy task since most people like to bend the laws for their own benefit -- just like the politicians they voted for. Regardless, if we don't like the fact that someone is getting some perks from their job we can intimidate our representatives and senators into getting it stopped. It wouldn't be the first time, and it won't be the last.

But then there's you, Twisty, who hears a few nibblets on the news about 'secret' government contracts, the facts of which have not yet been fully disclosed, that may or may not have been legal, uses these crumbs of info to fan the flames of your paranoid rants. You, a self-proclaimed "professional journalist", chose to discard your duty to dig for the facts and publically report them with objectivity (which I admit you won't find in most of the news media now days). Did you research the validity of the responses by those under scrutiny? Have you established that there was IN FACT a problem, or even an illegal act, with these contracts? Did you even bother to seek a solution to the problem if it does indeed exist? Of course not, you just used the reports to whine about the government. Of course that's all you did, cause if you did anything else but whine you would lose your justification for selective obedience to federal laws. Now go slither back into your trailer and misbehave like a good little Republican.

Even a 1N400x has a 20A surge, which is more than enough to blow a 2 to 3A fuse before the diode melts down. The reverse voltage across the radio will never exceed the forward voltage drop of the diode (-0.7V), and that won't harm anything in the radio. As I said before, the problem is when people replace the fuses with higher ratings, or hook the radio up without a fuse at all. THAT will put enough current through the diode to make it fail.

If you don't believe me, find yourself a junker radio that uses a reverse polarity protection diode (and check it to make sure it's still good!). Then hook it up with the correct fuse for the radio but using reverse polarity. Time after time the fuse will blow but the diode will be fine, as will the radio.

BTW, never EVER use a slo-blow fuse with a CB radio!

It's not idiot-proof, if that's what you are trying to say.

Hiyee,
I dun have a SWR meter and would like to build a medium performance wire dipole...what can I expect as in transmission range with this kind of antenna...and is it big?? I live in a flat...so mounting will be a problem...what do you suggest?? and can you provide me with construction details to do it...btw...my CB only manages 4W output power max...is that small?? Thanks in advance.

"Illegal" was your word of choice,,,,,,,,,,spelling it required spellcheck, didn't it, Lelnad?LOL.

>Did you even bother to seek a solution to the problem if it does indeed exist? Of course not, you just used the reports to whine about the government. Of course that's all you did, cause if you did anything else but whine you would lose your justification for selective obedience to federal laws. Now go slither back into your trailer and misbehave like a good little Republican. <

My sucess has always bothered you...what can I say? I'm everything you hoped and aspired to be at one time, but you can't even obey simple rules in placefor the good of all,,you arrogantly feel you are above them,,lol,,,,,you're not, and it pains and galls you to no end that in your impotent efforts, you slash your own throat.....just like I claimed you would several years ago..search "baby chewing on a razor"....hahhahah!

>And BTW, if you are going to criticize spelling,

It's YOUR problem and dilemma that you feel you are being "criticized" when one corrects and teaches you something you are incorrect about.

>Proof positive that you still haven't learned anything about prepositional phrases. And you claim to be a "professional journalist"... pshaw!

Why does that bother you,?? Why are you so obsessed and beside yourself with my personal work? It doesn't bode well for you,,,in fact, it highights your twisted obsession and uncanny inability to demonstrate any self-control at all on your behalf. Your spelling at a grammar school level has nothing to do with me. Merely pointing out your spelling errors illustrates your deficit like nothing prior.

You take any correction as a direct insult (showing how severe your deficit is) and your anger with such causes you to make the one who corrected you, your choice of topic for r post,ironically illustrating you have no self-control and a limited train of thought,

Such paranoia from a nocode as yourself....haha!

>Who am I this week, Twist? You haven't answered that one in a very long time... gee, I wonder why... _

LOL,,because your arrogance is responsible for only one person caring if you draw breath,,yourself. Becoming more and more impotent each day with sordid attempts to somehow have another actually give a thought to your identity, is to be expected from one with a double-deficit, one in communication and the other due your mild retardation.

>maybe you should check your own grammar from time to time.

My grammatical content has nothing to do with your repeated spelling bloopers, although you desperately need it to. Nor does my choice of grammar have anything to do with your projected ignorance concerning Bechtel Corp.

>Or your continuing attempts to discredit the government of the United States.

I discredited nothing,,I merely point such things out and mildy retarded people such as your angry nocode self lie about such things,,much as Hall lied with his anger.

Try not to change the subject. Just who do YOU (a nocode) expect to believe that you are Gilliiland?

>First, maybe you better quit whining about >everyone else's spelling

LOL...there you go again, trying to hide that ignorance that spilled from you....it's not about "everyone elses" spelling,,,lol..just yours.

>because you just spelled my name wrong.

It's not your name, but I'll allow you to play as opposed to mustering the inner stregnth and intellect needed to discuss Bechtel rationally. I don't expect miracles, ya' know.

>If I'm not who I claim to be, then who am I, Twist? And why are you so obsessed with this delusion that I am someone else? So who am I this week, Twist?

LOL.....how does your mild retardation arrive at such a misinterpretation that another cares about your identity, especially bearing in mind that your identity crisis resulting from your damaged psyche is mentioned by none but yourself? Why, you're beside yourself, hopping up and down once again with identity confusion.

>Second, if by 'nocode' you mean that I hold >any type of amateur license then once again you are tripping over >your paranoia.

Mmmph.......the only one demonstrating paranoia of any type is YOU interpreting any type correction to your ignorant posts as "criticizing" you personally. You have never been able to communicate effectively, as you take everything personal, even though you were taught that your identity means nothing to any but pathetic yourself,

>...hence your insistence that I am somebody else. Sure. Right. Whatever.

Exactly. It's not your name that I focus on,it's yor lies...it's why you were reduced to the position you dwell in now..you were unable o handle and cope with the truth I set forward. It toppled you.

,you just aren't a care by anyone here,

>Especially you, I'm sure. So why do you keep responding to my posts, Twist?

I shoot holes in all lies when known,,,try not to take it so personal, and you won't come off as mildly retarded with a sever communication deficit. There is an art to communication that you haven't learned, yet, and your paltry nocode license did nothing for you. You now are in limbo reaping what you sewed and I couldn't be more ecstatic.

  so taking everything personal as you do is nothing but manifestations of your inability to communicate effectively. Your anger over anyone pointing out a remiss...

>....yawn....

A little wider..the ornithological diet is quite easy to force feed the mildly retarded.

.. in your posts is jolly entertainment, as you continually think you somehow matter in the overall scheme of things...lol...again, get over yourself.,,,and stop trying to change the subject to those that you worship whenever one corrects your ignorance cocnerning world politics.

>Now if you don't want me to change the >subject then at least focus on a subject that's relevant.

..which happened to be your checkered ramblings concerning politics of something you obviously know nothing of, judging by your telegraph of knowledge concerning such.
.."telegraph of knowledge"?
It then became about your juvenile spelling....lol..repeated throughout your posts and indicative you have the unyielding inner need to be something you never can...Lol. Such desperation at trying and sell someone a bag of goods that says you are another other than who you are, is peculiar enough to the unitiated.

.."another other"? "unitiated"? I'm beginning to think that you aren't even Twist because even he never wrote while intoxicated. Or have you taken up drinking for a new hobby?

What you thought never mattered. Making you aware of such was part of what rendered you a ranting lid that has no place with cb or hammies.

>See, junior, blah, blah, blah.
You have his style down pretty good, but you forget that his content is much more dynamic than yours. Work on that and get back to me when you feel that you can troll more effectively. <

Again, that you feel one who points out errors in your posts, whether spelling or non-factuals, is a personal attack or insult against you, is a perfect illustration of only one of the plethora of problems that ails you greatly and continues to hold you down.

One should explain to our challenged friend that looking to others to explain self-contradictions isn't conducive, especially when one feels the need to post a reference to something they obviously do not agree with, practice, nor comprehend. It's hypocrisy at it's finest.

He got me for $57.78.For junk hard drive.
His name is Mark and he is an outrite crook.He sold me a hard drive that don't work at all on Ebay.Now he says they are sold as is.He would not give me a new one or my money back.He says send it to manufacturer for replacement.Now he hides from emails ,his phone is disconnected.and his address is a fake.
I have filed complaints with Ebay and Paypal.
What I do know is payment was sent to:

Your having the same problems I am - Ebay is not responsive to people who have been burnt. Leaving "negative feedback" doesn't get your money back, and only results in the guy leaving YOU negative feedback in return.

I'm looking for the true name and address for a guy called Coal-76 without any luck whatsoever.

Nice idea, but those who wire things up and are clueless or in a hurry, usually do have the item off right out of the box and when they wire it up ass backwards then without taking a moment to LOOK at their work, they then turn the unit on to watch the fireworks and smell the resulting smoke.

It doesn't take a rocket scientist to hook up a CB, but it doesn't hurt to take an extra minute or two to make sure your wiring is correct. As for the diode, I've seen many of them blown and not disturb other parts. On the other hand, I've seen sets completely fried too. So you never can tell how bad the damage will be until it is done and assessed.

I see a few rants about radios with Surface Mount Technology PC Boards being bad news.

Well, for the most part... a well done SMT board should hold up as well if not better than conventional non smt circuits. The size reduction and LSI chips give you many more features... a better dollar value. Just look at small HF Radios like the Icom 706mkIIg as an example.

Some wanna be techs don't like them because they don't know how to handle the parts. Swap your Weller Iron for a Hot Gas Bonder and get on with your life.

I doubt we'll be going back to the good old days on any large production run.

Most of the ads on ebay after the description of the article will say SOLD AS IS. That means that if it does not work, too bad.
Buy from people that have a good rep on the swap pages, and stop buying those great deals that are sold as is.
You buy something from me and it does not look or work like I said it did, you get your money back. That is the way everyone should trade. Count yourself lucky. That lesson only cost you $57.00. My lesson cost me $ 650.00

That is true; unfortunately, eBay is nothing more than a middleman. I have gotten some good deals over the years, but lately.....you know what I mean! It looks like most of the good stuff has already changed hands, so there is quite a bit of junk up there right now. I love that "as is" disclaimer; when you see that, it is a good idea to put on your gym shoes and run, don't walk away. As far as this group, I only got burned once. A fellow sold me an AOR3030 that had no audio on the SSB/Sync modes. When I contacted him, he told me that he didn't know there was a problem, because he didn't use those modes. He did offer to send me a partial refund, but I was concerned that maybe his check would have been as good as his radio. Fortunately, it was an easy fix; the 4066 analog switch that does the audio routing was just blown.
The point is, the folks on this NG seem honest.

Pete

&rd=1
.Sold as:
maxtor diamond max plus 60 ultra ata 100 40 GB. 7200 rpm. Drive has been checked out and returned to factory specs. works GREAT. drive is still under warenty.
Also called Maxtor and is not warranteed through them.Has to go to original seller as they have the warranty, and need original receipt.So I got screwed.

Dave, I do not advocate breaking the law. I'm just beginning to wonder about some things. I've been on 10 meters and heard one PSK signal, a number of CW signals (including one beacon), a number of SSB signals, one FM signal and guess what? I haven't heard any of the truckers that everyone swears is around. I'm not saying it doesn't exist, I am just beginning to wonder exactly what gives here. With all of the flame-baiting, I can't put too much faith in what is said around here; I'd rather go check it out myself. I'm still coming up empty-handed. Maybe when all of the anti-keyclowns swore all the CBers were intruding on 10 meters, they meant 12 meters? I can also read the reports. Seems most of the problems in enforcement are amateurs running modified rigs on 11. Or am I missing something? I'm open to suggestions as to what I am missing ..... :)

highlight hypocrisy and that has never set well with you self-styled

I feel badly for you guys, but the real lesson here is don't buy anything off Ebay!

If you bought anything from a reputable dealer and got taken like this,
you would have their butts in a sling.

And yet in pursuit of the "deal", we buy stuff off total strangers, who after they rip us off, we can leave negative feedback as a recourse?

I don't think I trust e-bay too much. For what it is worth, you might try http://www.computergeeks.com and look over their stuff. I bought a 733 MHz PC a year and a half ago - 256 MB ram, 20 GB hard drive, 40 X cd rom - and it set me back $265.00. I see you can get a 30 GB hard drive from them for what you paid. Sure am sorry to hear about your bad experience with e-bay, but I've done business with computergeeks and they stand by what they sell.

Free advice to help you make more money on the fuses. Cut a piece of number 12 wire to the aproximate length of the fuse. Remove shielding from the entire length of the wire. Solder one end of the wire to one end of the fuse, then solder the other end of the wire to the other end of the fuse. POOF working fuse, worth much more money than a blown one.

Sometimes called a ham radio slow blow

Its a diathermy machine. I used to have an electronics shop 2 blocks from a clinic. Very familiar with it. Normally you would here it around channel 35 but they can be on other frequencies too.Also this may be an image so check 35 and see if it is there too.

Thanks. That's a start because the radio seems to be deaf. We figured out enough of the keypad so he could test it. If it wasn't for my scanner, he would not have heard the repeater.

I've been through that. The only problem with there making them NARU, is that the just get a new e-mail and sign in as a new user and start over undetected until the screw over a few more people.. It is my belief that probably 90% of ebay users are honest people but the other 10% have soured me on Ebay. I only go there as one source to find out what I should be paying for used equipment. Once I find several prices I average them out and set that as my limit at dealers. Still get burned on a price once in a while but at least I've got a working product for the money I spent. No method is fool proof I guess.

I would bet that E-Bay has language somewhere, that absolves them of any responsibility for "bad deals", by the people who represent themselves.
A sort of "Use at your own risk" clause.

If you mean that SSB audio is "warbly" or sounds like you're underwater, that is a VERY common problem. Usually this is the result of the 8V regulator going bad, and allowing the regulated voltage to rise to around 11V. With the loss of regulation, this voltage is now prone to change due to the varying load of transmit modulation. This results in small changes in VCO frequency (What is commonly refered to as "FM'ing").
Replace the 8V regulator, and your problem should go away.

Other SSB distortions could be the fault of a poor alignment by a "screwdriver tech". If the bias is improperly set, it may cause a "raspy" sound.

Your previous statement pretty much establishes your thoughts on that one.

Poor timing? I don't have the world's greatest base station anymore. Regardless, when the skip was rolling heavy, I heard a ton of "CB-type" activity on the lower part of 10. Now I'm not ruling out intermod, or some other hetrodyning affects as the culprit for some of it. But there was enough evidence, to convince me. Now, that the skip has waned to some degree, I don't hear the same intruders. Maybe that's why you haven't either. When the skip was rolling, I also heard a ton of legal activity, including CW all across the lower portion, a ton of SSB in the "novice" voice portion, and more than a few FM repeaters in and around 29.600.

I'm sure they're there as well, but they're also on 10. But unless you live near a major metro area, you probably won't hear them unless the skip is hot.

The people being cited, are hams illegally running on the freeband. But unless you believe that these hams represent the majority of the people on the freeband, this is only a drop in the bucket and, as I have stated previously, sends a very bad message, that people without a license, who spend the majority of their time on the freeband are relatively safe, while licensed hams, who indiscretely stray onto the freeband are at a much greater risk of getting any attention from the FCC.

That's the truth. As much as any new technology forces changes in the way we do things, this is no different. The way I see it, you either get on board and make the necessary changes, or you stand in the middle on the technology highway, and get run over by it.

I can now understand why so many old-timers seemed to be such stick in the muds, when it came to solid state circuits, back when I was first learning this stuff. Many clung to tubes, and hand wired circuits, and swore that PC boards, integrated circuits, and digital logic, were too much of a pain, to deal with.
I'm now in the same situtation. But I have to either adapt, or face unemployment.....

Not at all,,,to those with no communication deficit, it conveys his

>Now, that the skip has waned to some degree, I don't hear the same intruders. Maybe that's why you haven't either. When the skip was rolling, I also heard a ton of legal activity,<

Which is why the crybabies were told their crying and agitating here of cbers and freebanders was only for trolling and personal incapacitation...now, once again, the lowly cber has told you that after the skip dies down, you wold have nothing to cry about..but we see, you manage to attack Jim and accuse him of supporting illegal behavior for TELLING THE TRUTH! Truth has always been your enemy, Dave, but now you telegaph it and prove it for the world. Always comes down to your personal feelings which you have a difficult time separating from right and wrong..in fact, you have operated so long on these screwed up principles, your view is permantently tainted.

You talk more shit than an auctioneer. You never ever have a problem with Geogre and each and every one of his posts are inflammatory to everyone he communicated with. General talking out your ass about "flamebaits" and making blanket statements about others except for the actual source of mayhem has always showed what a hypocrite you are. That you try to sell the group a bag of goods that you somehow are "concerned" about such things is a lie, but funny nonetheless,,,especially after you:

A) Ignored Geogre's initial inflamatory comment, and the rest of his "flamebaits", but jump on everyone else when YOU feel it is inflammatory.

B) Accused Jim of supporting illegal behavior because he called Geogre on his erratic and trolling behavior

C) Didn't see Geogre's initial post as 'Flamebait", but countered with a huge lie of your own against another hammie who DID recognize it, all for your personal agenda.

Now there's something I can agree with.
I'd rather go check it out myself.

>Same here, and I did, and I heard what Jerry O and others have claimed as well.

There are no "others". It was Jerry, with an isolated incident or two, and then you and the other two lids concsistently saying it was of epidemic proportions, when it was pointed out it wasn't. As you now see, the truth has set us free, and you are stuck trying to convince us that what we didn't hear, really was there,,,,the same principle you fail with when attempting to tell us to believe what you tell us, not what we see.

Gee,,,when did that "message" change? When you "stopped" freebanding, dave?
This secret "message" you feel is being sent is not new, and has been held by the rest of the natural radio world forever. Now that you are managing to comprehend what the rest of the world knew for quite some time, it doesn't seem to sit well with you. That;s not our fault, Stop attacking the players, as it illustrates your fondness for trolling and flamebaiting, and besides, WE did not write the rules. Your problem, as usual, is with the lawmakers, and yourself. Slamming those who do what you did (except to a MUCH lesser degree) on a regular basis is why you are a hypocrite. Slamming another hammie for merely telling the truth, is why you are a lid.

Hello!

Has anybody tried to use GMRS 5 watt units in Canada? If I use it occasionaly in a provincial park during my canoe trip, what are chances government ppl will intercept my communication and start looking for me and my unit? What are consequences if they find the unit attached to my belt? How high the fine will be? Are such units prohibited from bringing to Canada?

Sincerely,

Slava

I have information that you cannot use:
462.650
467.650
462.700
467.700

These frequencies are used throughout Canada.

Check your documentation to see what channels to avoid.

Something to remember. In Canada the government won't do anything unless they get a complaint and even then they still have a hard time moving on anything. I use to work for a Cable Co. and every time somebody's cable would get messed up they, (IC) would come out a month later and bang on the cable poll with a sledge hammer and say that fixed it. It took over 2 weeks for them to catch a guy that was jamming the Vancouver City police continually. Burnaby Radio Communications was busted for selling modified Ham gear and all they got was a $500.00 fine and are still in business doing the same thing. So what is the worry. Just use it.
If you are really scared you can contact Industry Canada on their web-site at http://www.ic.gc.ca/ .

The problem I had with the reg's are they operate Illegally, they are also hypocrites big time. They are so off base on who is who or who did what It is a crying shame. See when you know who does what or who did what and watch as you assholes run around like chikens with thier heads cut off blaming every tom dick and harry, quite the comical scene.

is understood with the deficit that ails you.

What a troubled person you are......

Yes you know all about being troubled .

You talk more shit than an auctioneer. You never ever have a problem with Geogre and each and every one of his posts are inflammatory to everyone he communicated with. General talking out your ass about "flamebaits" and making blanket statements about others except for the actual source of mayhem has always showed what a hypocrite you are. That you try to sell the group a bag of goods that you somehow are "concerned" about such things is a lie, but funny nonetheless,,,especially after you:

A) Ignored Geogre's initial inflamatory comment, and the rest of his "flamebaits", but jump on everyone else when YOU feel it is inflammatory.

B) Accused Jim of supporting illegal behavior because he called Geogre on his erratic and trolling behavior

C) Didn't see Geogre's initial post as 'Flamebait", but countered with a huge lie of your own against another hammie who DID recognize it, all for your personal agenda.

To Whom It May Concern:
As far as we know Leland Scott has done nothing except to occasionally speak out in disapproval of illegal CB operation in this public forum. He is not now, and has not ever partipated in organized Anti-KeyClown or Anti-Twistedhed actions. To the best of our knowledge, he has posted nothing under any screen name except his own. We who opose Twistedhed respect Leland for his views and wish to go on record as stating that he has no ties to us or any other AntiKeyclown personnel. We are soley responsible for all tweaking, baiting, and embarassing of Twistedhed. Mr. Twistedhed has, as usual, succumbed to his own half-baked and deluded theories about who is doing what to whom. He has barked up many trees, all of them wrong. It has been a pitiable, laughable spectacle, and one that we have enjoyed immensely. But the time has come for Twisted to apologize to Leland Scott. Following this, he must spare himself further shame and embarassment and leave this newsgroup for good.

Sincerely,

You feel I am a hypocrite, explain yourself,

(This quote by you says it all. " ....y'all need to chill and get lives, stop worrying about others so much."
Perhaps you should take your own advise)

You feel I somehow worry about others? LOL...you are largely mistaken, as usual.
IF you can keep the communication deficit to a minimum.

(A lack of understanding on your part doesn't constitute a deficit on mine.)

It's not me and the rest of the group, Geogre, it's YOU and your one or two lid pals that fail to see things the way they are.

(By who's defenition are these" fail to see things the way they are")

By everyone's definition that you have ever had cross words with on this group....the "majority" of regular posters,,the ones you haven't had a problem with, again, are the lids.

What you really mean is, I should ignore and allow you and your other lids to espouse untruths and intimidate others to the point of them being afraid to post..

(What are the untruths)

I just pointed one out,,,Hall claiming Jim was encouraging illegal behavior was an untruth.

(that you admittedly operate ILLEGALLY?)

I gave you an example. Need another? The list is endless.....that I readily admit to freebanding upsets and agitates you greatly. I have never hid that about myself. Nothing hypocritical about that position.

You will note, I have never taken issue with anyone's radio behavior or net behavior that hasn't initiated a personal pissing contest with me. Your scouring of google, in all your gloried impotence, and redundant begging and whining that you want nothing more than for me to leave the group, is testament to your failure in all you do and say...as Dick said, you are insane, but I don't mind,,I have been accused of such capacitive holdings myself.

(I can understand why, if brains were dynamite you couldn't blow your own nose.)

The need for pacifying your own gutted ego is soothed only by crippled attempts of insult....

which is why you cry about wanting me gone.

(So you say)

Actually, several have said it. Ignoring others touching upon your obsession is denial..several have pointed out your irrational and all-consuming overt unhealthy concern for something you have no control over,,,and never will.

You have had problems with with every reg in here, with the exception of N8, Hall, Sparky, and Lelnad..

(The problem I had with the reg's are they operate Illegally,)

You have no way of knowing so. What you actually are taking issue with is their choice of subject matter in this ng. You feel the speech itself, IE: talking about amps and freebanding in this ng should be prohibited and/or illegal. That makes you an advocate of censorship and fascism.

(they are also hypocrites big time. They are so off base on who is who or who did what It is a crying shame.)

If they are hypocrites, merely expose them with something of substance, as crying about their personal life, insulting them with sexual remarks, and making generallybroad, untrue blanket statements does nothing for you.
Can you manage to do that, George? Can you actually manage to hold a civil tone and conersation with one who holds an opposing viewpoint to your own? Can you do that sans insult, or do you not possess that type self-control due to a deficit in communcating ability?

(See when you know who does what or who did what and watch as you assholes run around like chikens with thier heads cut off blaming every tom dick and harry, quite the comical scene.)

What is comical, is that YOU are continually submerged in the river of flowing ignorance,,perhaps if your myopic views permitted you to see the forest through the trees, you wouldn't have fell in such turbulent, muddy waters that have you confused and out of your element. The mere facts are that no one is concerned with idenitity here, as cb has always been anonymous, save the licensing years, and you and Lelnad have exhibited raging hemorrhages over the refusal of us to acknowledge such. Deal with it, get over yourself, You will never make identity an issue among cb or this ng. Your failure to see it as the majority do has long been your downfall. To take the unpopular view is never a problem, but to do so with an underhanded and self-stated agenda comprised of subterfuge and unwarranted attacks other than your personal disagreement, is not conducive to any party whatsoever, and in fact, actually destroys any "cause" you feel you are "battling" for.

the lids,,,the angry hammies in this group,,,and you are the only one left (from the lid crowd) that hasn't had his ISP ripped from beneath him for conduct unbecoming and no self-control,,of course, you have your AOL account for that type stuff....

(If you think I have an AOL account)

I do think that. So what? Why does that upset you? Why does what another think btoher you to the point of defending your actions?

(and If you think I am doing something so dastardly then by all means please TOS away, your false accusations are very humorous, I think I asked and begged for you maroons to do this before, i know I don't have an aol account but keep begging I love to see you make a fool of yourself.)

As was so expertly pointed out by one of your lid pals, there is no way for you to prove it, so you, my internet psycho friend, just have to live with the fact that others believe something you don't agree with.....the majority of posters present, have at one time, been on the receiving end of your unprovoked and unwarranted venom. The "fool" you see, is the man in the mirror.

typically 4 pins on the back of the cart.
then bottom 2 r earth (L+R) look for colours around pin base(s) or single dot (red or white) on stylus

that will denote 1 channel red=right white = left

Certainly, but you'll need to lengthen the elements. The spacing will probably be OK, although maybe not quite optimal.

Hello,

Does anyone know the input impedance of the microphone input on Uniden PC68XL? Also, is the microphone included with the radio powered? What is the typical signal level/offset going into the CB.

Are those specs pretty much standard for all Uniden models? What about other major CB brands, for example, are the microphone input specs similar for other radios.

Thanks!

To learn the technical TRUTH about CB Radio without all the hype from people who are just plain ignorant, check out the following books from CBC International. They're selling right now at a big discounts on our EBAY & AMAZON stores too.

Check it out! Go to this link:

http://cgi6.ebay.com/aw-cgi/eBayISAPI.dll?ViewSellersOtherItems&userid=lou@cbcintl.com&completed=0&sort=3&since=-1&include=0&page=1&rows=25

To see exactly what these books look like, plus all the specific, chapter-by-chapter details, see our Web at:

Some of the books included are:

BOOK #1: THE "SCREWDRIVER EXPERT'S" GUIDE To Peaking Out & Repairing CB Radios. List $25. The most popular "big dummy's" guide ever published on do-it-yourself CB repairs & modifications. Covers peaking of receivers, transmitters, modulation, mike problems, antenna & SWR problems, detailed frequency modifications for both crystal & PLL radios. Loaded with charts, illustrations, and specific instructions for most brands including the new export models. This latest edition also covers slider and broadbanding tricks, FM conversions, and much more!

BOOK #2: THE CB PLL DATA BOOK. List $20. The only complete reference source on CB PLL synthesizer circuits ever published! Detailed PLL theory explained in layman's terms. How they work, and how to modify them for many more channels. Includes specific PLL block mixing diagrams, truth charts, & IC pin function diagrams for nearly every PLL chip ever used. Covers all the most popular U.S. & export chassis, with specific listings of all models using the chip.

BOOK #3: UNDERSTANDING & REPAIRING CB RADIOS. List $42. Giant 370-page technical book for the professional repairman. Picks up where the "SCREWDRIVER EXPERT'S" GUIDE leaves off. Includes circuit descriptions & troubleshooting guide for 23- & 40-Ch., crystal & PLL, solid-state & tube, AM, FM, SSB, CW, American & export models. Covers test equipment (& where to find it), transistor basics, synthesizers, receivers, transmitters, power supplies, T/R switching, antennas, interference, parts & accessory sources. Over 350 illustrations including schematics, charts, and photos. Huge subject index also lets you look up repairs by symptoms. This is "must" reading for any serious CB technician!

Eh?
You do need to have a SWR meter.

> and would like to build a medium performance wire dipole... > what can I expect as in transmission range with this kind of > antenna...

As with any system, it will depend upon your location, things such as height, nearby hills, etc.
However, if you use a reasonable thickness of wire, you should find it performs quite well for something so cheap. Not as good as some antennas, but then the really good ones cost much more.

You can also get ready made dipoles, made from tubing, which bolt to the wall and work quite well.

> and is it big??

About 18 feet in total - 9 foot up and 9 foot down from the connection point.
They can be mounted horizontally, but this would not work so well for you.

> I live in a flat...so mounting will be a problem...what do you > suggest??

If and how you would use this will depend upon how high up you are, how many floors in total, is there a garden, are there restrictions imposed on residents that may affect antennas, etc.

If it is a small block of flats, you may be able to dangle it from under the gutter. If larger, and you can get to the outside wall above your level, you may be able to pin it to the wall.
A few years back, I knew someone in a flat with access to the loft, and another who could get to the roof and so had a big antenna on the roof of the block - at the highest part of town.

With ready made antennas, there were some made to mount from a balcony or window in flats. I am not sure if anyone stocks this type now, but there are a few dealers on the Net where you may be able to find something for your situation.

> and can you provide me with construction > details to do it...

It will depend upon the situation. With the combined brain power of the residents of this group and the details of your situation, something could be worked out. You may also get more suggestions from the UK group - "uk.rec.radio.cb".

It may work out easier to fit up a ready made antenna but, without knowing your details, we could only guess and probably come up against problems linked with your location.

> btw...my CB only manages 4W output power max...is that > small??

That is the standard power output (and maximum allowed by law) for UK CBs. Over the years, there have been three different types of CB:

934MHz - Now illegal to use, but had 8Watt FM output.
27.601 to 27.991MHz - Still in use, 4Watt FM output. The UK Government plan to remove this service.
26.965 to 27.405MHz - European standard 4Watt FM. Still in use, will continue after the old band is removed.

Recent sets had both 27MHz bands built in to the one set.

The exact length of an antenna will depend upon which of the 27MHz systems you have. It would be tuned to the centre of the frequencies you are using. This could be either one of the two, or set up to cover both for the "dual band" type.

Regards,

Peter.

Check the bias on the driver and output stages. If the bias is low, it can sound anything from "gravelly" to totally disgusting.

Check that everything is set up correctly. As someone already said, make sure that there are not parts clipped or removed in an attempt to get more from the radio than it can safely do.

Other than that, it is also possible for RF feedback to cause distorted SSB audio. If the RF gets back into the radio, it can cause all sorts of problems with SSB audio.
I have also known a faulty output or drive transistor cause poor SSB audio problems, although not that often.

Regards,

Peter.

I have also seen plenty each way.
Where it is switched on at the time and damage is done, each UK set usually goes the same way every time. For example, the Amstrad sets would pop the audio IC, the discriminator and the LED meter IC.
Regulators inside the sets will usually protect everything beyond them, although I have seen a Lincoln where the reg ICs did not protect anything but themselves. That one was a mess.

Strange how women will admit their mistake, but men will often make up all kinds of stories about how it went faulty.

Sometimes, it can help knowing equivalent part numbers so that you can still obtain rare parts or get parts cheaper from a different manufacturer. Some parts can be 1/3 of the price or less if you get another manufacturers part and, with UK radios, that can make the difference between it being repairable or uneconomic.

Regards,

Peter.

...yawn... so when are you going to demonstrate your intelligence and meet me on 7.63 kHz? What? Maybe you will say that you can't find that freq on your pirate rig, to which I say, "duh". Well, if you plan on screwing the federal government, what better way than to screw them than with their own rules? Uh, ok, I understand -- that would violate your ethical standards -- to ignore any law that doesn't meet the Twistedhed Standards of Natural Law. But doesn't that pretty much rule out every single law ever written? After all, you haven't supported one single law in this newsgroup unless it involved murder, drugs or freebanding. Ever consider trying to -change- the law instead of whining about it all the time? Or are you trying to install yourself as dictator of the US? Either way, LOL, keep dreaming, Twist!!!

In the first place, if you would get some sleep instead of worrying about all you can not control, you wouldn't be yawning all through your life. In the second place, only ignorant, mildly retarded lids not unlike yourself feel talking on a hammie frequency is somehow linked to intelligence.

>What?

Communication breakdown for Lelnad...LOL.

LOL..you've were reduced and rendered to saying "duh" long ago..it has nothing to do with your begging me to intrude on hammie bands.

Your mild retardation is manifesting.
Only lids like yourself are concerned with ruining the hammie bands and "screwing" any type entity.

Dunno, but you appear to be quite adept at sharing your anger for them.

If you understood, grasped, or comprehended anything, you would not be reduced to the loser you have become nor relegated to posting as you must. I do enjoy the professing of your love for me in intermittent howls of loyalty.

>But doesn't that pretty much rule out every

Not at all,,your mild retardation and communication defciti has you twisted beyond belief. That I selectively disregard the DX rule and freeband on eleven meter, coupled with your flawed interpretation of such as complete anarchy, does nothing but illustrate your deficit and mild retardation,,,,not even a remote penchant for comprehension have you.

>After all, you haven't

Really? And how many laws can you name "in this ng"? LOL,,,,one needs only look to your long line of lost ISP's for a glimpse of who doesn't "support one single law in this ng"..lol..learn what it is you are trying to convey so you are are clear in the future and don't come off as the schizophrenic I turned you into.

I'd rather change you, as I have successfully managed, as I have never whined or complained about the law..matter of fact,,I am on record several times saying that I like the law the way it is,,,it keeps pansies like you up in arms and completely impotent.

Webtv is a mere toy with nowhere near the capacity you big bad guys have access to with your big scary machines and modems...when one requests another to post certain information, it is not spam. Spam is unsolicited, sort of like when one adds a derogatory comment (unsolicited), but with an agenda to profit.....the issue is,,,it's not spam, it was requested. A reason why is not needed.

I'd like to swap a mint roll of 2002 Silver Eagles (20 coins) for a decent CB base unit in factory condition.

Doesn't have to be state of the art -- just a reliable radio I can plug-in at home with good power and loved by its former owner.

I don't mind circuitry alterations if they were done properly, but please don't conceal the fact.

Figure on a $160 value which can be negotiated, but don't offer any junk please. We do our own shipping.

Drop me a line. What have you got?

It's only worth five bucks plus shipping.

I got a Uniden PRO340XL for free. Doesn't mean I use it.
I did hook it up to a real antenna and got my once yearly radio check. <G>

Now it collects dust...

The PC-122 was the greatest CB radio ever built!

What he meant to say was, there are hords of uninformed users on Usnet who don't know any better, and they are even the majority (if not nearly the total) of users in some newsgroups.

See what happens when you let just _anybody_ have access!

(Where "Anybody" is defined as whatever recognizable group showed up immediately following the group you were part of... ;-)

I remember people saying that The Well was the death of Usenet, and then it was people from The Well saying "It's September, again" or "What do you expect from an .edu domain." Then it was the institutional folks who didn't like the unwashed masses that PSI and UUnet allowed.

Of course when AOL hit (never mind WebTV), lets face it, this wasn't a very funny joke anymore... But we have to admit the Internet (never mind Usenet) wouldn't be what it is if every other grandmother in the country wasn't connected.

But damned, the least they could do is learn a little style.

I'm curious as well. I am aware of the "lowfer" guys who run in the 170 Khz area. But I've never heard of any "Ham-type" or experimenter activity under 10 Khz. Heck, you're in the frequency range or straight sound there.....

The FCC regulates radio above 9 KHz. Anything below is RF wilderness, except for submarines which use freqs even lower. There are a few nuts like me that play around with this stuff. The advantage is that no special radio equipment is needed beyond the antenna, just some audio equipment and a rack full of equalizers (parametric equalizers work best). Illegals might get a kick out of it, too, since there are no power limitations. My transmitter starts with a key (hand or computer) that keys a xtal audio oscillator (RF crystals passed through a divider chain), then off to my Peavey 1.3K (bridge mode for 2kW), and sent to an arc-welder transformer to drop the impedance low enough for the antenna, which is basically a shorted 100' section of hardline laying out on the ground. I have absolutely no idea what the antenna efficiency is, but no doubt it's low. Regardless, I made my first contact to another "bottom-scraper" in Seattle, 300 miles away and right through the Cascades -- and I was only running about 100 watts! As for the receiver, the biggest problem has been front-end overload from the noise. I'm hoping to solve that problem (and eliminate the arc-welder transformer) by using a negative impedance converter to tune the antenna.

Sound like fun?

The FCC regulates radio above 9 KHz. Anything below is RF wilderness, except for submarines which use freqs even lower. There are a few nuts like me that play around with this stuff. The advantage is that no special radio equipment is needed beyond the antenna, just some audio equipment and a rack full of equalizers (parametric equalizers work best). Illegals might get a kick out of it, too, since there are no power limitations. My transmitter starts with a key (hand or computer) that keys a xtal audio oscillator (RF crystals passed through a divider chain), then off to my Peavey 1.3K (bridge mode for 2kW), and sent to an arc-welder transformer to drop the impedance low enough for the antenna, which is basically a shorted 100' section of hardline laying out on the ground. I have absolutely no idea what the antenna efficiency is, but no doubt it's low. Regardless, I made my first contact to another "bottom-scraper" in Seattle, 300 miles away and right through the Cascades -- and I was only running about 100 watts! As for the receiver, the biggest problem has been front-end overload from the noise. I'm hoping to solve that problem (and eliminate the arc-welder transformer) by using a negative impedance converter to tune the antenna.
Sound like fun?

Only to you, as you demonstrate a repeat fondness for "playing" with yourself. The rest of us DX nuts prefer the company of real

There are many newbies and fence-sitters (according to YOU, Lelnad and Hall) and they can benefit from this information. Methinks the ones who protest the loudest concerning Lou are insanely jealous of his long standing success in the world we play in. I thought this was funny. I hope you all do too.

Robin Williams Peace Plan:
Leave it to Robin Williams to come up with the perfect plan... what we need now is for our UN Ambassador to stand up and repeat this message.

I see a lot of people yelling for peace but I have not heard of a plan for peace. So, here's one plan:

1) The US will apologize to the world for our "interference" in their affairs, past & present. We will promise never to "interfere" again.

2) We will withdraw our troops from all over the world, starting with Germany, South Korea and the Philippines. They don't want us there. We would station troops at our borders. No more sneaking through holes in the fence.

3) All illegal aliens have 90 days to get their affairs together and leave. We'll give them a free trip home. After 90 days the remainder will be gathered up and deported immediately, regardless of who or where they are. France would welcome them.

4) All future visitors will be thoroughly checked and limited to 90 day visits unless given a special permit. No one from a terrorist nation would be allowed in. If you don't like it there, change it yourself. Don't hide here. Asylum would not ever be available to anyone. We don't need any more cab drivers.

5) No "students" over age 21. The older ones are the bombers. If they don't attend classes, they get a "D" and it's back home, baby.

6) The US will make a strong effort to become self sufficient energy wise. This will include developing non polluting sources of energy but will require a temporary drilling of oil in the Alaskan wilderness. The caribou will have to cope for a while.

7) Offer Saudi Arabia and other oil producing countries $10 a barrel for their oil. If they don't like it, we go someplace else.

8) If there is a famine or other natural catastrophe in the world, we will not "interfere". They can pray to Allah or whomever, for seeds, rain, cement or whatever they need. Besides, most of what we give them gets "lost" or is taken by their army. The people who need it most get very little, anyway.

9) Ship the UN Headquarters to an island some place. We don't need the spies and fair weather friends here. Besides, it would make a good homeless shelter or lockup for illegal aliens.

10) Use the buildings as replacement for the twin towers.

11) All Americans must go to charm and beauty school. That way, no one can call us "Ugly Americans" any longer.

12) "The Statue of Liberty no longer saying 'Give me your poor, your tired, your huddled masses.'She's got a baseball bat and she's yelling, 'You want a piece of me!?'"

Oh my oh my, I can see it now, a fleet of bald tire wrecks rolling all over the nation's highways and byways with large cardboard signs duck taped on the side reading "Junior FCC auxiliary trucker Radio Patrol." All intent on hunting outlaw truckers. Said vehicles will have a minimum of eight antennas mounted and a minimum of four obese pencil pocket coke bottle lens white male geeks riding in each vehicle. Said geeks will display hats with their call signs emblazoned on them, call sign badges, a minimum of fifteen "ARRL member" stickers glued all over the windows of the vehicles. Uniform for said geeks will consist of food stained shirts and filthy trousers.
Additionally, said geeks will not be required to practice bodily hygiene for a minimum of one week before leaving on auxiliary patrol duties, including having not shaved for two weeks. Word circulating among truckers is the greatest countermeasure to the "geek patrols" is to have an attractive young girl clad in a string bikini riding in one's truck cab. Upon spotting the geek radio patrol, said young woman will display her wears at the geeks. The geeks, not ever having experienced the full attention of a beautiful young woman before , will consequently lose control of their vehicle and begin salivating profusely.

Any of you remember the original Smokey 23 channel mobile cb from the 70's..?

We used to buy them from the local Rexall Pharmacy Store for $39.95

If you have one of these old animals around, I've got a friend looking for one. He'd be willing to buy or trade for it. He wants his original "smoking station".

Drop me a reply from the http://sonic.ucdavis.edu web server Email Icon if you have one available.

Then stand back as we put that unit back on the air... :-) Hope it doesn't clash with my trusty radio shaft trc-24.

cheers

FCC Seeks Assistance in Curbing Unlicensed 10-Meter Incursions

NEWINGTON, CT, May 1, 2003--The FCC has requested the assistance of the ARRL Amateur Auxiliary/Official Observers in monitoring for illegal operation on the 10-meter amateur band. The request came in an April 28 letter from FCC Special Counsel Riley Hollingsworth, who says incursions on the band by apparently unlicensed operators continue to be a major enforcement headache.

The FCC regulates radio above 9 KHz. Anything below is RF wilderness, except for submarines which use freqs even lower. There are a few nuts like me that play around with this stuff. The advantage is that no special radio equipment is needed beyond the antenna, just some audio equipment and a rack full of equalizers (parametric equalizers work best). Illegals might get a kick out of it, too, since there are no power limitations. My transmitter starts with a key (hand or computer)
that keys a xtal audio oscillator (RF crystals passed through a divider chain), then off to my Peavey 1.3K (bridge mode for 2kW), and sent to an arc-welder transformer to drop the impedance low enough for the antenna, which is basically a shorted 100' section of hardline laying out on the ground. I have absolutely no idea what the antenna efficiency is, but no
"bottom-scraper" in Seattle, 300 miles away and right through the Cascades -- and I was only running about 100 watts! As for the receiver, the biggest problem has been front-end overload from the noise. I'm hoping to solve that problem (and eliminate the arc-welder transformer)

Then perhaps you should tell not "Gilliland" the nocode to cease his personal affrontings. Equating one's level of intellect with their ability to play on the lower frequencies is almost pathetic as Gilliland's claim that "RF pirates" affect his daily work,,,,.....even you of intentional dyslexia, a novel but ineffective approach at concealing mild retardation and communication deficits, can comprehend the comical nature of such a situation and absurd statement.
Following the natural and correct order of such, there would no longer be "nonsense" or reason for your convulsions, other than personal self-hatred and poor self-esteem.
Now, prior to you asking, does this merit repeating at the expense of your interpretive skills?

Lotsa luck, but I don't think so...

When you signed up to use eBay you agreed to the terms and conditions of use, and that is an enforcable contract. You can sue them all you like, and you can drag them into court, but you'd best be aware that they will come with that contract as evidence and they will counter sue you to pay for the expense of demonstrating that you had agreed to those terms.

I think that falls into you'll pay through the nose if you push it.

Ahh but if you sue them for failure to give up the name and address of the perp, then their failure to do so can be considered aiding and abetting a criminal enterprise which, I think, falls within the R.I.C.O. statutes.

Hey, that's great!! There should be zero tolerance for intruding on hammie bands by unlicensed individuals....and your report is old news.
The hammies have ben patrolling ten for some time,,,even the agreement is old news..but I guess news is slow over at the dog and pony show so you need remind us here that the FCC does not condone unlicensed broadcasts on hammie bands...s'all good.
Nevertheless, the noise coming from the hammies that get off on this sort of thing, really have no record of success when the numbers are examined...what do they have...a token bust here or there?

Ironic that the majority getting popped for unlicensed operation in the ten area are not your freebanders, but truckers and others that really have no bearing on this group as you so desperately are in need of mis-conveying, for whatever twisted reason of your own. Add to this the number of hammies getting popped for ANYTHING greatly outumbers the cbers, and one can see why you are such an angry, cynical old lid. Your biases and prejudices are set in stone and your tolerance level for anyone elses experiences or point of views and opinions, when differing from your own, are null.

The gist is, it's not the problem you have always tried to imply it was. Your type are being placated. and you don't even realize it, or you do, and it pisses you off to no end. Think about what's more damaging to hammie radio,,the sheerless numbers of intruders on ten meters or the inability of certain hammies to get along with anyone, especially their own kind.....you never did like the answer, but hammies, are, and always have been, their own worse enemies. The enlightened and intellectual hammies recognize this and refuse to associate with the lid vermin,,,hence, you,,er,,,"they" end up here in rec.cadio.cb,,,,,posting bullshit about hammie bands that applies to not one of us.

But that works both ways if Ebay is on the up-and-up legally. Their shielding the identity/location of the perps makes any claim of caveat emptor meaningless because they are aiding and abetting the perps in their criminal enterprise by shielding them. Multiple incidents of this goes to show a "continuing series of behaviors giving rise to claim of aiding and abetting said criminal behaviors."

Scott [scott_unit_69@yahoo.bomb] asks : Can it be made for 856 to 861 MHz trunked radio system?

Only if you calculate element lengths at your freqs of interest and lengthen existing antenna elements for freqs you want to hear else might be too degraded for optimum reception.

THE tipsy VS. georgina,lenad
As an example, let’s examine the akc Murder Case.
It’s not enough for a witness, georgina, to say, “I saw tipsy drop a two-ton safe on lenad from 20 stories.” The prosecution must also establish that georgina can indeed identify tipsy, that georgina was in fact there to see tipsy drop the safe, that it was the same safe that landed on lenad, and that the tipsy whom georgina saw was the same tipsy who is on trial.
If on the other hand, the prosecution can demonstrate that tipsy had ill feelings toward lenad, that tipsy had a key to the room where the safe was stored, that it was certain that tipsy was not somewhere else and that it was tipsy’s fingerprints on the safe embedded in the sidewalk with lenad underneath, then the prosecution doesn’t really need georgina’s testimony at all.
(In the world of the akc, of course, it goes without saying that tipsy is strong enough to lift a two-ton safe up and over a windowsill.)
Speaking in general, not of tipsy in particular — it is only fair to mention that he is not responsible for dreaming up the akc analogy

Oh my oh my, I can see it now, a fleet of bald tire wrecks rolling all over the nation's highways and byways with large cardboard signs duck taped on the side reading "Junior FCC auxiliary trucker Radio Patrol." All intent on hunting outlaw truckers. Said vehicles will have a minimum of eight antennas mounted and a minimum of four obese pencil pocket coke bottle lens white male geeks riding in each vehicle. Said geeks will display hats with their call signs emblazoned on them, call sign badges, a minimum of fifteen "ARRL member" stickers glued all over the windows of the vehicles. Uniform for said geeks will consist of food stained shirts and filthy trousers.
Additionally, said geeks will not be required to practice bodily hygiene for a minimum of one week before leaving on auxiliary patrol duties, including having not shaved for two weeks. Word circulating among truckers is the greatest countermeasure to the "geek patrols" is to have an attractive young girl clad in a string bikini riding in one's truck cab. Upon spotting the geek radio patrol, said young woman will display her wears at the geeks. The geeks, not ever having experienced the full attention of a beautiful young woman before , will consequently lose control of their vehicle and begin salivating profusely.

Hey,,,don't laugh...we have a few hammie "O' Fishal Monitors" in this group, some are even nocodes, whom readily used to publicly embrace such behavior, going to great lengths of embellishment to relish us with tales of great Ulysses concerning their "busts". Those hammies have since backed off such public embracing of said techniques.

Maybe it's called "Steath". I don't know about the 'fishy' monitors, but you gotta admit that some of us have been saying all along that there was more fixin' to happen. While it may be funny to ridicule and mock, but the stuff I (and others) said IS true. It is just that we don't often hear about what is being discussed regarding enforcement until something does come down the pike. Me? It won't bother me at all; only that those that turn a deaf ear to warnings. For those who happen to be hams, it is also true that, perhaps, we hear more about the doin's at FCC simply because we have a VERY proactive person who is trying to do something about the lawless "theft" of frequencies. Mr Hollingsworth made a promise to deal with the issue, and as the Enforcement Bureau has worked on its efficiency, funding (received after 9/11), and has been able to add some help (you will be hearing the name of Darryl Duckworth on the FCC's list of helpers), and he is doing so. Riley comes to hamfests and tells what is about to go down. Some of it he is not a liberty to divulge, but the truck stop chains selling non-approved radios is still very much on the table. Information seems to point to "flaws" in the current law that has prevented FCC from acting. That, if there IS indeed a problem, will be handled, too. For truck drivers, well, they will be surprised as well. Then we will have to listen to them whine and moan about their "rights", and Dave/Debbie listen to their 6th "plank" crack and creak. LOL!

Chilly? Oh I can only wish. The fleeting Spring here has sprung and traveled northward for the year. This weekend the temps are supposed to hit 90 for the first time. From there, the thermometer only seems to know one direction. But, much like where you live, we never have snow (not since the '89-'90 blizzard), ice (rarely), and don't have to shovel the drive or put chains on the tires. The big pond to the south that also brings hurricanes and tropical storms sees to that. So, in a nutshell, we have 3 months of really hot weather ahead, and then comes August-October, when we have to keep an ear tuned to the tropics in their yearly oscillation to the north. Oh well, it's always something, no matter your zip code!

Hot from the EBay TOS listed on the site at http://pages.ebay.com/help/community/png-user.html

3.3 Identity Verification. We use many techniques to verify the accuracy of the information our users provide us when they register on the Site. However, because user verification on the Internet is difficult, eBay cannot and does not confirm each user's purported identity. Thus, we have established a user-initiated feedback system to help you evaluate with whom you are dealing. We also encourage you to communicate directly with potential trading partners through the tools available on the Site. You may also wish to consider using a third party escrow service or services that provide additional user verification. See our Buying and Selling Tools page.
3.4 Release. Because we are a venue, in the event that you have a dispute with one or more users, you release eBay (and our officers, directors, agents, subsidiaries, joint ventures and employees) from claims, demands and damages (actual and consequential) of every kind and nature, known and unknown, suspected and unsuspected, disclosed and undisclosed, arising out of or in any way connected with such disputes. If you are a California resident, you waive California Civil Code §1542, which says: "A general release does not extend to claims which the creditor does not know or suspect to exist in his favor at the time of executing the release, which if known by him must have materially affected his settlement with the debtor."
3.5 Information Control. We do not control the information provided by other users that is made available through our system. You may find other user's information to be offensive, harmful, inaccurate, or deceptive. Please use caution, common sense, and practice safe trading when using the Site. Please note that there are also risks of dealing with underage persons or people acting under false pretense. Additionally, there may also be risks dealing with international trade and foreign nationals. By using this Site, you agree to accept such risks and eBay is not responsible for the acts or omissions of users on the Site.

In Quick Terms, you released EBay from anything and Everything, when you signed up for their Service.
Taking them to Small Claims court or anything else, may well prove extremely Pointless.

Since 3.3 states, because user verification on the Internet is difficult, eBay cannot and does not confirm each user's purported identity. They may not have the Guys Real name and address and 3.4 states that you give up most anything on EBay that you may have on anything.

But I do wish you luck

Read thru and you will find more stuff that just adds to the release of EBay from anything and everything thru out there TOS

In another newsgroup I was discussing ferrite rods, and just for kicks I wound a whole lot of turns around a 4" rod, hooked it up to my soundcard and ran Argo. I found out that if you narrow it down around 60 Hz you can see a couple small but distinct sidebands, and lightning slices right through the waterfall.
COOL STUFF!!!

News flash, Twisty -- anything below 9 KHz isn't regulated by the FCC. That means you don't need a license, ham or otherwise.

>Incorrecty ASSuming again that I somehow was referring to MHZ?
>Nevertheless, you have mentioned you have no license.....that >makes you a hypocrite, liar, "dumbass" and licensed hammie..LOL....now

Of course you were referring to MHz. Your desperation to discredit me interferes with your ability to both read what is written and to comprehend what you read. You, under your delusion that I have a ham license, saw MHz where I wrote KHz, mainly because your fragile ego couldn't accept the possibility that I DON'T have a license (as I have said many times before, but you persist in your delusions that I am somebody else), and that when I wrote "KHz" it was a typo. It wasn't a typo, Twist, and if you check the archives you will see that for yourself.

FYI, I have been experimenting with low freqs just about as long as I have radio. My uncle helped me build my first VLF project in the early 70's. It was a one-tube WWVB (15-20 KHz) regen that I found in one of his old Popular Electronics magazines (Dec. 1958, pg. 77 -- I still have the magazine). Of course it's somewhat worthless now that WWVB doesn't transmit anymore, and even then there wasn't much to hear. But it was still a lot of fun.

Now, Twisty, you have backpeddled yourself way beyond the limits of probability, steering right past 'remotely plausible' and smack dab into realm of fantasy. I heartily suggest that you make a few visits to your invisible shrink for some therapy. But if you want to hang around here and keep proving to everyone that you are a fool, well, that's fine, too.

Your implication is that you got me TOSsed, but you still haven't contacted my previous ISP's. In fact, Rob at CET didn't blame me for dropping them because many of their problems were coming from -their- provider (Verizon) to which they had a contract. DC4PC just plain sucked rotten eggs, and didn't even provide newsgroup access. TINCAN is still active, but is undergoing a major renovation right now.

But all that really doesn't matter, because all you would have to do is what I suggested a couple months ago -- go to the homepage of my ISP and find out it's service area. I even wrote out the link, all you had to do was click it. Was that too difficult?

Any mode you want, just as long as it's narrow. And I don't mean SSB. Normal CW works fine locally, but if you want to do some DXing you really need to try out some of the newer modes with soundcard DSP software. Here's a few links for anyone that's interested:

NTE parts are nothing great. Don't expect to see 100 watts per pill. Good luck. You've got a lot to learn. <:

I have 2 Johnson Base CB radios for Sale, they do not work, but they look real nice.

1 Johnson Viking 430, 40 channel. Led channel selector, LED S/RFO meter, has volume, and Squelch/PA, knobs, 3 switches EXT/LOC, BRT/DIM, NB/ANL ANL. Wood grain cabinet, It has a place to plug in an extension speaker and one for PA. It runs off 110 V or 13.8 V. 1.6A The radio looks real nice, when plugged in there is no sound and the channel LED shows the first number and just part of the second, the S/RFO meter does light up. No Mike.

1 Johnson Messenger 4230, 40 channel. Led channel selector, has volume, and Squelch/Dim, knobs, 3 switches ANL/OFF, EXT NOR/LOC, CB/PA. Black cabinet. It has a place to plug in an extension speaker and one for PA. It runs off 110 V or 13.8 V. 1.6A. The radio looks real nice, when plugged in there is no sound and the channel LED does not light up, the S/RFO meter does light up. No Mike.

For those of you that are tinkers or own a golden screwdriver, this just might be what you are looking for.

Make me a money offer I can't refuse.

Please e-mail your offer to me at nighthawk111@juno.com

Twisty does. That's why I directed the question to HIM, not you. So what are YOU whining about?

The most wonderful thing about morons is that because they haven't developed any other method of qualitative reasoning, you always leave them guessing.

FEDERAL COMMUNICATIONS COMMISSION ENFORCEMENT BUREAU
Memorandum

TO:
Chuck Skolaut, Field & Regulatory Correspondent
American Radio Relay League

FROM:
W. Riley Hollingsworth, Special Counsel Enforcement Bureau

SUBJECT:
Unlicensed incursion into the Ten Meter Amateur Band

DATE:
April 28, 2003

This referral is made pursuant to Section 4(f)(4)(B) of the Communications Act of 1934, as amended, 47 U.S.C. 154(f)(4)(B), and the "Amended Agreement Between the Field Operations Bureau of the Federal Communications Commission and the American Radio Relay League, Inc. Regarding the Use of Amateur Volunteers.

We request the assistance of the ARRL Auxiliary in identifying, over the next 6 months (May through October), any unlicensed operation in the Ten Meter Amateur Band, whether from business entities including trucking companies, truckers or other individuals operating domestically. We do not request direction finding, but would appreciate, where possible, the names and cities of the operators, and license plate numbers and state if from a vehicle.

Please use your best judgment as to whether to include tapes, and please use case number 2003-583

Thank you

1856. FCC Seeks Assistance in Curbing Unlicensed 10-Meter Incursions

Newsgroup: rec.radio.cb
Date: 2003-05-04 04:26:50 UTC
From: PhilC <philC@cranium.com>
Message-ID: <nRydndh_BYMSCymjXTWcoQ@comcast.com>
Source record: 157226

NEWINGTON, CT, May 1, 2003--The FCC has requested the assistance of the ARRL Amateur Auxiliary/Official Observers in monitoring for illegal operation on the 10-meter amateur band. The request came in an April 28 letter from FCC Special Counsel Riley Hollingsworth, who says incursions on the band by apparently unlicensed operators continue to be a major enforcement headache. "This is the first phase of a renewed investigation effort and may be thought of as detect, collect data and report," said ARRL Field and Regulatory Correspondent Chuck Skolaut, K0BOG. ARRL forwarded the request to members of the Amateur Auxiliary May 1.

Hollingsworth said the FCC wants help with a stepped-up effort over the next six months--from May through October--to identify any unlicensed operation on 10 meters "whether from business entities--including trucking companies--truckers or other individuals operating domestically." Hollingsworth said the FCC does not need direction-finding but would appreciate where possible "the names and cities of the operators, and license plate numbers and state if from a vehicle."

Skolaut said the FCC would like to concentrate on obtaining reports of this type of operation to help locate specific areas where this problem is prevalent across the US, although he concedes that not all illegal 10-meter operation originates in the US. "The FCC asks that OOs obtain as much information as possible and send their reports through normal channels to ARRL Headquarters," he said. The decision to record the transmissions of suspected interlopers was left to the discretion of the individual OOs.

The FCC request was made in accordance with the Communications Act and a longstanding agreement between ARRL and the FCC regarding the use of Amateur Radio volunteers to assist in enforcement.

1873. Ford Ranger Antenna Mount?

I have a 1995 Ford Ranger with a camper shell and want to mount a good antenna. Currently I have a 13 in mag mount rubber duckie on the top. The problem with a big antenna is that I have to park in a parking garage with a low clearance. I was thinking of some kind of bumper mount with a 4 to 5 foot antenna. What is the best way to mount this to the bumper keeping in mind that I have to open the tail gate? I am open to other mounting suggestions as well.

Thanks!

Steve.....the bumper mount arraignment will make the signal pretty directional. Have you thought about the center of the roof, or on the cowl?
Good luck.

TUBES AVAILABLE

I have a very good selection of tubes for HAM/CB/Audio/Antique/Transmitting
100,000+ NOS USA tubes in stock

I do not have a web site nor a formal price list ~~ Suggest that you Email me with the tubes that you need, along with the quantity of each tube, and I will check my current inventory and get back to you with availability and a quote.

This is my only business, it is not a hobby, so I strive to supply quality tubes at a very competitive price.

I have very few of the 'high end' audio tubes, but do have a good selection of all others.

Specialize in sweep, transmitting and ceramic tubes.

Please Email you needs to:

I have 2 Johnson Base CB radios for Sale, they do not work, but they look real nice.

1 Johnson Viking 430, 40 channel. Led channel selector, LED S/RFO meter, has volume, and Squelch/PA, knobs, 3 switches EXT/LOC, BRT/DIM, NB/ANL ANL. Wood grain cabinet, It has a place to plug in an extension speaker and one for PA. It runs off 110 V or 13.8 V. 1.6A The radio looks real nice, when plugged in there is no sound and the channel LED shows the first number and just part of the second, the S/RFO meter does light up. No Mike.

1 Johnson Messenger 4230, 40 channel. Led channel selector, has volume, and Squelch/Dim, knobs, 3 switches ANL/OFF, EXT NOR/LOC, CB/PA. Black cabinet. It has a place to plug in an extension speaker and one for PA. It runs off 110 V or 13.8 V. 1.6A. The radio looks real nice, when plugged in there is no sound and the channel LED does not light up, the S/RFO meter does light up. No Mike.

For those of you that are tinkers or own a golden screwdriver, this just might be what you are looking for.

Make me a money offer I can't refuse.

Please e-mail your offer to me at nighthawk111@juno.com

Oh I thought that large void was your wife's.

1898. cobra 148 repair? Thank for all the Help.

I tried to post a thank you earlier but I haven't seen it so I'm posting again.
Thanks to everyone for all the help. I used all of your suggestions and each one of them made the radio better. I did find the cause of the problem and it most likley was not the same problem that I encountered on the other cobra 148s. I found a sorder bridge across an elytrolytic cap near the driver that someone had made from an earlier repair. I think the parts locator number is C154. It took me nearly two days to find the problem. I guess I need new glasses.
Thanks Larry.... Expectation

ROTFLMAO, "Say what is you want. I am 100% not George and I having no aol." No your George with an AOL account, not Valmont.......I called it the first day I saw the post........Yes valmont posts through an AOL portal, yes his wording style is just like George's, yes his defense is the same that George has said all along when confronted with the fact that George has an account.......LMFAO!!!!
AOL

CORRECTION:

Everything he says is a misspelled, poor grammar lie.

That's "fallacy". A good word for you. Sounds almost like "phallic".

Steve,
Mount your antenna on a hinge on top of the shell.
When you enter a parking garage, tilt the antenna ~forward~. When you leave, set it up straight again.

Well, I'll get on my asbestos long johns :). My thoughts are as follows:
10 and 12 meters are amateur bands. Certainly 10 meters is an international allocation. If there are problems, it should be fixed. Educations is the key; flaming isn't. There are a lot of decent folks on the newsgroup, both amateur and cb - but any of us will get a little upset if flamed. What Jerry is saying is that there is enforcement action on the way. Apparently, this is true and the FCC is asking help of some of the amateur community.
This is still no reason to go flaming the cb newsgroup; statements are certainly possible without trying to get too personal (and sexual innuendoes are not only too personal, they are likely way off the mark). Why is MURS starting to get popular when so much more can be legally accomplished with amateur radio? I have a feeling that some folks are getting tired of us old duffers trying to preach to them (and, unfortunately, I am in my mid 50s and qualify as an old duffer :)

If everyone (especially the hams) tried lightening up a bit, I think we'd all discover that we do have quite a bit in common and a lot of real discussion to be had.

Just my two pennies' worth!

I am thinking of getting a rig for my big truck.

which one should I get?

Connex 3300?

Connex 3300 HP?

Galaxy 33?

Connex 4800 DXL (with echo)?

Galaxy 88?

SuperStar 3900 (or HP version)

Galaxy Pluto (if I can find one new, which I doubt it...)?

I'd prefer a sideband rig, But My budget may only allow a am only rig...

I've got a 48GTL (Old style) But I don't want to have to take it in and out of my personal truck...

I'd just like some opinions on the following radios, from people that have owned them, and can give me a honest educated opinion on the radios.

Valmont, no need to worry, they are very inept. Next week you will be called Sparky or Leland they are not good at figuring who is who, so much so they resort to using other avenues to access this NG.

What's wrong with a Uniden 88 or something like that?

That will take the bumps of the road better then that other garbage.

I don't say that because of what AH says. I say that because I've heard the feedback from users. If you like toys like echo and beep and channels I wouldn't use anymore, get the Galaxy. I like my stuff to run like an Energizer.

My Uniden PC-122 from 1988 just keeps going and going and going...

I have come across a nice looking mobile SSB rig. It is a Craig L131 Quick-Mount CB. It appears to be fully functional, and barely used, however, the mike is missing so I am in search of a replacement.

It has a strange mike jack on it, and I have no idea where I might even find a compatible connector to make a mike for it. It looks like a 5-pin DIN connector with a larger hole in the center for another pin (could call that 6 pins I guess.) The connector appears that it just slips on to the jack, and MIGHT possibly turn slightly to lock in place. I will try to get the time to take a couple of pics of the jack for those that might want them for comparison purposes.

Any ideas? Anybody have a mike is decent shape?

Thanks,
PH

FREE DOWNLOAD, 8-band expanded CB frequency chart shows 4 bands down, 3 up, + CB 40. Find where you are, 25.165 Ch.1 lowest band to 28.755 MHz Ch.40 highest band. Includes the skips too.

Due to high demand, look for the xtal-mixing charts & block mixing diagrams covering about 95% of the most common AM and AM/SSB CB radios here. Lots of guys asking to "fill in the blanks" in order to replace a bad xtal or convert/expand these older rigs to new freqs.

Many thanks (again!) for all your great support these last 26 years!

Valmont, Not to worry my friend. the keyclowns throw out accusations without proof. And when you show proof of the stuff they did, they lie and say it wasn't them, or it was a coworker or a disgruntled employee or they are just words. It really is a comedy I appreciate the compliment keep it up. I am still pumping strong from the same 1 account and it disgusts them LOL.

Those types of parts are pretty easy to work with.....you don't even need a gas type of unit; Metcal solder stations work fine, especially with the small tips.

The Metcal units do meet ISO9000 ratings; that is one of the reasons that they use them over at Rockwell-Collins. The tips are a DC ground. Instead of the typical heating element that is used in other devices, a thermocouple element is heated by RF operating at 13.56MHz. Heats up in about 5 seconds, cools down in about 10. The Hayco 939s are also a good unit. The hot air units seem to work well; we used to use them when I was working at the Sanyo service center.

If somebody opened up the unit to transmit out of band, they may have retuned the front end. On VHF, the front end selectivity is fairly selective, so if it was retuned in the 155MHz range, this would make the 2M band deaf. On the UHF range, those tuned cavities are really selective. If they were retuned to the 460MHz range, you probably wouldn't hear too much on 440.

Lou did nothing more than to list frequencies above and below the CB band, that are typical of modifications. That's it. There is nothing illegal about that, you bonehead.

And hams are allowed to modify their radio to cover an amateur band.

Not all modifications to radios are done by Part 95'ers.

Just the out of band mod was done to it. No retuning was done.
The chain of ownership has been checked. I'll have to fire up the 12VDC iron and check for cold solder joints...

(My AC iron has too much leakage. I need to buy a grounded iron.)

I appreciate the heads up... I'll go have a look at least. I'm actually full up with Siltronix Radios, now entering the zone of pack rat denial if I buy any more.

I was able to buy an original Siltronix 1011 "plain" last month. Other than the original Swan 1011 I have all models and the original prototype as shown on the http://sonic.ucdavis.edu/siltronix web pages.

Never wanted to be this whacky... just got this way from hanging around voodoo electronics. Hope you're enjoying your Siltronix radio Steve...

cheers

Geogre,,it has nothing to do with cb or anyone in this forum.
Desperately trying to infer something that doesn't exist has always been a dilemma with your posts. Too bad you don't have the entire story on this scenario and post only half of what you know how to find. The arrl has been badgering the FCC for some time to placate some their half-wits that feel the ten meter situation is akin to armageddon.
This letter to 'ol Chuck-eye was NOT initiated by the feds OR Holliingsworth..rather, it was a cordial memorandum, originating from a long standing exchange of communications between the arrl and the FCC in an effort to reduce the inquiries and complaints concerning what the FCC doesn't really consider worthy of it's expenditures and actions, which is why they are dumping it in your laps. After all, N8WWM found out that PROOF must be ascertained by the feds, NOT a wannabe-rat observer of hammie status looking to play radio cop or net nanny cop. When the info submitted by the rats is reviewed, the feds make a decision as to persue the incident or not. In N8's case, the feds had 21 complaints and several tapes made on five separate occasions,,,,all were made by hammies, every single last lovin' one of them.......the feds tuned in to our foul-mouthed chicken-hawk on the remote possibility they could copy him, and lo and behold,,,,,,,they did, he was busted, warned, and treated fairly. There was not only many hammie witnesses to N8's blatant disregard of communication law and infractions, but an FCC employee was directly involved with his case.

Poor Dogie thought he was the target of a conspiracy and still thinks he was wrongly singled out and framed.

Lelnad went to bat for Dogie, inferring his innocence, as that was the same time frame period that Lelnad was taped breaking the law....he ceased ALL radio activity for a short time when N8 was popped, hypothesizing correctly that he may have been targeted for enforcement activity as well and, possibly recorded.

Lelnad's license plate matches his call, one hammie (an long time upperclassman, NOT a nocode) recorded his freeband activity of attempted interference and jamming with illegal power, and several others witnessed it.......Lelnad found this to be true, angrily reacted as expected, and bit off way more than he could chew, let alone digest.

From: hoho@njtreddyorg.com (treddy) Oh my oh my, I can see it now, a fleet of bald tire wrecks rolling all over the nation's highways and byways with large cardboard signs duck taped on the side reading "Junior FCC auxiliary trucker Radio Patrol." All intent on hunting outlaw truckers. Said vehicles will have a minimum of eight antennas mounted and a minimum of four obese pencil pocket coke bottle lens white male geeks riding in each vehicle. Said geeks will display hats with their call signs emblazoned on them, call sign badges, a minimum of fifteen "ARRL member" stickers glued all over the windows of the vehicles. Uniform for said geeks will consist of food stained shirts and filthy trousers. Additionally, said geeks will not be required to practice bodily hygiene for a minimum of one week before leaving on auxiliary patrol duties, including having not shaved for two weeks. Word circulating among truckers is the greatest countermeasure to the "geek patrols" is to have an attractive young girl clad in a string bikini riding in one's truck cab. Upon spotting the geek radio patrol, said young woman will display her wears at the geeks. The geeks, not ever having experienced the full attention of a beautiful young woman before , will consequently lose control of their vehicle and begin salivating profusely. hyt

Hey,,,don't laugh...we have a few hammie "O' Fishal Monitors" in this group, some are even nocodes, whom readily used to publicly embrace such behavior, going to great lengths of embellishment to relish us with tales of great Ulysses concerning their "busts". Those hammies have since backed off such public embracing of said techniques.

>Maybe it's called "Steath".

I prefer to think it's priority and good sense, but you may be correct..

>I don't know about the 'fishy' monitors,

Heck, check the archives for wild claims by "official montiors/observers" right here in rec.radio.cb., a few self-styled observers have claimed "busts" that never happened, and when pressed for details, come apart at the seams with insultive off-topic personal posts having nothing to do with their claim. Anything to deflect attention off them being caught in a lie.
Now, isn't that a grand way for hammie to act, Jer?? Anxiously awaiting your input,,,,,,

>but you gotta admit >that some of us have been saying all along >that there was more fixin' to happen.

Agreed, but at what expense, and what is there to show for it? A bunch of pissed off hammies who have been snitching on each other. ..all I see is hammie against hammie everywhere one looks.

>While it

>may be funny to ridicule and mock,

There is no ridicule or mocking of such behavior, just public scorn.

>stuff I (and others) said IS true.

No. Some stuff you said has been true concerning enforcement, I will give you that...but you appear to be a little more concerned about such actions and as such, position yourself to learn about such matters and actions..... some (most) of these "others" you appear to be speaking for do not have a clue and simply fall in behind your comments and parrot them like good sheople without knowing what is actually happening...again, a clear cut example are several claims of cb "busts" made by these "others" in our midst. Would you not agree?

You also warned against overzealous hammies playing the enforcement game on the freeband, Jerry...now what happened...?....exactly what you said would happen....a backlash against hammies and now they are getting popped a dime a dozen. As the old saying goes, be careful what you ask for, you just may get it.

>It is just that >we don't often hear about what is being >discussed regarding enforcement until >something

>does come down the pike. Me? It won't bother >me at all;

Me neither. I don't want the law changed at all. The errant hypocrites are geting theirs, and by the FCC numbers of enforcement, there appear to be an endless supply of such, would you not agree?

>only that those that turn a deaf >ear to warnings.

And the majority appear to be hammies, going by enforcement records. Again, would you not agree?

>For those who happen to be >hams,

"Those who happen to be" hammies are ninety-some percent of the enforcement procedures.

>it is also true that, perhaps, we hear >more about the doin's at FCC simply because >we have a VERY proactive person who is >trying to do something about the lawless

>"theft" of frequencies.

Actually, for anyone who has paid attention to their moves, they are more rightfully concerned about cleaning their own back yard, based on the sheer number of hammies being popped for not managing to stay within the rules and laws. Lead by example...

>Mr Hollingsworth made a promise >to deal with the issue, and as the Enforcement >Bureau has worked on its efficiency, funding

>(received after 9/11), and has been able to >add some help (you will be hearing the name >of Darryl Duckworth on the FCC's list of >helpers), and he is doing so.

Old news. Duckworth has been involved for a long time, and all bureaucrats make promises,,it's part of their unwritten job description.

>Riley comes to hamfests and tells >what is about to go down. Some of it he is not >a liberty to divulge, but the truck stop chains >selling

>non-approved radios is still very much on the >table. Information seems to point to "flaws"

>current law that has prevented FCC from >acting.

C'mon Jerry, call it what it is: a "loophole" that a few non-enlightened hammies in here claimed didn't exist. Gee,,,I have had this conversation many times concerning why it is legal to purchase such radios via this loophole and have been cursed and attacked (by these same hammie lids you claim) as if I somehow made the law instead of merely talking about taking advantage of it,,lol. Again, you thoughts.....?

Adding to that, timing of successful enforcement toward cbers by the FCC was calculated perfectly concerning such....what better time to claim some victory when the dx is rapidly fading? Some of us recognize the cycle (of cb enforcement) Jerry, and have seen it before with other administrations when the DX is high on eleven. The claims and lip service remain the same, only the characters change, and some old-time lids manage to perform on cue, cycle after cycle...predictable.

>That, if there IS indeed a problem, will be >handled, too.

Only through an act of Congress, and that ain't gonna happen this session of Congress, or next, 'cause with the DX gone, the cantankerous lids will have only themselves to fight with..no more skipland cbers to lose their dignity, ego, and sanity to.

>For truck drivers, well, they will be surprised

>as well. Then we will have to listen to them

>whine and moan about their "rights", and

>Dave/Debbie listen to their 6th "plank" crack

>and

>creak. LOL!

Despite claims and posturing by certain hammies,, the whining and complaining and such about what you say has never materialized here, as the scalliwags responsible for your dilemmas are to be found nowhere among our little safe haven of a playground we call rec.radio.cb. It's why you took this argument to a truckers forum a few years ago,,but you will find no truckers here, or anyone for that matter, taking issue with legal operation.

there is a big difference between companies who have it done right and others have done as cheap as possible. If it is done using mil spec standards. You can bet.. that pcb board won't have any solder balls floating around on the circuit board. All the smt parts on the pcb board are checked and double checked to ensure quality goes into what they sell. Where as the cheap companies.. send it through a wave soldering machine, take for granted that everything came through without hitch and send it out.

A vacationing penguin is driving through Arizona and sees that the car's oil-pressure light is on. He gets out to look and sees oil dripping out of the motor. He drives to the nearest town and stops at the first gas station. After dropping the car off, the penguin goes for a walk around town. He sees an ice cream shop, and being a penguin in Arizona, decides that something cold would really hit the spot.
He gets a big dish of vanilla ice cream and sits down to eat. Having no hands, he makes a real mess trying to eat with his little flippers. After finishing his ice cream, he goes back to the gas station and asks the mechanic if he's found the problem.

The mechanic looks up from the engine and says, "It looks like you've blown a seal. "No, no," the penguin replies, wiping his mouth, "it's just ice cream."

Buying is apparantly never a problem there. As long as everything works OK. But customer service and returns are a major problem.

They also have the rep of selling refurb products as new. They have non-working items on sale at their site for some obscene prices like $75, for use as parts or such.

I have heard about 50/50. Half have no problem, and half think they are crooks.
That is a bit too much bad for me.

I have 2 Johnson Base CB radios for Sale, they do not work, but they look real nice.
1 Johnson Viking 430, 40 channel. Led channel selector, LED S/RFO meter, has volume, and Squelch/PA, knobs, 3 switches EXT/LOC, BRT/DIM, NB/ANL ANL. Wood grain cabinet, It has a place to plug in an extension speaker and one for PA. It runs off 110 V or 13.8 V. 1.6A The radio looks real nice, when plugged in there is no sound and the channel LED shows the first number and just part of the second, the S/RFO meter does light up. No Mike.

1 Johnson Messenger 4230, 40 channel. Led channel selector, has volume, and Squelch/Dim, knobs, 3 switches ANL/OFF, EXT NOR/LOC, CB/PA. Black cabinet. It has a place to plug in an extension speaker and one for PA. It runs off 110 V or 13.8 V. 1.6A. The radio looks real nice, when plugged in there is no sound and the channel LED does not light up, the S/RFO meter does light up. No Mike.

For those of you that are tinkers or own a golden screwdriver, this just might be what you are looking for.

  After all, N8WWM found out that PROOF must be ascertained by the feds, NOT a wannabe-rat observer of hammie status looking to play radio cop or net nanny cop. When the info submitted by the rats is reviewed, the feds make a decision as to persue the incident or not. In N8's case, the feds had 21 complaints and several tapes made on five separate occasions,,,,all were made by hammies, every single last lovin' one of them.......

>Now you have proof of this

A record exists....

> How?

How do I have proof? Personally, I don't have proof.....but the FCC does, a hammie club does, several hammies do, and it's readily accessible. The hammies are more than wiling to share their incidental run-ins with the infamous but touched N8.....have you bothered to contact anybody prior to making your selective supported opinion of disdain for the FCC known?
You, N8, and Lelnad already attested that you disbelieve what the FCC posts and claims....no need to refer you back to them, unless, of course, you are looking to them for an example of suport for your position and agenda, then you cite them.
Try the hammie club for starters,,,,make certain you share the information you receive....
,,,,,,,,

>Did a little >birdie tell you?

A "little birdie" is worth hs weight in gold in my profession.

>21 complants

Yes. There may have been more, these are the official numbers.

> and not once is it mentioned >anywhere on the internet. Did Frasso tell you >this?

Frasso? Oh, I see, your clueless identity game is surfacing as an involuntary way of coping when cornfused along with the need for personalization of those whom you can't debate intelligently (communication deficit).

,,,,,

>Did he speak to Riley or FCC?

(shrug)

the feds tuned in to our foul-mouthed chicken-hawk on the remote possibility they could copy him, and lo and behold,,,,,,,they did, he was busted, warned, and treated fairly.

>Again you know this how?

Why, in the same manner you and your bud "knew" about the cb bust that never happened in Philly. As you once alluded,,just because you are unable to disprove the claim.....

>Or are you just giving us lip service as usual?

No more than y'alls claims about the Philly cber....amazing. Quite illustrative of a directly paralleled situation, is it not? Ahh,,nuthin' like the sweet sound of your hammie hypocrisy being demonstrated...

There was not only many hammie witnesses to N8's blatant disregard of communication law and infractions, but an FCC employee was directly involved with his case.
    Poor Dogie thought he was the target of a conspiracy and still thinks he was wrongly singled out and framed.
Lelnad went to bat for Dogie, inferring his innocence, as that was the same time frame period that Lelnad was taped breaking the law....he ceased ALL radio activity for a short time when N8 was popped, hypothesizing correctly that he may have been targeted for enforcement activity as well and, possibly recorded.
>Again there is proof of this to be found where?

Some things are self-apparent and self-evident for the non-criminally insane. Permit us to examine the law of probablity. Lelnad has accessed this group through many, many different services...all yanked for TOS violations, (such as the murder threat he made toward me that I recently shared with y'all) and is well known as an angry, nocode, supporter of what you laughingly and fondly prefer to hold on to for posterity and refer to as the "akc", and has a history of agitating cbers and expressing his lack of self-control for the same. Now, you may prefer to concoct your own pathetic storyline concerning his fall from grace and self-ostracizing, much as you did when N8 was listed in the rain report, but the rest of us prefer to accept the FCC reports and field investigation files as "proof".

>Or you just have a lot of hambo friends?

But of course. Let me ask you something, does that question have something to do with you being a six meter jitterbug?

Not at all. The people who sell 'em only want to make the money. Scott is simply trying to cover the obvious. 10 meters is an international amateur band. A lot of complaints have been made so enjoy the stupidity of using 28.000 and above while you can. It appears it won't be for long :)

hi i have wired radio strait to the parallel port i have a problem with this the software changes from 25mhgz-30mhgz but the repeater offset is not working (soft is not changing to tx) and the squelch is not operating with soft scanner, i am not using null-modem cable as i have hard wired radio to parallel port .
how do i make radio in to 10 meters and repeater offset with out using this soft as i know that this radio is sold in 10 m form

Once you've got an ICOM-706 and modded it, you just can't get excited over a CB (it's great for inserting remarks into people's conversations on 49 mhz phones, too)...

But at any rate, hang on to that 148GTL, especially if it's one of the old 5-watt jobs!!! I have one I bought in '91, still in pristine condition, never doctored... this baby is going to be a collector's item someday.

I 'tried" nothing. I asked you a simple question based on your past claims of non-use of cb, code, and now six meter. My first guess was probably the right one, long ago,,your default mode is set to 2 meter. A hammie of your status that never used six meter......doesn't seem plausible...but then again, perhaps your radio doesn't budge from the freeband you never heard me on :).

A-MEN The quality of SMT is 10 times that of conventional boards. Dont know how many intermitent troubles I have fixed on wave soldered boards. After a while you give up on troubleshooting and just start resoldering. Finally you hit one ,the solder rolls back to reveal tarnished bare copper. You will never see this kind of crap on SMT.

Finally, something "I" can agree with.. One last step which may have been "buried in here" - no more "financial foreign aide either. If they don't like US then they sure in hell don't like our money..... Would you loan $5 to your neighbor if you hated his guts, or he hated yours? I doubt it. WE ARE TOO SOFT when it comes to dealing with foreigners. Regardless who they are. Lou/Tech@DP.NET

Wanting to buy cheap going CB in new zealand. Looking at getting back into it. Anything considered.
Just putting the feelers out there.
We run 26mhz here (Ch1=26.330 to Ch40=26.770. Are there any about or does someone know how to convert them if i got one from the states/Auz? Not much selection here.

I used to have cobra 148gtl years ago. Nice set.

I have a 706 (2 actually). While it is a nice small radio, that tunes through a whole lot of interesting bands, it doesn't make the best radio, for mobile use. The noise blanker works effectively only on SSB. On AM, it makes no real difference. On FM, it actually distorts the receive audio. The squelch is a poor carrier level gate, and not a true noise squelch, which is prefered for FM. The squelch pops open way too easily, and must be set too high to avoid it.
When scanning through the channels, you are constantly barraged with the "clickety-clack" of the band switch relays. You can't help but wonder if this type of use, will lead to premature failure of the relays. It helps to arrange your memory channels by the band they're on, to minimize this. But unless you scan only one band, you can't avoid it totally. Out of the box, the original 706's suffered from a poorly designed input highpass/lowpass filter, which only worked outside of the 2 meter band on VHF. Due to the incorrect filter characteristics, the sensitivity of the radio was poor, anywhere above 150 Mhz. This gave rise to the infamous "yellow wire" mod, which "fixed" the problem, by running the receive through the 2 meter bandpass filter. A better solution, which I have applied, was to leave the original filter in place, but removing two surface mount (gasp!) capacitors, which then changes the filter's characteristics, for improved VHF sensitivity above 150 Mhz, while retaining intermod protection from broadcast FM stations. I would imagine that newer 706 MK 2's should have solved this, but I haven't checked.

On the plus side though, transmit audio quality is good. The 706 gives you the ability to shift your bandwidth, to tailor the transmit tone quality, to suit your voice. It contains CTCSS to facilitate repeater use. With the optional narrow SSB filter, receiver performance is ok, but nowhere near as good as more expensive HF rigs. 99 memory channels is more than most people need, and the ability to add text labels is also helpful.

Of course, the continuous tuning and easy transmit mod, make the radio useful (But also likely illegal) on 49 Mhz, MURS, marine band, CB, and a host of other "shady" frequencies.

WRONG!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!! ALL businesses need to advertise to KEEP their name in front of the buying customer. IF that were not true, why then would Pepsi, McDonalds, KMart, Verizon, just to name a few examples... keep advertising on TV? As to WHO does their ads, THEY have advertising agents to do theirs. A smaller business such as Lou Franklin's and my own, need to do our own advertising. As successful as Lou may be, I'm sure he isn't up there to afford the lucrative salaries of an Ad Agency. The Internet has become a small business persons best friend and night mare in the same instance. It gets our names out there, but we're also in with all the other competitors too. So again, we must ADVERTISE......

It is quite obvious you know little of running a valid business. There are 2 keys minimum - important - to business. ADVERTISING and LOCATION. If you don't have the latter then you must do much more of the former. Even if you do have a good location, that does not mean you'll have people beating down your doors to get in. You HAVE to let the public know what you offer.

It is true that if you have a good product or service, business can come merely by word of mouth.... BUT it doesn't keep them coming, nor does it get the word out to the multitudes or as quickly. YOU MUST ADVERTISE.... There are no exceptions. Even the Transit Companies who have buses to cart people around cities to work, school and so on advertise... and they are out there in the people's eyes every day. Why? TO GET MORE CUSTOMERS!

As for Lou Franklin spamming here, I won't go there because it seems the rules in these groups are made up to fit certain interests. I've spammed NGs also (testing the waters), and asked in my posts that IF my post was not wanted to let me know kindly and I would refrain from doing it again. As opposed to having some asses e-mail me and my ISP threatening to have my account pulled as too has been done. What a crock. All I can say is if the "MAJORITY" welcomes Lou Franklin's ads or mine or anyone else's, then they will stay. IF not, then all you can do if still posted is use your filters to block them out. Like you would with the ads you get in your paper. You don't want to read them? DON"T... Set them aside.....

My two cents.....

I bought an SWR meter with an "antenna matcher". Came from China or somewhere like that so the instructions were almost useless. It did kinda explain how to check the SWR but didn't say anything about the antenna matcher.

There are two rotary buttons on the "matcher" one says "tune" the other says "load". Does anyone know how I should set these? I did check the SWR and it was up around 3. I set the matcher to "on" and adjusted both buttons about the same to get it into the 1 range. Do you think I did this correctly?

The minority that are pissed are the same ones that have problems with the content, not the actual ads, as they pertain to out hobby and most definitely fill a void. Several have already made their opinions known favoring censorship, sharing with the group their penchant for not wanting to allow any information concerning freeband or modifications or peaks, to be exchanged. They get angry and react predictably when they are not permitted to act as moderator as to what is discussed here, especially concerning radio..hence, the impotents complain to ISP's. It's all good, and I will continue to request periodic postings from Lou to keep us informed of his catalog of books and whatnots. After all, there may be several "newbies" seeking such information. It's not spam to those of us that are not in direct competition with Lou or those of us that use the internet for what it was intended, the free and uncensored, unfettered exchange of ideas and information.

A single band antenna does not need a matcher.

Your antenna is not working properly.

Your matcher won't get you out any farther.

Back to the antenna store...

Jack,
It sounds like you've done it correctly. Basically, adjust both 'Tune' and 'Load' till you get the lowest SWR possible.
If possible, it's always best to tune your antenna and match impedances. If you can't for whatever reason, then using a tuner/matcher is 'better' than not using one.
It doesn't get rid of the SWR, but it does make the radio think it's 'seeing' a reasonable one so that it will put out full power. You will still have the losses that the SWR represents, but the radio won't 'care' or be affected by them.

yup. sp was actually on the downslide before the head-on crash in darlington. i believe it was a busch series race. anyway, after a brave run in 02 fueled by emotion the writing was on the wall. dei was right in canning him. green aint no great shakes either but think of the time saved by not doing sheetmetal work and now concentrating on getting the ride ready.
nascar.com has a section where one can compare drivers against each other. it needs work but it has merit.
either way the racing fans on long island lost their only local guy.
maybe someone racing out of riverhead can step up. more like a jump up.

Sounds good. Adjust both tune and load for lowest SWR. This doesn't affect the SWR between the tuner and the coax/antenna; it does match the load to the radio so the radio can put out maximum power. Also, SWR by itself does not result in 'lower transmitted power'. Higher SWR will result in higher loses on the transmission line. Whether this is of any concern or not depends upon the transmission line's loss when a perfect 1:1 match exists and how high the SWR currently is. Also, a transmission line with considerable loss will show a lower SWR than exists in reality since the transmitted wave is attenuated and then the reflected line is attenuated again before being compared against the transmitted power output at the SWR meter. If you had a real long coax, you might show a perfect SWR even if the far end of the coax was open or shorted (!). So, the matcher is nice to have, but if you are showing a 3 to 1 SWR - especially if using light coax and a fairly long run (not sure if this is a base unit) - you might want to get the antenna properly tuned as this will result in less loss in the coax.

Warning: Boring anecdote ahead!

I got my start in electronics from two people. One was my uncle who was a ham. The other was an old man named Stan who ran a speaker repair shop out of his garage next to my grade school (he also built custom speakers). He had one rule for business: "If the product [or service] is good, the business will advertise itself." His proof was that he had customers coming from Canada to California to Chicago and never spent one single cent on advertising. And his location wasn't very good, either. I followed his advice with my own business, and while I don't run my business full-time, I do pretty well. And I have never advertised.

Success in business has little to do with advertising or location, it's all about the product or service. For example, when was the last time you saw an advertisement from Rolls Royce? Caterpillar? Bloomingdales? Cal-Tech? The fact is that quality advertises itself. And that also explains why McDonalds, Kmart and Verizon must spend billions in advertising every year.

You may have a point. But, the fact remains, I pay for this service/access, and I don't want to read his spamming. That's my right. It's kind of like sending unsolicited faxes. I'm not going to report it to his ISP, but others may, and I'm sure his ISP will not take kindly to reports of his spamming.

I agree. If this newsgroup was a venue for advertising, even for CB radio, just about every major manufacturer would be spamming this group with hundreds of ads every month, and thousands more from small-time shops.

OTOH I'm notoriously un-picky about the functionality of my radio gear... many SWLs would likewise find fault with the Sangean ATS-818 I've had for 11 years now, but it was easy for me to master and enjoy... so I have no right to complain if the keypad isn't in telephone format.

Big Brother is listening (shiver, shiver)... to save me from myself. If you've ever listened to L.A.'s 147.435, you know not many of the ops out here are hung up on what's legal and what ain't. What sets me apart from these characters is that I'm crazy enough to want to legitimize certain on-air antics... tho I get pelted with plenty of tomatoes for saying so. >;-)

I've been doing fine all though I have been working out of town a lot lately and dealing with an ailing parent on the weekends. My Dad has been in and out of the hospital with a heart condition. He had two stints put in a few weeks ago. Now he has what is called "congestive heart failure" since the arteries to the other side of his heart are still partially blocked. His heart fills up faster that it can empty.
The operation to fix this may finish off what he has left of his kidney function thus forcing him to go on dialysis for the rest of his life, or until he can get a transplant. Also the prior operation to put in the stints caused a tiny amount of plaque to lodge in his index finger tip cutting off the circulation. His finger now needs to be amputated. Also some of the plaque is lodged in the veins in his legs reducing the blood flow. Now an infection of the fatty tissue has started. If it can't be cleared up and spreads he may loose part of one leg below the knee. So far the infection seems to be clearing up, slowly.

I haven't bothered to respond to Twirted's cries for attention, and that children, like him, always seem to find a way to amuse themselves if left alone anyway. It seems like he's still confused over who is really whom. Oh well you cant expect much from a mentally challenged child like Twirted. You people really should quit teasing Twirted, and give him back his make-believe plastic Start-Trek communicator so he can talk to his friends the "Saucer Men" on sub-space. With his pacifier Twirted won't be on the news group bothering everybody by begging for attention like a baby so often.

Oh, by the way, remember when he starts crying and making a big fuss over things it a sign that his diaper needs changing too. It takes a village to raise a child, and Twirted is one of those "special needs" children.

Aanal Aaron is a non-existant FCC-agent wannabe who would never answer any questions and has never yet been correct about anything he has posted here.

Notice that whoever is pretending to be Aanal Aaron this time isn't as smart as the original. The posting host DNS shows up this time. Shouldn't be too hard to figure out who is playing the part.

After all, N8WWM found out that PROOF must be ascertained by the feds, NOT a wannabe-rat observer of hammie status looking to play radio cop or net nanny cop. When the info
submitted by the rats is reviewed, the feds make a decision as to persue
the incident or not. In N8's case, the feds had 21 complaints and several tapes made on five separate occasions,,,,all were made by hammies, every single last lovin' one of them.......

>Now you have proof of this

A record exists....

> How?

How do I have proof? Personally, I don't have proof.....but the FCC does, a hammie club does, several hammies do, and it's readily accessible. The hammies are more than wiling to share their incidental run-ins with the infamous but touched N8.....have you bothered to contact anybody prior to making your selective supported opinion of disdain for the FCC known?
You, N8, and Lelnad already attested that you disbelieve what the FCC posts and claims....no need to refer you back to them, unless, of course, you are looking to them for an example of suport for your position and agenda, then you cite them.
Try the hammie club for starters,,,,make certain you share the information you receive....
,,,,,,,,

Frasso? Oh, I see, your clueless identity game is surfacing as an involuntary way of coping when cornfused along with the need for personalization of those whom you can't debate intelligently (communication deficit).

,,,,,

>Did he speak to Riley or FCC?

(shrug)

the feds tuned in to our foul-mouthed chicken-hawk on the remote possibility they could copy him, and lo and behold,,,,,,,they did, he was busted, warned, and treated fairly.

>Again you know this how?

Why, in the same manner you and your bud "knew" about the cb bust that never happened in Philly. As you once alluded,,just because you are unable to disprove the claim.......

>Or are you just giving us lip service as usual?

No more than y'alls claims about the Philly cber....amazing. Quite illustrative of a directly paralleled situation, is it not? Ahh,,nuthin' like the sweet sound of your hammie hypocrisy being demonstrated...

There was not only many hammie witnesses to N8's blatant disregard of communication law and infractions, but an FCC employee was directly involved with his case.
Poor Dogie thought he was the target of a conspiracy and still thinks he was wrongly singled out and framed.
Lelnad went to bat for Dogie, inferring his innocence, as that was the same time frame period that Lelnad was taped breaking the law....he ceased ALL radio activity for a short time when N8 was popped, hypothesizing correctly that he may have been targeted for enforcement activity as well and, possibly recorded.

>Again there is proof of this to be found where?

Some things are self-apparent and self-evident for the non-criminally insane. Permit us to examine the law of probablity. Lelnad has accessed this group through many, many different services...all yanked for TOS violations, (such as the murder threat he made toward me that I recently shared with y'all) and is well known as an angry, nocode, supporter of what you laughingly and fondly prefer to hold on to for posterity and refer to as the "akc", and has a history of agitating cbers and expressing his lack of self-control for the same. Now, you may prefer to concoct your own pathetic storyline concerning his fall from grace and self-ostracizing, much as you did when N8 was listed in the rain report, but the rest of us prefer to accept the FCC reports and field investigation files as "proof".

>Or you just have a lot of hambo friends?

But of course. Let me ask you something, does that question have something to do with you being a six meter jitterbug?

TW,

As you correctly observed, it has been on the rain report and on ARRL's website. Click on news and bulletins, then "Special interest topics" for "FCC Enforcement". He'll have to scroll about 2 years of reports, but it's there. I counted about 21 warnings against truckers up this year (not counting the hams got in dutch for "freebanding". The info IS there if one wants to look for it. There are more recent ones on the way.....

I SAID sometimes a good product or service can bring business to your door, but it may not be long lasting or something to that effect. Your part time shop may well spring to full time if advertised.... More people would know you're there. Then too, it depends on the product offered and competition.
IF you have another shop offering the same and they do as good in service or product then you'll have to advertise to keep the customers remembering your name. IF they're offering sales (ADVERTISING) and you aren't - don't tell me some people won't lean their direction.

As for Rolls Royce, Bloomingdales, Caterpillar, etc NOT advertising, I think you better look again. I have seen ads for them. Even if it is a 10 second spot which is the shortest spot I'm aware of to be bought for Radio/TV, it is an ad none the less. Not all ads are immediately apparent to the "general" public either. You advertise a product to the sector of the public you feel you can get the most bang for your buck from. Advertising IS important... You're saying the above named companies don't have good quality, that is why they advertise? Care to compare check books? They obviously must be doing something right. Sorry dude, your explanation doesn't hold water with me. Aside from my personal life and business, I'm also involved with a multi million dollar business and advertising for us and others like us is a key to the customers dollars. With deregulation, even the utilities have to advertise to retain or gain customers now days. So we're all wrong and you're all right because you got a bit lucky? I don't think so. If you're so correct, maybe you should apply for the Commerce Secretary's job, join some agency, start your own agency or write a book to help others be like you.... Lou/Tech@DP.NET

Jerry, Twisted was talking about 21 violation by N8WMM, not 21 violations by truckers. He claims and i quote

" When the info submitted by the rats is reviewed, the feds make a decision as to persue the incident or not. In N8's case, the feds had 21 complaints and several tapes made on five separate occasions,,,,all were made by hammies, every single last lovin' one of them."

Yup, I've read slews of threads on that subject. I try to stay away from the insults and flames but I won't stand for typecasting on BOTH sides (you know the every ham is a 4-eyed geek vs.
the trailer park lower class(?), etc). All I gotta do is listen to 3865 on when a "certain" ham gets drunk. They went at it a few nights ago with plenty of GD's and FU's and GDSOB's, etc. "You can't regulate stupid" ---Quote from Riley

Well, not quite. After all, Amateur Radio has always been supposed to self-policing. Often people take that at as "snitching" or ratting out.. But there has to be a limit to what is going to be allowed, even like kids, and if there weren't any OOs (I wouldn't wanna be one), where do we draw the line. IMHO, not ENOUGH has been done to smack down the hams that shouldn't be licensed in the first place.

I will say that when I say something, I am like Popeye the Sailor: I say whut I means, and means whut I says. Sure, I can be wrong--and often AM. On the whole, you must admit that most of what I have said has come true--just not fast enough to suit me. I 've put up with quite a bit of flames myself, but I stuck to my guns. I have the same information as most other folks on the 'net, at hamfests (ARRL forums), and emails and phone calls with Riley Hollingsworth. And, unlike some claim that I claimed to be some special "friend" of RH, that is only partial truly: I am acquainted with him just enough to know who he is and can call my name as well. "Special" access or special friendship, No.

But, to answer your question, yes. I try to find out all I can, verify that it is correct, and post it.
If it sounds "fishy" I wouldn't post it, or I would qualify it with a
"maybe".

some (most) of these "others" you appear to be speaking for

I am not nearly as concerned with CB "busts" as I am- doing what I can to protect the spectrum that belongs to all who work for it. All I want is for those who operate on the hams bands to stop doing so illegally, OR get the needed ticket.

I can't argue with that! I also said (many times) that illegal is illegal, wrong is wrong, right is right, and the ticket doesn't matter. He deserves what he gets. I NEVER get on frequencies for which I am not authorized; I have to much to lose. Those that boldly'

It IS the reason that they have been slow to act. Flying J is still very much on the table when the legal eagles get their ducks in a row. (R. Hollingsworth at Charlotte, NC hamfest forum)

Well, not quite. The fading cycle is not the issue. After all, the trucks will STILL be there, and hams will still be listening. When a driver is cruising down the Interstate, it could be that somebody might be listening. I know I will be. Every trip I make on interstates, I listen for any truck that might "hail" me on 10 Meters. If I can positively ID the truck, I will document it.
I' ve also passed on some, too, because I just wasn't sure. The key is getting hams involved-- which FCC and ARRL are trying to do. Monitoring is not hard at all.

Try Predator 10K by Cow Town
Kid in Texas if you dont want a DaveMade.
Neither DaveMade or Predators are welded. Cow Town is working on a triple coil that is only 3-5 ft tall but shoots skip like a winner! Davemade's are single coil only, got one. Predator 10K's are available in single, double and triple. I have 2 doubles and we shipped a single to Australia. All accept a K-40 or Wilson stinger for tuning. Dont know where you could get a Mr Coile antenna. A bit different, unique and effective. Very heavy and wind loads may be touchy.

It worked for Stan for over 40 years. How do you define "long lasting"?

>you're there.

I already turn people away. I could go full-time if I wanted and I wouldn't need to advertise, but I wouldn't have the same level of benefits (medical, dental, etc) that I get from my full-time job. I will probably go full-time when I retire.

You forgot one very important point: IF the product or service you provide is superior to the businesses that advertise, you don't need to. Proof: the fact that there are many hamburger joints that don't belong to a major franchise. Further proof: many of them stay in business with little or no advertising.

I have never seen ads for any of my examples. However, I'm sure that I can come up with a much longer list of examples if you really want.

> Not all ads are immediately apparent to the

If you decide to advertise, logistics is one of the fundamentals of marketing. What's your point?

> Advertising IS >important... You're saying the above named companies don't have good >quality, that is why they advertise? Care to compare check books? They

Are you saying that margin is the only indicator of the quality of a product? In some cases it is, but in most cases it is the indicator of the quality of the marketing, DESPITE the quality of the product. McDonald's is a classic example. Want proof? Go eat there. They suck. The hamburgers taste like over-processed plastic instead of beef, the chicken chunks taste like wood chips soaked in artificial chicken broth, and God only knows if those are real potatoes that are drained from all that brine and grease. The only reason people eat there is because people are gullible and are easily persuaded by slick marketing gimmicks. If they didn't advertise they would never survive.

(If you really want to see what goes into their 'hamburger', attend your local cattle auction. I went to one in Idaho when I was in high school. After all the quality steer had been auctioned off they started selling off the rest in lots. And guess who's rep was buying up the most flea-bitten, mange-ridden lots? Yep, you guessed it -- McDonald's!)

That's primarily for the stockholders. Too many companies are focusing on their stock values and neglecting their products/services. Again, there is plenty of proof, not the least of which is the Enron fiasco. Lately it has been the airlines going bankrupt. And yes, even the utilities are in hot water, including a major utility just right down the road from my house (Avista) who got caught with their hands in the Enron cookie jar.

>help others be like you.... Lou/Tech@DP.NET

It's not luck, Lou; it's hard work, perseverence, attention to detail, and all those other values that add up to make a quality product or service. People leave my shop with the -confidence- of knowing that whatever they brought in will work just as well, if not better than before. They -know- that I do the best work in town because they never have to bring in the same equipment twice. When they want something fixed, they want it fixed right the first time, and they know that I will do the job. And if it's not worth fixing I'll tell them instead of charging an arm and a leg to fix their junk. I might lose a job or two because of my integrity, but it pays off when they tell their buddies.

Advertising -might- help you get off the ground, and it -might- give you an edge against your competition, but the decision is usually made based upon a very subjective cost/benefit analysis by someone that doesn't care if your business flies or not, just that you pay the bill for the analysis and advertising. OTOH, what I have learned -- by example and by experience -- is that the advertising dollar is best spent elsewhere. You may have learned different, and that might be fine for you. But the fact is that advertising is not necessary to run a successful business.

Want even more proof? Read up on Edison's enormous advertising campaign against Westinghouse; i.e, the battle between AC and DC power transmission. Edison spent millions upon millions to discredit Westinghouse's AC power scheme, going from town to town (on trains that used Westinghouse air brakes) with his electric chair, executing small animals and even one human. What made the difference? The Chicago World's Fair: Westinghouse lit the town for half the cost of Edison's bid. Westinghouse did the job and he did it well, proving once again that quality advertises itself.

Want even MORE proof? Hop on ebay and other sites and look at the prices of military radios, which were almost never advertised commercially. Some have commercial equivalents and some have collector value; but disregarding those, many military radios are highly sought after ONLY because of their quality. And that's not just limited to radios, but to other military equipment as well.

I can provide a whole lot more examples if you need them.

Hi Gang,

I feel really weird here posting this, but it's related to this service and it's got my puzzled.

I recent started a new job driving and I'm driving an older freightliner.

and... I wanted to put my older style cobra 148 in there to use to find out if the scales are open, where the bears are at, ect......

Anyhow, I got a 4.5 ft francis antenna (new), New coax (18ft), New mirror mount, I got the radio all mounted and power ran, and when I went to check the SWR, it was in the red, and I couldn't hear nothing. Now, I run this same 148 in my truck with....get this, an old junk radio shack mag mount with no problems!

Now what in the world could be causing a high SWR on a brand new antenna out of the package?

I've been told here locally that the Mirror might need to be grounded... Any truth to that?

I need a CB in this truck, Badly... and I really don't want to run copper wire every which way...

Any ideas?

Thanks,

The Gear Grinder Guy!

Yes, there's truth to that, make sure the mirror is grounded. Then tune the antenna.

No, he wouldn't; the UK uses the same 40 channels as we do, plus FM on "uppers". New Zealand is the only place on earth that uses the 26 MHz range for CB. Maybe this is a case where Lou Franklin could help? :)

Use braid, crimped and soldered terminals on the ends, and star washers. Do it right the first time. You can get tubing to put the braid in if it's too ugly.

Keep it short. Google the rec.radio.cb archives.

Maybe the "Robin Williams Peace Plan" was an "Internet Hoax" but the thoughts are still there..... No I'm not being "lead around".... I've thought that BEFORE and I STILL think it.... And I happen to know, "I" am not alone. We need to stop worrying about everyone else and start doing for US. All of the candidates talk Economy.... QUIT sending OUR Billions and jobs over seas and keep it here. THAT will help the economy.

That's all well and good, IF it's true..but you have remarkable failure affect you in your daily routine and work". Your claims are suspect, at best..

>Success in business has little to do with

Poppycock. Many, MANY excellent mom and pop stores and services across the country were put out of business by the Wally Worlds. Their quality of service had nothing to do with it,,their inability to match Wally World's pricing had everything to do with it. SO much for more of your voodoo.

And all the quality in the world isn;t enough to keep one in business when another store opens down the street selling the clone of such a product for a substantial amount of less money. There simply isn;t enough people willing to purchase a more expensive item in a scenario like this to keep the small businesses afloat.

(And that also explains why McDonalds, Kmart and Verizon must spend billions in advertising every year.)

Allow me,,,,,,your "attention to detail" has been illustrated by yourself many times to be non-existent. Your mannerisms in dealing with others on this group has ascertained you most certainly do not handle customer relations or service yourself, as you have no tact nor sense of respect for any one that disagrees with your position. One can not remain in business for long acting that way. You must have someone who picks up the televisions and then brings them to you to work on in your

LOL...your "work" isn;t even to be found nor mentioned among who's who in the cb world of repair....not one person (well, maybe now a shill, will :)
has ever mentioned your name, shop, work, or anything else. Truckers, whether you like to admit it or not, play a large part in getting the word around concerning quality shops and techs. In Washington, you simply aren't to be found or mentioned among who's who,,there are several big guns and hammers in and around Seattle,,..perhaps one of them will mention you at some point.

You obviously never had the honor of dealing with a high quality PR or advertising firm, as you are spinning square wheels and know not what you espouse. A quality firm will often take a percentage of your INCREASED sales for a defined period, usually stipulated in the contract, and is reduced as time passes or for the duration of the contract (time the firm remains retained by your business)

If you can manage to quote a single example that is comparable to your mom and pop businesses you speak of, sure,,but there will alwyas be an exception to the rule,,always,,it's part of life..but in every business school and college today, it is taught that advertising is an integral part of the business world. Bullshit. Many are sought after by collectors because of their shelves everywhere for sale,,after all, you maintain that quality needs no advertising.

Agreed, but at what expense, and what is there to show for it? A bunch of pissed off hammies who have been snitching on each other. ..all I see is hammie against hammie everywhere one looks

>Well, not quite. After all, Amateur Radio has

You must admit,,,there IS an element that does enjoy the "snitching" and "ratting" element.

Hey agreed,,,,one needn't look far to find widespread agreement that the nocode opened the door for a trainload of scurvy, vile folks.

>While it

>may be funny to ridicule and mock,

There is no ridicule or mocking of such behavior, just public scorn.

>stuff I (and others) said IS true.

No. Some stuff you said has been true concerning enforcement, I will give you that...but you appear to be a little more concerned about such actions and as such, position yourself to learn about such matters and actions.....

to access such information and therefore, remain ignornat on the subjects merely because they are unable to locate such.

some (most) of these "others" you appear to be speaking for do not have a clue and simply fall in behind your comments and parrot them like good sheople without knowing what is actually happening...again, a clear cut example are several claims of cb "busts" made by these "others" in our midst. Would you not agree?

>I am not nearly as concerned with CB "busts"

>as I am- doing what I can to protect the >spectrum that belongs to all who work for it. All >I want is for those who operate on the

I understand your position, but not your avoiding of the question, but I respect your right to exercise the choice not to comment.

You also warned against overzealous hammies playing the enforcement game on the freeband, Jerry...now what happened...?....exactly what you said would happen....a backlash against hammies and now they are getting popped a dime a dozen. As the old saying goes, be careful what you ask for, you just may get it

>I can't argue with that! I also said (many times) >that illegal is illegal, wrong is wrong, >right is right, and the ticket doesn't matter.

Exactly. I don't have any argument with that. What is a self-made problem for some, is that certain "elements" feel certain parties somehow "owe" them a reason or explanation for their actions or behavior that doesn't concern them...self-made problems,,no?

> He deserves what he gets. I NEVER get >on frequencies for which I am not authorized; I >have to much to lose.

And you may very well be honest in that approach..one needs only mention the certain element in here that has parroted the same thing to us jerry, only to vehemently take the opposite approach when one of their own is caught breaking the law...I give you N8 and all that defended him..the usual catlick group.

>Those that boldly'

>go where angels fear to trod always amaze >me.

Me too,,,the boldness is what gets ya' popped..stay low key, don't create a problem,,and a hammie will find you,,no, that's not right,,stay low key, create no problems, be courteous,,and voila! No problems...

>It is just that >we don't often hear about what is being

>something

>does come down the pike. Me? It won't bother

>me at all;

Me neither. I don't want the law changed at all. The errant hypocrites are geting theirs, and by the FCC numbers of enforcement, there appear to be an endless supply of such, would you not agree?

>No argument from me.

And the majority appear to be hammies, going by enforcement records. Again, would you not agree?

Actually, for anyone who has paid attention to their moves, they are more rightfully concerned about cleaning their own back yard, based on the sheer number of hammies being popped for not managing to stay within the rules and laws. Lead by example...

>Well, I try

>Mr Hollingsworth made a promise

Old news. Duckworth has been involved for a long time, and all bureaucrats make promises,,it's part of their unwritten job description.

C'mon Jerry, call it what it is: a "loophole" that a few non-enlightened hammies in here claimed didn't exist. Gee,,,I have had this conversation many times concerning why it is legal to purchase such radios via this loophole and have been cursed and attacked (by these same hammie lids you claim) as if I somehow made the law instead of merely talking about taking advantage of it,,lol. Again, you thoughts.....?

>It IS the reason that they have been slow to >act. Flying J is still very much on the table >Hollingsworth at Charlotte, NC hamfest forum)

adding to that, of successful enforcement toward cbers by the FCC was calculated perfectly concerning such....what better time to claim some victory when the dx is rapidly fading? Some of us recognize the cycle (of cb enforcement) Jerry, and have seen it before with other administrations when the DX is high on eleven. The claims and lip service remain the same, only the characters change, and some old-time lids manage to perform on cue, cycle after cycle...predictable.

>That, if there IS indeed a problem, will be >handled, too.

Only through an act of Congress, and that ain't gonna happen this session of Congress, or next, 'cause with the DX gone, the cantankerous lids will have only themselves to fight with..no more skipland cbers to lose their dignity, ego, and sanity to.

>Well, not quite. The fading cycle is not the >issue.

I think it is. The complaints are twentyfold during DX cycles compared to times of little or no skip.

>Monitoring is not hard at all.

It reeks of the spy recruitment attempt the government is employing,,cable guys, meter readers, telephone employees are all encouraged to apply at the CIA..they have an online application now for anyone who wants to be thought of as,,well, something that is apparently missing in their life, now. The government has, and is becoming more successsful with each passing day in desensitizing the public to being resolved that your neighbors can and will spy on you, and that it is ok, if one has nothing to hide..the very idea goes against what the country was founded on and illustrates how far removed some individuals are from such founded liberties, and how willing they are to give up those rights for what they falsely perceive as "the right thing to do".

>For truck drivers, well, they will be surprised

>as well. Then we will have to listen to them

>whine and moan about their "rights", and

>Dave/Debbie listen to their 6th "plank" crack

>and

>creak. LOL!

Despite claims and posturing by certain hammies,, the whining and complaining and such about what you say has never materialized here, as the scalliwags responsible for your dilemmas are to be found nowhere among our little safe haven of a playground we call rec.radio.cb. It's why you took this argument to a truckers forum a few years ago,but you will find no truckers here, or anyone for that matter, taking issue with legal operation.

Thanks for the thoughts, Jerry. Have yourself a great weekend.

TW,
As you correctly observed, it has been on the rain report and on ARRL's website. Click on news and bulletins, then "Special interest topics" for "FCC Enforcement". He'll have to scroll about 2 years of reports, but it's there. I counted about 21 warnings against truckers up this year (not counting the hams got in dutch for "freebanding". The info IS there if one wants to

Jerry, Twisted was talking about 21 violation by N8WMM, not 21 violations by truckers. He claims and i quote

" When the info submitted by the rats is reviewed, the feds make a decision as to persue the incident or not. In N8's case, the feds had 21 complaints and several tapes made on five separate occasions,,,,all were

LOL...Lelnad sent me an email on the second day of his suspension, showing me the same "TimNebo" remark. His juvenile tendency at attempts to make me somehow care what another internet stranger thinks, illustrates just who is crying for who, and who is concerned with who. Besides that, Lelnad's snail trail from comcast is now different....anyone with a webtv gets a "code" from a comcast account post or email, sort of like y'all get headers,,only this trail can't be duped or forged in any manner...the first letter(s) of the "code" represents a very significant ID tool, exclusive to webtv. If you're that interested in interpreting it and just dying to know what it means,,,contact MSN,,they have a tech support dude that is employed just for this..helps curtail forged MSN addys....
My guess (and man, have I been right on lately) is his suspension was actually another pulled account and he scrambled to find some sucker to open another comcast account for him.....makes perfect sense and is probably true, but it don't matter...his trail is snailed, and different, Watch his behavior...after all, y'all must "police" yourselves..and Lelnad, you must really love me..I mean, to take time out of your day to email ME, but claim you avoid me posting in the group 'cause your dad is ill,..hahaha! Yea, right! Too bad everything you say is bullshit.

HAM RADIO IN SPACE: TWO-MAN EXPEDITION 7 HAM RADIO CREW ARRIVES AT ISS

A two ham Expedition 7 crew arrived at the International Space Station on April 28th to replace the crew currently on board. Amateur Radio Newsline's Roy Neal, K6DUE, has the rest of the story:

There are five men in the crew aboard the International Space Station. Those numbers ARE different. Now that U S Space Shuttles are temporarily out of commission, the Russian Soyuz has been pressed into service as a ferry. Much of its space is filled with food and supplies and the crew size has been cut from 3 down to 2 for the time being.

Two men...cosmonaut Yuri Malenchenko, RK3DUP and astronaut Ed Lu, KC5WKJ, have arrived....the first teamever to get to the I S S aboard a Russian spacecraft. They will replace 3 men...Commander Ken Bowersox, KD5JBP, Don Pettit, KD5MDT, and Nikolai Budarin, RV3FB. That team is scheduled to fly back to earth on the third of May, using a Soyuz that has been docked in orbit since the Columbia shuttle disintegrated killing all seven people on board.

A NASA investigation apppears to be centering on a piece of foam insulation as the cause of disaster...foam that broke loose during liftoff, hitting the Shuttle's left wing.

A final report on the accident may be several more months in coming. Until then Russia's Soyuz is the only crew transport to and from the i s s and the International Space Program has slowed to a mere trickle of its former self. Space officials of the 9 countries directly concerned with building and flying the shuttle are optimistic, saying the delay gives them time better to prepare for the very complex missions of the next ten years.

Roy Neal, K6DUE

The two man Expedition 7 crew will spend the next six months on-orbit conducting scientific experiments. Because of the reduced workload they may also have more time for additional ham radio operations and especially school contacts from space. (ARNewsline™ from published reports)

ENFORCEMENT: AMATEUR AUXILIARY ASKED TO ASSIST FCC IN 10 METER CLEAN-UP

Back on Mother Earth, the FCC has asked the assistance of the ARRL' s Amateur Auxiliary as part of a clean-up of illegal users of the 10 meter band. In a memorandum issued on April 28th, FCC Special Counsel Riley Hollingsworth, K4ZDH, asks the Auxiliary's help for the next 6 months in identifying any unlicensed operation using the 10 meter Amateur spectrum.

From May through October Auxiliary members will be tasked with monitoring the band to determine whether interlopers are domestic business entities. This includes trucking companies, truckers or other individuals who are not licensed to be in the band or simply not licensed at all.

The FCC is not requesting that Auxiliary members provide direction finding. Hollingsworth does ask that where possible that Auxiliary members provide the names and cities of the operators, and license plate numbers and state if the interfering signal is coming from a vehicle.

The project has been assigned case number 2003-583 and Hollingsworth does ask Auxiliary members to use their best judgment as to whether to include tape recordings of what they monitor. Authority to use the ham radio volunteers in this investigation comes under the terms of long standing agreement between the FCC's Field Operations Bureau and the American Radio Relay League. (FCC)

ENFORCEMENT: 11 METER OPERATION BRINGS FCC WRATH TO IDAHO HAMS

Meantime, the FCC has let a trio of Idaho amateurs know that unlicensed operation outside Amateur Radio frequencies could lead to revocation of their ham tickets. Bruce Tennant, K6PZW, has more:

The ARRL Letter reports that FCC Special Counsel Riley Hollingsworth, K4ZDH, recently wrote three Boise amateurs, citing allegations that they had transmitted without a license on several frequencies near the 11 meter Blass D CB band.

Letters went out March 17 to Dave Every, KD7QAS; John F. Hail, KD7QAW; and Tom M. Sjoberg, KD7RCS. Every holds a General ticket, while Hail and Sjoberg are Technician licensees.

According to Hollingsworth, the Commission has information indicating that the three hams transmitted without a license on 26.350, 27.420 and 27.700 MHz using SSB and SSTV. These three frequencies involved are above and below the 11 meter Citizens Radio Band.

Hollingsworth letter pointed out that in addition to the possibility of license revocation proceedings being undertaken, fines for unlicensed operation could also be imposed. These normally range from $7500 to $10,000.

For the Amateur Radio Newslione, I'm Bruce Tennant, K6PZW, reporting.

Hollingsworth says he understands that the unlicensed operations have ceased. (ARRL)

ENFORCEMENT: KANSAS STATION OWNER FINED

The FCC has fined Maria L. Salazar, licensee of Station KTCM - FM in Kingman, Kansas, and owner of an antenna structure near Spivey, Kansas, thirty-nine thousand dollars. This, for what the Commission says are willful and repeated violations of the Communications Act and of the Commission's Rules. Amateur Radio Newsline's Bill Pasternak, WA6ITF, has the details:

Specifically, the regulatory agency says that Maria L. Salazar operated a radio station from an unauthorized location and that she failed to maintain prescribed obstruction lighting on an antenna structure. But thats not all. Te FCC says that she also failed to install and maintain Emergency Alert System equipment at the station, failed to maintain a main studio at an authorized location and failed to maintain a public inspection file.

By way of background, on July 18, 2002, the Commission issued a Notice of Apparent Liability for Forfeiture -- better known as a fine -- in the amount of $39,000 to Salazar. Although she received a copy of the N-A-L, she never filed a response. So the FCC has now affirmed the fine and ordered Salizar to -- pay up.

The FCC has instructed its Enforcement Bureau to do a follow-up investigation to determine whether Salazar has come into compliance. If not, further enforcement action will be taken. That could include the possibility of a license revocation proceeding. (FCC)

FCC BEGINS INQUIRY REGARDING BROADBAND OVER POWER LINES

The FCC has also launched an inquiry into the use of existing power lines to send and receive broadband data by carrier current as some old timers might call it.

According to Bob Gonsett's CGC Communicator, two different Broadband over Power Line or B-P-L techniques are being considered. "Access B-P-L" uses 1,000 to 40,000 volt power lines to bring Internet and other broadband data to homes and offices. "In-House B-P-L" uses existing electric utility wiring to network computers and printers - as well as smart appliances - within a building.

CGC notes that today's chip sets for this application are capable of generating RF out to at least 80 MHz using advanced modulation techniques and high data rates. The question of radio frequency interference to authorized spectrum users including Amateur Radio will be an important consideration as these systems are looked at by the FCC.

More is at the FCC's website at:

HAM RADIO TESTING: NCVEC REMOVES PSK31 QUESTION FROM POOL

The NCVEC Question Pool Committee has withdrawn the use of a test question has in the Technician pool scheduled for use starting July 1st. The querstion designated number T2B17 deals with PSK-31 communications technology.

Again, this is for the new Technician class exam that goers into service on July 1st. The committee says that it apologizes for any inconvenience. (NCVEC)

RADIO RULES: FCC REFUSES TO EXPAND THE NCE FM BAND

The FCC has declined to expand the Non-Commercial Educational FM or NCE broadcast. This, band beyond its current limits of 88.1 to 91.9 MHz.

Specifically, the FCC says that television Channel 6 which runs from from 82 to 88 MHz will not be used for NCE radio. Nor will the upper end of the current NCE band be expanded to 93.9 Mhz.

That said, the agency has indicated the expansion issue could be revisited in another FCC proceeding. (CGC Communicator)

HAM RADIO IN CYBERSPACE: MIZUHO WEBSITE BACK UP

KU4QD says over the VHF Reflector that the unofficial English language Mizuho website is back up. This site is dedicated to Mizuho built ham radio gear and contains a wealth of reference material that's hard to find anywhere else.

For those of you who don't know about Mizuho, it is a family run business started by a former Trio engineer over 30 years ago. The company is best known for its HF and VHF SSB and CW monoband handhelds. These were manufactured from 1981 until 2002. The company also made some VHF base and portable SSB/CW rigs.

KU4QD says that some of the manuals and schematics haven't been uploaded yet, but everything else is there, including more new pictures and specs for various Mizuho gear. And , oh yes. You will find the website at www.mizuhoradio.com (VHF Reflector)

HAPPENING AT HAMVENTION 2003r - THE ANNUAL TOWN MEETING

And Amateur Radio Newsline is again teaming up with the Hamvention to bring you another in its ongoing series of Ham Radio Town Meetings. Ken Lock, N8PJN, has the details:

This years topic is how to make Amateur Radio more friendly for kids so that they will stay in the hobby. Our keynote speaker is Mr. Audio himself -- Bob Heil, K9EID. Bob has been a ham since he was a youngster and has some definite ideas on this subject.

Other presenters include New York Educator Carole Perry, WB2MGP, Philadelphia KYW Radio personality Mark Abrams, NT3V and his son - 2002 Young Ham of the Year award recipient Josh Abramowicz, KB3GWY. Josh will cover scouting and its relationship to ham radio youth.

From Florida Richard Paczkowski, Jr., KF4BIA, will be joining us. Richard was our 1998 Young Ham of the Year award winner. He will talk about ways the Internet can be used to interest kids in the hobby.

Others on the speakers roster are Gary Pearce, KN4AQ, of the ARRL's Public Relations Committee and Keith Glispie, WA6TFD, of Suite Sixteen Post in Burbank California. Glispie is a true Amateur Radio success story that took him from a teenage ham to the co-owner of one of televisions most sought after editing facilities.

Also joining us will be John Creel, WB3GXW, who is the outgoing Chairman of the NCVEC and 2003 Radio Amateur of the Year Larry "Tree" Tyree, N6TR, talking about the ham radio children's holiday he created called Kids Day.

And as always there will be door prizes. This year the goodies include an 2 meter HT courtesy of Alinco and a mini-bom-box AM, FM, Cassette radio from Jensen.

So, please join us at Hamvention 2003 for this special session dedicated to making ham radio a friendlier world for the younger set. Rember, kids are the future of the hobby.

For the Amateur Radio Newsline, I'm Ken Locke, N8PJN.

HAM RADIO MOVIES: FIELD DAY `71 - REDUX

Two weeks ago we told you that the famed Palisades Amateur Radio Club movie "Field Day 1971" had surfaced after almost two decades in hiding. Now, Southern California hams can get to see it again on Wednesday evening, May 14th. This, in a special screening hosted by the Santa Clarita Amateur Radio Club and Amateur Radio Newsline.

"Field Day 1971" was produced by George Hively, W6GRH, -- then WA6YEA -- over thirty years ago. His half-hour movie is a tongue-in-cheek look at the way one of the regions most famous radio clubs of the 20th century held forth annually to conquer the vagaries of the Ionesphere while having a jolly old time. Or, was it just having a jolly old time with some radios thrown in as an excuse for a hilltop party? Only this movie knows for sure!

The venue chosen for the screening is the City Council Chambers in the City of Santa Clarita California at 7 p.m. Pacific Daylight time. Talk in will be on the 146.79 W6JW repeater. The repeater uses an access tone is 123.0 Hz.

There is only room for about 190 people, so seating will be first-come, first served, with one expeption. If you are a former Palisades Amateur Radio Club member and want to reserve a seat please e-mail wa6itf@arnewsline.org. For more information on the Santa Clarita Amateur Radio Club and the meeting, take your web browser over to www.w6jw.org and click on the word "announcements." (ARNewsline™)

RADIO RECORDS: FIRST GM TO YU ON 136 KHX

Another new record has been set on 136 Kilohertz. This, as a ham in Scotland contacts his counterpart in Yugoslavia. Jeramy Boot, G4NJH, has more:

Simon Lewis, GM4PLM, completed the first Scotland to Yugoslavia LF contact on the 20th of April. At 2228 UTC on Sunday, Simon had a two-way contact with Teo, YU7AR, on 137.7kHz.

Simon was using equipment left behind by David Bowman, G0MRF, when the UK 73kHz record was broken, as reported on GB2RS two weeks ago.

GM4PLM is currently the only known GM active on the 136kHz band and at present is using a 125-metre long wire antenna. He plans to improve the antenna system over the summer in preparation for trans-Atlantic tests next winter.

Jeramy Boot, G4NJH

After completeing the QSO, Lewis paused to thank G0MRF and G3GRO for their help, and for the donation of equipment to allow him to become active on the 136kHz band. (GB2RS)

THAT FINAL ITEM: TALKING TO A NOT SO SILENT S.K.

And finally this week, have you ever talked with a Silent Key? Believe it or not we have. His name is Ray Ortgiesen, WF1B, and last week he was named as an honored Silent Key by the planners of this years Dayton Hamvention. But as you will hrear, Ray is very much alive, well and and delighting the honor:

Ortgiesen: "I'm enjoying it so far. Its been quite a gas to get phone calls and e-mail's from so many people concerned about my health."

Why is the not so Silent Key recieving all these health and welfare inquiries? Well, heres the story in a nut-shell.

Back in the 1980's, in the Neanderthal days of home computing, Ray wrote RTTY. This program soon became the leading contest software for computerized radio teletype. And last week the Dayton Hamvention decided to honor him by nameing him as one of a group of Silent Key Award recipients. But Ray as we already know, Ray is still very much among the living and his first chore was letting everyone know he was still here.

Ortgeisen: "Its been fun. I did send out some e-mails as soon as I found out that it was publicized. I sent out e-mails on the of the major reflectors grearting them from the other side and leetting them know that I was fine, and obviously there was a mistake made."

--

Mistake or not, Ray is now an official walking, talking and breathing Silent Key. So we asked him if he had any special wish for the future of the hobby:

--

Ortgeisen: "I hope with the coming of digital and especially computerization that we can keep people interested in radio."

--

And as to the award itself? WF1B, had these -- er -- parting words:

--

Ortgeisen: "Its nice to know that folks considered me for this award, and I am happier to know it being alive, than not ever having known this fact had I indeed been a Silent Key."

--

How the mistake nameing Ortgiesen as a Silent Key Award winner is not clear. But no matter. Ray says that he' kind of enjoying the honor of being this years Dayton Hamvention -- not so silent -- "Silent Key." (ARNewsline™)

He's not invisible..he;s sitting right there,,,,just 'cause you are Projection has always been your problem, attempting to project to another what their reality should be.

Magnificent failure, indeed.

LOL...I have dscarded your claims with facts..you should have done some research instead of blindly shooting off about something you didn't know.....e
You've proved only what a unyielding, limited person you are,,,,allowing your anger and confusion over identity to have you come apart at the seams...see, it;s not about you, or me, although you try in vain to make it personal,but you have reduced yourself to such levels that you will never comprehend such..it has always been about the claims set forth.... your cries of anonymity and identity inquiries have affected your sanity to the point that you have no choice in the matter anymore,,,,,your posts MUST focus on me,,,,,,,as usual. Discrediting your bullshit has never been personal.....,that you attempt to sling it, get called on it, and prefer to get personal with the one that showed you are full of shit, is your problem, not anyone elses, and surely belongs to only you, not "we". Now away with your problems of projection...

> You just can't leave me alone, Twist!

LOL..it's not YOU, it's your claims and bullshit, but it's not personal..really. You can pretend to be anyone you want to be here, honest, not a person will care...it's what you post that is the meat of the matter..and in all your incarnations, including this one that has you hopping mad, you have failed to comprehend that it isn't about "who" you are, it's about your specific claims that are dissected, one by one with facts. None, and I mean none of your claims, especially concerning your personal attacks on those present who have dared disagree with or enlighten you knowledge, have ever had an trace of truth...just unfounded blanket statements of generalities. Such attacks are served up by yourself, (note the pattern here) usually when you post something utterly ridiculous that is disproved with one or two lazy clicks of the mouse....in a desperate but pathetc effort to change the subject from that of your incompetency to one of an inquiry and witch hunt directed at the one who taught you better.
It's all you know,,

LOL..Lelnad is the only one that has ever accused me of being angry..maybe Hall has, I can't remember....(go check) but,,,excuse me if I giggle while attempting to read your dribble, on being taken seriously, from your "new" access. Couple this with your difficulties and failures to get anyone to recognze this identity you are now obsessed with (in addition to myself), and you're just about an all around loser...as always, glad I could bring a smile to your dark, dank cave. Have yourself a great weekend.....lid.

A lot of RV present a special problem for CB. The unusual ground plane cause th impedance of the antenna to be unusually low. The fix for this is to add a 6 ft piece of rg59 at the antenna then finish the run with 50 ohm coax of your choice. However you may or may not have this situation. You shouldnt need a tuner, there is something wrong either what I mentioned or something else.

I hope it's not solid wire. Stranded will flex a lot more before breaking.
Braid is even better. If you run to the east coast, I've got a bunch of braid from some old bad RG-8. You can have a few feet.

That's all well and good, IF it's true..but you have remarkable failure in backing what you claim, let alone your own business where "RF pirates affect you in your daily routine and work". Your claims are suspect, at best..

>Success in business has little to do with >advertising or location, it's all about the

Poppycock. Many, MANY excellent mom and pop stores and services across the country were put out of business by the Wally Worlds. Their quality of service had nothing to do with it,,their inability to match Wally World's pricing had everything to do with it. SO much for more of your voodoo.

And all the quality in the world isn;t enough to keep one in business when another store opens down the street selling the clone of such a product for a substantial amount of less money. There simply isn;t enough people willing to purchase a more expensive item in a scenario like this to keep the small businesses afloat.

(And that also explains why McDonalds, Kmart and Verizon must spend billions in advertising every year.)

yourself many times to be non-existent. Your mannerisms in dealing with others on this group has ascertained you most certainly do not handle customer relations or service yourself, as you have no tact nor sense of respect for any one that disagrees with your position. One can not remain in business for long acting that way. You must have someone who picks up the televisions and then brings them to you to work on in your garage..

>People leave my shop with the -confidence- of

LOL...your "work" isn;t even to be found nor mentioned among who's who in the cb world of repair....not one person (well, maybe now a shill, will :)
has ever mentioned your name, shop, work, or anything else. Truckers, whether you like to admit it or not, play a large part in getting the word around concerning quality shops and techs. In Washington, you simply aren't to be found or mentioned among who's who,,there are several big guns and hammers in and around Seattle,,..perhaps one of them will mention you at some point.

You obviously never had the honor of dealing with a high quality PR or advertising firm, as you are spinning square wheels and know not what you espouse. A quality firm will often take a percentage of your INCREASED sales for a defined period, usually stipulated in the contract, and is reduced as time passes or for the duration of the contract (time the firm remains retained by your business)

What "facts", Twisty? The only "fact" is that I have never seen ads from any of the organizations I mentioned. Maybe you have, but I haven't. And the fact is that none of those organizations, if they do indeed advertise, don't advertise very much, and certainly don't need to advertise at all. The fact is that the quality of their product advertises itself, which was my point (that you totally overlooked in your unbearable urge to prove me wrong).

Look! I will put it to you at the simplest level I feel you may understand. I have in my possession a copy of a response from the FCC office in Tampa, Fl. A sideband organization collected hundreds and hundreds of signatures to express their dismay at a club that exists here and whose sole mission is to jam, harrass, threaten, intimidate, dead-key and generally wreak havoc(that's chaos) on the airways to anyone who is not a member of this group. Members all have a minimum of 500 watts and a commitment to back each other, right or wrong. The response says that the FCC is inundated with high tech crime priorities(such as cellular phone cloning and the such. The only response they will take is of safety issues. This means repeated offenses and warnings of willful, wanton, and/or malicious interference of aviational communications. Don' believe me? Send a fax# and I would be more than happy to send you a copy that directly contradicts this bullshit you are spreading. Just because you read some shit in a magazine does not make it true. Take some time to research your subject.

Doubtful, since Twisty is a moron. Maybe you just need a couple more examples:

When was the last time you saw a recent ad from Hammarlund? Collins? National? Probably quite a while ago. But those radios are still in high demand because of their QUALITY, certainly not because of their advertising.

More along the lines of CB radios, lets take a look at Radio Shack's line over the years. All of the Realistics were made by other manufacturers. Many of them are considered junk, and many were indeed junk. But there were some that were made with quality, such as the TRC-453, TRC-490, etc, and were made by Uniden. BUT, some of the Uniden Realistics were junk as well. Still, all the radios sold because they came from Radio Shack (advertising), yet only some still have value (quality). So why does RS have such a bad rep? Because they advertised too much junk and didn't sell enough quality. Capice?

Jack,

I didn't realize it, but you have a special situation. A vertical over a perfect ground will not be 50 ohms; it will be around 36 ohms. An RV at 27 MHz will qualify as a dang good ground. You can probably expect a fair SWR with the antenna at resonance (but it should be under 2:1). In this case, tune the antenna for minimum SWR at mid frequency and simply let your antenna tuner bring it back down to 1:1. You shouldn't be up in the 3:1 SWR range in any case. This is a case where the coax length will likely make a difference. Perhaps someone who has been in your situation (RV or 18 wheeler) can shed some light on possible solutions. Of course, if the feed line isn't too long, SWR won't make any noticeable difference (assuming you use the tuner to match it to the radio).

Best regards from Rochester, NY

2122. replace am/fm antenna with cb/am/fm antenna?

Newsgroup: rec.radio.cb

From: APS <dev@null.com>
Message-ID: <080520031821265952%dev@null.com>

Hello all,

I want to install an antenna for my cb in the place of the current am/fm antenna. The rig is nothing special--a Uniden Pro 510--and I don't need serious dx power. I just want to use it for traffic on the occasional cross-state trips I take. I don't want to add an antenna, but I also don't want to use a magnet mount.

A. It seems that it doesn't much matter what kind of antenna I use for am/fm. Can I just use a cb antenna and use a good splitter to connect it to both the cb and radio? I'm envisioning a 4' or so coiled antenna.

B. Is there a ready-made adaptor to use a cb antenna in the stock antenna mount? OR would I have to remove the current mount and use its hole?

C. Anybody done this? What problems are likely?

Thanks in advance--

Here is an interesting thought. If you have a shortened mag mount and it shows a real good 1:1 match and it is placed on a large ground plane (18 wheelers probably qualify as a real good ground plane) ... one must wonder. A quarter wave whip over perfect ground presents around a 36 ohm impedance; not a 1:1 SWR. If it is a shortened antenna (a mag mount will be shortened), then one wonders what it is wound with. You might have a radiation resistance of 10 ohms and a real resistance in that continuously loaded (or bottom or center loaded) antenna and it presents a 50 ohm resistive impedance, but only 20% efficient (80 percent of your energy is wasted as heat; 20 % is radiated). At this point, I'd like to hear from some techs and see what they've seen in miracle broad-band shortened verticals :)

Just for shits and giggles I searched "word of mouth & advertising & quality" on AltaVista. Out popped over 12,000 hits. From the first page I saw that the vast majority were from marketing agencies and firms, some of them actually trying to get people to pay for "word-of-mouth marketing"! The unbiased pages clearly defended my position, just like in these examples:

http://abcnews.go.com/sections/business/DailyNews/wordofmouth_marketing_010823.html
http://www.natlarb.com/content/consumers/hirearb.htm
http://www.upholsteryjournal.com/Articles/marketing_and_promoting.htm

And while this last link might seem a bit contradictory, read it thoroughly and you will see that it's not:

http://www.caloundra.qld.gov.au/Economic/bm_gaining_retaining_customers.htm

Now I'm not trying to get you to admit that you are wrong or that I'm right. I'm just trying to point out that advertising is highly overrated. It should come as no big suprise that advertising is heavily marketed by marketing agencies and advertising venues. I'm just saying that you should get your facts from an unbiased source.

It's real easy. Measure the resistance of each pin to ground. One pin will key the radio, another will give it audio. Finding the audio receive line is a hit-and-miss procedure, just like how bats got around in caves before they developed their sonar -- flap, flap, flap, splat!!! -- flap, flap, flap, splat!!!.

Too simple: the mike is set to maximum efficiency from the factory. Mess with it and you will mess up your modulation.

That was more a matter of perception. You take a particular chassis, and put it in a radio, with a front panel that says "Cobra" on it, and it's automatically a "good" radio. Yet that exact same chassis, put inside a case that says "Realistic" on the front, is automatically junk?

I've owned both a Cobra 139XLR and the Realistic TRC-458. They are virtually identical, except for a few superficial features. Yet which radio would the average CBer instinctively give a thumbs up rating for?

Acually radio sales from Radio Shack, had a lot to do with their availability. Anyone can walk in off the street, to any of one of thousands of RS stores and buy a CB. Unidens, Cobras, etc., are usually found at specialty CB stores, or through mail order, and do not have the same visibility and accessability, especially to first time CBers, who don't know about these other outlets yet.

> So why does RS have such a bad rep? Because they advertised too much

I have not seen a Radio Shack radio yet, that was any more "junk" than any of the other "brands". Again, that Radio Shack is considered junk, is a perception that is usually perpetuated by people, who spent much more money on their equipment (Usually with little or no perceivable performance improvement), and have to justify it, by putting down other people's equipment.

Actually, it's an Airstream diesel pusher that came from the factory with a CB antenna installed on the roof. I assume it's a NGP antenna but not sure. In any event, I am going to crawl up on the roof this weekend to see if I can adjust it. I did have another antenna mounted on the rain gutter using the old channel lock pliers trick and it seemed to work OK. I may have to go back to that. One other question, when I use the antenna matcher, do I sacrifice any performance from the radio?

Thanks for all the help and suggestions.

A good example of RS 'junk' is the TRC-435. And I don't really consider Cobra to be a name automatically associated with quality.

True story. I think they even carried a couple Johnsons many years back (can someone confirm this?)

I don't know much about the Presidents, but some Cobras were definately junk.

Same deal with Sears and JC Penneys. Some were good, some were junk. But they all sold.

I'll agree that may be part of it. But IMO, their poor choice of CB models over the years is the primary reason for their bad rep. The reason I think this is because their market was mostly for the general public, and not necessarily for the discriminating CBer. So most of their stock was made up of low-end radios, with only a few quality radios for the few customers that could tell the difference. Again, that's just my opinion, but also shared by a friend that worked his way up to district manager at RS (and has since moved on to a better job with a different company).

That's the second time this has popped up. I think a guy up the road

Too much oxidation in the hinges. Connect a piece of braid from the mount to some metal on the tub and frame. I always strip some outer insulation from the RG-8M or better coax about 6 feet from the antenna and connect a wire from there to a real close ground point with a real short stranded wire.

Also, the crimped ends on RG-58 come loose real easy. PL-259's and RG-175 reducers work good. If you use better coax, you need RG-176 reducers which have a larger hole for larger cable.

Measure the outer part of the connector to a metal part in the Jeep with an ohmmeter. You should have some continuity if done right.
Lower values are better. Ideal value is zero ohms. Practical values go up from there.

OK, I know you meant Rear Tire Stop.
I'm thinking bad ground or worse yet NONE! The tire holder may not be grounded good enough. Try running a simple test of a 12 gauge wire from the frame to to the antenna mount. Be sure to remove some paint around the hole to establish a solid ground. Be sure you dont connect the ground to the center conductor! Let us know.

I'm going to mainly look for some GPS stuff and maybe some good buys on some test equipment. The test equipment rental guys, selling used test gear, cut the prices by 50 % or more on what ever they have left at the end of the day on Saturday and all day on Sunday. You never can tell what kind of a bargain you may find.

Yes I have, 1.5 million people spread out from the Michigan State Fair grounds at 8 Mile up to Pontiac along Woodward Ave. Most of the action is at 13 Mile and Woodward Ave. Every once in a while you get to see some chick flash her bare Hooters while sitting on the back of a car going down the street. I have a buddy that lives in an apartment just north of 12 Mile Road on North bound Woodward Ave. Do you remember seeing a very large church with a steeple, oh may be a 100 feet tall, on a corner when you were there last time? If so that's the corner of 12 Mile and Woodward and I'll be camped out just up the street a few hundred feet, next to a curb side canopy tent most likely, in front of my buddy's apartment complex. Normally I bring my HT along to monitor the local police chatter and the Hazel Park Amateur Radio club normally provides aux. communications too in the area.

Ok, so, I haven't been getting anything lately, but tonight I was parked and decided to turn the CB on with the ignition off... the static as almost gone and I was able to catch allot... as soon as I turned on the ignition the static totally washed everything away... but aside from the interference... oh and the radio's power is connected through the cigarette lighter... I soldered the ends to a cigarette lighter thingy(probably why it's interfering)

I shut the car off again and tried talking... either people were ignoring me, or they couldn't hear me...the SWR meter I have as a field strength meter too... the field strength meter didn't move at all, but everything was coming in clear on the CB...

you could buy a maycom EM27 and convert it.
the conversion is very easy to do and you can find out how its done on the internet on most cb web sites.
when the conversion is done to a maycom EM27 the rig will then work from 25MHz up to more or less 30MHz.. the maycom EM27 are fully programmable and have a large digital display with channel and frequency read out, hear in the uk they sell new from ?80 to ?100....new then there is the cobra 25LTD or the 29LTD both have sound tracker and both can be easily converted to cover I think its 10 blocks of 40 channels and also on am / fm .
if your having problems getting one of these rigs drop me an email and I am willing to buy and send the rig to you. at cost I can even perform the mod on either rig before sending it to you.... all you will have to pay is the total cost of the rig and the shipping costs will post receipts with the rig I am not out to make any money just help a fellow radio operator... drop me an email...
hope this is of help to you .....

The little 19DX has no or poor filtering built in. My TJ is noisy.
All the AM only radios I tried picked up too much noise. A PC-122 gets noise, but is usable. A 2950 also worked good, but too fragile for Jeeping use.

I actually snail mailed a guy on the willys group a cheap CB that I would never use, for free. It was probably a Cobra 19. Useless tossaway radio.

There's quite a few mods for Sears Roadtalkers espcially early SSB's that Best advice I could give is not to run the amp, but you're going to do that anyway, so...

Get a higher output alternator (at least 150A) to bolt in. Run some double-ought cable from the battery in the front to a couple of batteries (at least two with a rating of 750CCA or higher) in the back (like in a truck box or something), and run the amp off those. A couple of those audio system 1-Farad caps in parallel wouldn't hurt, either.

Best advice is to make up for the lack of alternators with extra

I didn't bring it up, moron. Do yourself a path backwards and re-read the thread. You brought it up. You also brought up the fact you know about George body fat and tanlines. And admit it. Now, go pull a PhilC, and ass-lick your partner George. Do it in the sun so you both can get a tan.

Yeah, that is why you responded twice to the same post. You got so pissed off, you actually though of something to say after you already posted it.

Yes you did, you dump fuck.

You questioned a typo because you are too stupid to know the difference between "most" and "must". I didn't bring up my spelling. I said I can't type well.
Still, Philbert, it feels good that you are so bent out of shape, you couldn't collect your thoughts enough and needed to reply twice to the same post.

Seriously. First, he says he has less body weight and better tan lines than I. Not something I would go around bragging about. Then he says he knows for a fact, that George has less body fat, and better tan lines than I. Something I DEFINITELY would not brag about. Then he uses the term ass-lick. Put the 3 together, and you have a sick, perverted, person. A perfect qualification for the AKC.

Respectable start to a new website and good to know CB is alive and well in Central NJ. It's been almost twenty years since I operated out of Hopelawn NJ using my vintage Browning Mark III, many of my contacts and friends were from South Amboy south to the Atlantic Highlands. At the time channel 13 seemed to be the most popular daytime channel and 23 at night. Good group of folks.

RESCUE RADIO: TORNADOES SWEEP THE NATIONS MID-REGION

Ham radio has again come to the aid of America. This time as a series of killer tornadoes rip across the Central and South-Eastern states. We have the details in this report:

Blackouts, water shortages and desperate searches for the missing. This is the situation confronting tornado battered residents of the central United States as the death toll rises to 40 from the most violent weather in four years.

Beginning on Sunday the 4th and continuing through most of the week, swarms of violent thunderstorms and tornadoes crashed through the United States midsection. They caused devastation in three states and are spawning problems in several others.

Kansas, Missouri and Tennessee suffered the worst damage in the initial Sunday onslaught. Kansas listed seven people killed, Missouri had seventeen fatalities and Tennessee sixteen. The storms also disrupted electrical power and telephone service with debris from fallen structures blocking roads in some areas.

One of the hardest hit areas was Madison County, Tennessee where ten people were killed. There, power blackouts were widespread and it was not known when telephone service can be restored. Several of the regions A-R-E-S groups were reported activated as was the Missouri Traffic Net operating near 3 point 960 MHz in the 75 meter band.

In Missouri, ARRL Section Emergency Coordinator, Don Moore, K-M-Zero-R, reports that amateur operators are continuing damage assessment duties. An ARRL bulletin says that the Amateur Radio Emergency Service, Radio Amateur Civil Emergency Service and SKYWARN groups were active across the affected area. Hams are also assisting the American Red Cross and Salvation Army relief operations.

A bit to the West, in Kansas, Section Manager Ron Cowan, K-B-Zero-D-T-I, says that one tornado touched down in Leavenworth County. It remained on the ground before crossing the border into Missouri. There the storm brought havoc to Platte and Clay counties before falling apart just North-East of Kansas City. But during its trek, Wyandotte and Leavenworth Counties sustained severe damage. Cowan says that homes were destroyed and utilities knocked out along the twisters path.

The tornadoes were believed to be a part of a huge weather system that rolled across the Midwest and parts of the South. It also spawned twisters in Arkansas, South Dakota and Nebraska. Storms on Tuesday and Wednesday accounted for funnel cloud sightings in Alabama, Illinois and here in Louisiana. In all, nine states are affected and the National Weather Service credited ham radio operators with dozens of storm related reports over the weekend and they are continuing into the week.

As we go to air, hundreds of people are still being housed in temporary shelters where Amateur Radio volunteers have become an important ingredient in relief efforts.

This is obviously an ongoing story and we will have an update in next week’s Amateur Radio Newsline report.

From New Orleans, Louisiana, I’m Don Wilbanks, AE5DW.

Jim.

Thanks Don. (ARNewsline™ from various sources including ARRL bulletins)

RESCUE RADIO: TORNADO DESTROYS K0ETC BEACON

There is an ironic side to this story directly affecting ham radio. The K0ETC beacon North of Joplin Missouri in grid square EM27 was aparently destroyed when one of the twisters blew down the building housing it. An Internet posting by the beacons owner Jay Rupar, K0ETC, shortly after the incident said that there were no injuries at the former beacon site but two people were killed by the same storm about 30 miles away. Rupar says that the present location of the beacon itself is unknown but that it will be replaced. (KC6WFS/7)

HAM RADIO HEROES: NOAA HONORS “ALERT” VOLUNTEERS

The National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration has selected ALERT -- the Alabama Emergency Response Team to receive one of this years NOAA Environmental Hero Awards. This award recognizes ALERT for its outstanding efforts in support of the NOAA National Weather Service Forecast Office in Birmingham.

NOAA says that under the leadership of ALERT president Chuck Arthur, KF4SSX, team members have spent hundreds of hours using ham radio to coordinate storm reports throughout the Birminham office’s warning area. The agency goes on to say that over the years they have proven to be an invaluable resource during such major events as an F 4 tornado that struck Tuscaloolsa County on December 16th of 2000 and the tornado outbreak of November 24th 2001.

NOAA took special note of ALERT's work following last years Veterans Day severe weather outbreak that included to F 3 catagory tornados that killed 12 people. NOAA says that the ALERT volunteers stayed with their Amateur Radio stations relaying critical storm reports to meteorologists and relaying storm information to Emergency Manasers across the central and northern tiers of the state. NOAA says thart the steady flow of reports were crucial to the issuance of new warnings and the office's ability to quickly get the word out to the publiic.

Presented in in conjunction with Earth Day celebrations, the award honors NOAA volunteers for their tireless efforts to preserve and protect our nation's environment. It was presentede to ALERT on Satyrday, May 3rd. More on ALERT is on the web at www.alert-alabama.org. (NOAA)

THE VEC SYSTYEM: A PROBABLE E-FILING LICENSING RECORD SET

Before a ham can respond to an emergency, he or she first has to become licensed. And a Wisconsin college may have set a new Amateur Radio record in that area. Would you believe 81 new hams in less than 24 hours? Well its true and Amateur Radio Newsline's Roy Neal, K6DUE, is here with the rest of the story:

It happened in Wisconsin. Picture this. 81 students sat for and passed their amateur radio tech class license exams in one day. What's more, they received their license grants within 24 hours! This became the largest test session ever to employ the new technique of on-line submission of test results and applicant data to the FCC. They are the students of Dr. John Weiss, WD8KLO of U W Stouts' College of Technology, Engineering and Management

Weiss gave his students the option of earning their radio licenses in partial fulfillment of class requirements. The examination team was coordinated by John Burningham, WB8PUF, of UW-Stout's communication, Education and Training Department. It included Weiss; Jon Fuller, W9JHF, Student Life Services; and UW-Stout students Andy Wagner, KB9TAC and Scott Littfin, N0EDV.

The University of Wisconsin-Stout has a reputation for firsts. In 2001, the college, which is located in Menomonie, became the first to receive the prestigious Malcolm Baldrige National Quality Award. It was presented by none other than President George W. Bush.

The rapid license grants were made possible by using newly available VE-to-VEC-to-FCC electronic submission technology developed by the W5YI Volunteer Examination Coordinator. Using password-protected electronic forms posted to the W5YI VEC website, John Burningham, WB8PUF began keying in the test results right after the exam session.

All 81 applications were waiting at the VEC Office when it opened the following morning. After routine screening, the applications were electronically retransmitted to the FCC. Within an hour, the FCC issued the licenses and call signs. These were immediately forwarded over the Internet to Burningham who informed the waiting students of the new calls while at the same time probably setting a new electronic licensing record for ham radio in the United States. 81 new hams in one day at one licensing location.

Go Wisconsin Stout!

For the Amateur Radio Newsline, Roy Neal, K6DUE.

Weiss is an Associate Professor at UW-Stout specializing in advanced telecommunications technology. Additional information on the school’s telecommunication systems program is available on the web at http://tcs.uwstout.edu. (W5YI)

HAMVENTION 2003®: FCC TO BE A NO-SHOW

Don't look for any major ham radio regulatory announcements at next weeks Dayton Hamvention. That's because the agency will not be there. David Black, KB4KCH, reports from Amateur Radio Newsline’s South-East Bureau on the what and the why:

Hamvention producer Garry Matthews, K-B-8-G-O-L says conflicting commitments will keep regular FCC presenters Riley Hollingsworth, K4ZDH, and Bill Cross, W3TN from attending. Matthews says the Hamvention tried to find suitable replacements, but none were available.

Speculation suggested that FCC officials might use the Hamvention's Forum to release news of a so-called omnibus Amateur Radio Notice of Proposed Rule Making expected out in May. The notice would consist primarily of outstanding rules change requests and pending petitions for reconsideration. With the Dayton FCC forum canceled, what venue, if any, the Commission might use for its release is not clear.

And what about the two hours on Saturday morning May 17th the FCC was supposed to fill? Matthews says it's being offered to other session leaders who might not like their current time slots and want to change. He says the FCC hould be back in 2004 with Hollingsworth, Cross and perhaps others representing the Commission.

From the South-East Bureau in Birmingham Alabama, I'm David Black, KB4KCH.

We will have more Hamvention 2003® happenings later on in this weeks Amateur Radio Newsline report. (ARNewsline™)

RADIO RULES: FCC TAKING COMMENTS ON PLC NOI

And speaking about the FCC, e have a follow up on last weeks story about the agency releasing its Notice of Inquiry on the deployment of ''Broadband over Power Line'' or B-P-L technology. Now comes word that the complete Notice of Inquirey which was released on April 28th is available on the FCC Web site. Also that the FCC now is accepting electronically filed comments via its Electronic Comment Filing System ECFS Express page.

But what about the actual affect of B-P-L on ham radio. An ARRL Bulletin, explains that ''Broadband over Power Line'' is really a form of carrier-current communication better known around the world as power line carrier or P-L-C.

B-P-L would couple high-frequency RF to parts of the power grid and use existing power lines as the transmission medium to deliver broadband and Internet access. This is the same technology refused for use in Japan becuse tests showed signifigant interference to consumer electronic products including Amateur Radio on the high frequency bands. And in the Notice of Inquirey the FCC does acknowledge the signifigant interference risk from B-P-L.

ARRL Lab Manager and RFI-guru Ed Hare, W1RFI, also has concerns. A noted expert in the field, Hare cautions that deployment of B-P-L could affect every amateur in communities where it's employed. This, by causing a significant increase in noise levels. Obviously, this is one isssue that a lot of hams will be filing comments on with the FCC. (ARRL)

ENFORCEMENT: UNAUTHORIZED OPERATION BRINGS $5000 FINE

The FCC has issued a $5000 fine to Blue Ridge Erectors, Inc. of Bangor Pennsylvania. This, for operating radio transmitting equipment on 467.250 MHz without Commission authorization.

According to the FCC, back on August 27, 2002, the agency’s New York Field Office issued the forfeiture notice to Blue Ridge but the company has not filed a response to the N-A-L. After waiting almost three-quarters of a year the FCC has affirmed the fine and has ordered Blue Ridge Erectors to pay the $5000 within 30 days of the release of its Order.

ENFORCEMENT: FCC ALLEGES MICHIGAN HAM ENGAGED IN DELIBERATE INTERFERENCE, THREATS

The FCC claims that a ham has engaged in deliberate interference, broadcasting and that he threatened other amateurs. And now the agency is sending Michael Guernsey Sr, ND8V, of Parchment Michigan a tape recording to back up those assertions. Amateur Radio Newsline’s Blair Alper, KA9SEQ, has the details:

According to the ARRL Letter, since late 1998, Michael Guernsey, Sr., N-D-8-V, has been the recipient of seven letters from FCC Special Counsel Riley Hollingsworth. This includes two warning notices. And in 2000, the FCC threatened to designate Guernsey's license for a revocation and suspension hearing. Guernsey subsequently agreed to a nine-month suspension of his High Frequency operating privileges in 2001.

But on April 7th of this year Hollingsworth again wrote to Guernsey. This time Hollingsworth said that the operation of Guernsey’s station over the last several years raises questions about the Michigan hams’ qualifications to remain a Commission licensee.

According to Hollingsworth, this time there is audio to support the claims. The recorded transmissions were made this past March 26th, and are said to back up complaints from other amateurs of deliberate interference on 20 meters. In his letter, Hollingsworth noted that some of the interference apparently sprang from on-the-air personal disputes or from what Guernsey perceived as deliberate interference to his transmissions. Even so, Hollingsworth said, Guernsey has apparently ignored the Commission's written and verbal warnings to not retaliate with similar behavior.

Hollingsworth advised Guernsey that the alleged deliberate retaliatory threats and transmissions on top of other QSOs are contrary to FCC rules. He also stated this indicates that the numerous warnings issued to date have little, if any, effect in regarding to bringing Guernsey’s operation into compliance with Commission rules, indicating that other, harsher enforcement action may be needed.

For the Amateur Radio Newsline, I’m Blair Alper, KA9SEQ, reporting.

Hollingsworth told Guernsey review the tape recording and respond in writing and in detail within 20 days of reciept of its reciept. He said the FCC will use the information Guernsey submits to decide whether to designate ND8V’s license for a suspension and revocation proceeding or to lift voice privileges from Guernsey's license for the remainder of his license term, which ends in 2012. HAMVENTION 2003®: THE DX HOSPITALITY SUITE

The Northern Ohio DX Association and WVNO Radio will once again sponsor a Hospitality Suite at this year's Dayton Hamvention. The suite will be open on Friday and Saturday evenings in Suite 1011 of the Crowne Plaza Hotel. The Crown Plaza is the old Stouffers located in downtown Dayton.

And in a tribute to one of the areas best known hams, the association is dedicating this year's Hospitality Suite to "Silent Key" Jim Hire, W8ZET, who was a Northern Ohio DX Association Honorary Life Member.

Hire’s wife, Janeen, KC8BRS, has decided to keep the tradition going. She will be providing some special memorabilia of Jim at the Hospitality Suite. (NODXA)

CHANGING OF THE GUARD: ED JUGE, W5EJ, - S.K.

Some sad news to report. Word thar well-known amateur Ed Juge, W5EJ, has passed away.

Aaccording to longtime friend and colleague Bob Miller, K2RM, Juge, the former W5TOO, was an executive at RadioShack for many years and one of the people who kept ham radio on the company's radar. Outside the world of ham radio, W5EJ was a well-known and well-respected figure in the computer industry.

Ed Juge also had served on the ARRL No-Code committee in the late 1980s, chaired the ARRL Digital Committee in 1992 and was particularly active in QRP. He is survived by his wife, Jo, KA5ABC, by two children and three grandchildren. (CQ)

EMERGING TECHNOLOGY: COGNITIVE RADIO - IT LIVES

Believe it or not there a movement underway at the FCC to increase spectrum efficiency through the use of a new technology being called cognitive radio.

What is cognative radio you ask? This is radio gear and antenna systems that could adapt to their operating environments by automatically identifying vacant spectrum, switching to that spectrum and carrying out a specific communications mission.

Cognitive radio will also be the subject of an upcoming workshop at FCC headquarters. More information is at the http://hraunfoss.fcc.gov/edocs_public/attachmatch/DOC-233615A1.doc (CGC)

SPECIAL EVENT: AMATEUR CROSS BAND COMMUNICATIONS TEST

Iin celebration of the 54th anniversary of Armed Forces Day, the United States Army, Air Force, Navy, Marine Corps and Coast Guard are co-sponsoring the annual Military and Amateur Radio Communication Test for 2003. These tests provide hams and short wave listeners an opportunity to demonstrate their individual technical skills while receiving recognition from the Secretary of Defense along with the appropriate military radio stations.

According to an Internet post by N6DDF, although the actual armed Forces Day is celebrated on Saturday, May 17th the crossband communications test was to be conducted one week earlier on May 10th. This, so that it would not conflict with the Dayton Hamvention

QSL cards will be provided to those stations who made contact with the military stations. Also, a special commemorative certificate will be awarded to anyone who receives and copies the digital message from the Secretary of Defense. (Via Internet)

THAT FINAL ITEM: ROYAL HONORS

And finally this week, a radio amateur has received royal honors in the Netherlands. Hans van de Groenendaal, ZS6AKV, of the SARL news service has the story of Lou van de Nadort PA0LOU:

Lou van de Nadort PA0LOU, retired Chairman of the International Amateur Radio Union Region 1 was recognised by Queen Beatrix of the Netherlands for his outstanding contribution to Amateur Radio. He was decorated with Member of the “Order of Oranje Nassau”.

Lou was one of the 3594 people who were recognised this year by the queen when the Royal Recognition awards were announced on April 30, in Holland known as “Koningine dag”, the queens birthday .

Lou van de Nadort retired from the IARU Region 1 Executive in October last year after having been almost 28 years at the helm of the organisation. In his farewell editorial in Region 1 News he called it retirement from active duty and wrote “I will always have IARU and its work at heart and will continue to support the cause"

The medal was presented to Lou at his home in Zundert in Holland when the Major and a delegation of civics and members of the VERON Council arrived there on April 30. Lou said it took my totally by surprise, I never expected it.

Hans van de Groenendaal ZS6AKV

Hello Scott:

Mom say's thanks for the "Happy Mothers Day Greeting"

We all went out for a fancy shmansey Brunch at the local DO-Drop Inn. They had tables all set up, and had it layed out as a smorgas board, and there was a dude who would make ya ah Omelet with all the mixins in it, yum yum. Also would cut ya's off some Prime Rib Beef.

Most all the rest of the local CB'ers, and Ham guys where all there, guess the price was right.

As usual there was a show and tell out in the parking lot, just a Desert Lot graded off. Power Inc showed off his all band HF antenna, and 2 each 150 amp alternators. Others has cross banders set up allowing them to talk to their vehicles, that cross banded to other bands, and got to listen to other neat frequencies.

In all had a good time, with others breaking off to go 4 wheeling up on a mountain top and call out for the most distance station.

Hope your Mother had a good Mothers day also.

I've never worked on a TRC-435, or many of the newer radios. I'm sure it's no worse than a Cobra 19. That has to be one of the worst radios,

I'm not sure how or why this happened, but in either 1979 or 1980, Radio Shack closed out the Johnson Viking 4740, SSB 40 channel radio. They sold for something like $99, and sold like hotcakes in my area. It wasn't a bad radio either. I guess EF Johnson sold the stock and rights to RS, knowing that their network of stores would help deplete the stock quickly. If anyone knows the inside story on this, I be curious about it

At one time, they were all made with Uniden chassis. Somehow Cobra managed to get a good reputation, which still sticks with them, even though their radios are now made with cheap copy boards, and parts, and made in other countries.

Penney's and Sears radios, ironically also shared the same chassis. I never liked them. They seemed "too busy" inside, with more wires and ciurcuit boards than they really should've needed.

I loved SBE! At least their old 23 channel radios. I was a big fan of the Cortez, and the Trinidad.

Ah! this is true. Most of their radios were aimed, especially in the later years, at the casual mobiler. You notice that they don't carry a base radio any more. Even SSB is a rarety.

> So most of their stock was made up of low-end radios,

Even some of their "low end" radios work well, even if they lack "bells and whistles". I have a TRC-479, a teenie-tiny mobile radio, with no meter, and only a volume and squelch. The radio works well, has better adjacent channel rejection than some of the higher end 23 channel radios did.
I guess it all depends on the criteria, by which you label a radio "junk" or not. To me, if it receives well, is fairly immune to ignition noise, has good adjacent channel rejection, and doesn't require frequent service, then, to me, it's a good radio. As far as transmit is concerned, 4 watts, is 4 watts, and 100% modulation, is 100% modulation. The only consideration is tonal quality.

Isn't the TRC 453, the small SSB radio, that predates the 465, and looks almost identical to it? That might explain why people mix them up.

Sort of the like the TRC 450 and 451. Identical cosmetically, but the 450 has the MB8719 chassis, like the cobra 148, and the 451, has the upd2824 chassis, like the Cobra 146.

If a filter placed at the rear of the radio does not stop the noise (usually it does not), you must stop the noise at the source. Ford vehicles are notorious for extraneous fuel pump noise. The best way (I have found) to end the noise is to tie an electrolytic capacitor (I use 470uf) in parallel to ground (observe polarity) with both the power and sender wire of the fuel pump. This has to be done as close to the pump as possible. This worked wonders for every Ford vehicle this was done on and should work with all other makes/models if an issue.

Alternator whine (if the noise increases/decreases in pitch as fuel is applied/removed respectively) can be reduced by a similar method, this time with the main lead of the alternator. This is not always effective, but is easy and cheap.

As far as no one hearing you...a product of antenna/coax/radio and car voltage. When you vehicle engine is off, your voltage on the radio is 11-12V instead of 13.8V or better. This impacts your power output of the radio - dramatically. For example, if the output of your radio is 4W on AM with the engine running, it may only put out 2.5W with the engine off. Other than that, if you have a good antenna mounted well with low SWR, good coax, and your radio has good carrier output on transmit and audio when modulated...if no one hears you...might either be being ignored or may not have right location (you might not be close enough to the receiving station) for them to hear you.

Hope this helps, good luck. There are never any absolutes in this stuff.

I have noticed that the early Uniden boards/radios were well-made, and almost all the parts were stamped with their name, even when the boards were installed in other brand radios. The newer ones don't seem to have the same level of quality. Even the PCB's are cheaper, and a lot of their problems are due to trace seperation.

Like the PLL/VCO board inside the SSB Roadtalkers -- what a pain in the ass. I think Sears had an AM-only radio that was the same as RS's 'Mini-40', which wasn't a bad radio at all. Go figure.

I have a Trinidad myself -- good radio! But some of their mobiles had problems. The Sidebanders were plagued with intermittent failures, at least the ones I have seen. You get them to work by resoldering everything on the board, but after you put the shells on the chassis the thing quits working again. Like they had cracked traces or something. It was even more frustrating since they used the same boards in the bases, which had very few problems. Must be FM (and I don't mean Frequency Modulation).

IMO, the first accessories to buy for a new CB are an external speaker and a good mic.

As I will be driving a rental car would need to stick to a hand-held.
What sort of price would I be looking at? Is there much activity out there? As Mobile Phone coverage seems limited does anyone still monitor CB as an emergency service?

John,
CB is 'alive', but I hesitate to say 'and well'.
There are a number of ways you can do a temporary installation in a rental car, so it's just a matter or how you want to do it (HT, etc.). If you want the CB to use as a cellphone... buy a cellphone, the coverage is all but complete. There are 'spots' where you may not find access, but they are few and very far between.

My very first 23 channel radio, which I paid a whopping $100 for in 1974, was a no-frills Pace 223. I've found that Pace radios are "strange". Maybe it's the American design influence. I'm far more used to Japanese designs, and I'm far more comfortable with them.
My Pace 223 had a single audio final amplifier transistor, mounted to the back of the case, which got pretty hot, when the radio was unsquelched. Most other radios use a push-pull twin audio transistor final amplifier, and they run much cooler.

Now you're really reaching back! Back when Radio Shack was called "Allied Radio Shack".
Radio Shack and Lafayette were in heated competition for the experimenter's dollars, and there were also a ton of independently owned part's outlets. Times sure have changed...

Those are most likely not true Uniden boards, but the cheap copy boards, which have plagued Cobra (and other) radios for the past 8 or more years now.

I guess I should've been more specific. Yes, you are right, for the most part, the AM radios by Sears and Penney's were fairly "uncluttered", and pretty straight forward. It was normally the SSB radios (Especially that gargantuan "mobile/base" with the AC supply crammed into a large mobile shaped rig) which were cluttered, and hard to work on.

I remember a problem like that on a Sidebander 2, once. Turns out the problem was the relay. It just wasn't making a solid contact. Flexing the board would shift things just enough to make it work. Finally, while tapping around the inside with the blunt end of a screwdriver, I hit the relay, and the receive dropped out, and came back. I cleaned the relay contacts, and that fixed the problem for about a year. When it came back, it was "No More Mr. Nice Guy", and I just replaced it.

Yea, it's "Friggen Magic". One of my all time favorite mobile SSB radios, the Tram Diamond 60, had a primative double sided PC board with plated through holes, which was also the source of some intermittents.
Lots of soldering, and running wire through the plated through holes, was often necessary to cure the ills of this radio. Not all of them did it though. It might have been a bad run of PC boards.

It's getting harder to find a "quality" radio operator as well. SSB does not appeal to the masses. The more discriminating and serious operators are in the minority. The marketing of radio equipment reflects this trend.

It might be.

An amplified mic is almost a necessity, for most low end radios.
External speakers are certainly better than small 2" speakers on the "teenie-tiny" mobile rigs. The problem is where to mount them, where they won't look silly, or get in the way.

You're right, it's a 'slinky' antenna. It's better than nothing, but not by much. (Not a 'Cliff-Dweller').

You're kidding? Man, I tapped those relays for hours, and even ohmed-out a few!
They must have had Hi-Z contacts or something. Pearce-Simpsons had relay problems, but at least they were more obvious and easier to replace (socketed).

I got one of those on the heap right now -- the squelch kicks in only after you key up, then it doesn't go away until you shut off the radio. Flex the board and you can get any combination of squelch, transmit and receive. Goofy.

I think the MRF421 is pretty dang close.
You can see the datasheet here:
<http://www.geocities.com/maxmartin3/drake/MRF421-Motorola.pdf>

I think I'm gonna build the amp shown in the datasheet.I may need to tweak the coils a bit,no biggie.

I do have a couple of questions however.

First,Do I have to use the 10 ferrite beads for L5,or can I get by with something else? Where can I source the Ferroxcube beads?

My second question is about L3. Can I use the same diameter solid copper wire,or must it be hollow tubing? I'll have to find a source for that also.

Thanks for any input guys! Nothing40.

Just a F.Y.I.:

The product below can significantly enhance your CB listening pleasure. I can personally vouch for it as I have it installed in my Uniden Grant XL. It is particularly useful if there are high-powered signals on adjacent frequencies. For the price, I thinks it's a pretty good investment. Hope it helps. :-)

P.S. I recently worked a local (CT) op that had one of these babies installed in his Galaxy DX 2547.

http://www.sgcworld.com/news/ADSP2Introduction.html#Notes

He claims it works like gangbusters and was a breeze to install. Personally, I think $180.00's a bit steep for an internal DSP unit...but it definitely rates a 9/10 on the "pretty nifty" scale. We were both running 12 watts and had no difficulty traversing LI sound. I do use DSP on CB, but only because my DSP-599zx accepts a second input and I saw no reason to put it to waste. Again, I hope this helps some of you.

Wrong. Go back and reeas what you wrote, since your deficit is acting up and causing you to "forget" that of which you claim. Again, your damaged ego and incredibly low self-esteem will not allow you to get past your inferior notion that it is somehow about "you". It isn't. It's about your bullshit claims, and the matter if quality was not overlooked at all. the most successful products still need advertising..the FACT that all business colleges, schools, and classes dedicate a large portion of classwork focused on presentation, PR, media, and how to properly ADVERTISE one's product,,,,proves you wrong,,,not I. I merely pointed it out.

Make some more goofy half-assed claims that have no truth nor basis in anything but your limited intellect..I'll provide you with all the "material" for which you clamor. Now , after careful thought <g>, can you draw a parallel of your behavior and poor spelling to another character that was "lid" off..?......(hyuk)
It's all good, you just need to drop the "poor me" and "damaged goods" train of thought that your deficit in communication is responsible for.

A common mistake among entrants to the purchasing world is to equate value with quality, as you just did. I am friends with the main purchasing agent for a large Manhattan Department store (our fishing trip is in google) and one may find widgets by the gross in Philthadelphia for 100 bucks......one may be able to buy inferior imported widgets in the scurvy suburbs of Detroit for 70 bucks. Is it a better value? Going by your own words, no. Closer examination is required prior to making a snap judgement,,there are many requirements a product is subject to,,cost and durability only one...there is A) the need..is it a necessity, or luxury item? B) Demand is the product in demand? C) Target...who is the target audience? OF the target audience, is their a large enough niche to support competition? And on and on it goes.....this is ALL covered under...you guessed it...how to advertise and market your product.

> So why does RS have such a bad rep?

Voo-doo bullshit set forth by garage type "techs" such as you think of yourself. There was absolutely nothng wrong with the old Radio Shack cb's of the seventies, prior to LED being introduced and implemented by Tandy. Any "bad rep" was perpetuated by radio scum like yourself.

>Because they advertised too much junk and >didn't sell enough quality. Capice?

Gee,,,,the populace disagrees with you. The polls (yes, they exist,,don't be so lazy,,,click your mouse a few times and work for something, instead of shooting your mouth off and asking for another to do your work) show the majority of respondents claim that any problem with Rat Shack, real or perceived, stem from the lack of educated employees concerning the products they sell, along with an ever dwindling inventory.
Your opinion on Cobra, coupled with your blunders concerning advertising of products that have no comparison value, and your quick willingness to attack instead of admit when you are wrong, tell your agenda. Now get over yourself.

The only tow reasons I can think of people being Anti Key Clowns is either they don't into HAM and not CB or they cant afford to play the game. In both cases I think that would void your authority on this news group.

A moron? Somehow, though I don't know the guy, I'd say he has lined his defense up well with the facts. You on the other hand, have not. No, I'd have to disagree with you on calling him a moron. RIGHT ON, but not a moron....

I may not have a college degree in business but I've been around long enough and around enough people who do know far more than me to know that all the bull shit you've said has not supported your claim "against" advertising.
I'm sure glad you don't work for me or the agency I'm involved with. I guess you should just consider yourself one hell of a lucky guy that business "falls" into your lap. I hope it continues...To hear you talk, you should be a self produced multi millionaire. IF your product/service is "SO" GOOD, why aren't you? Enjoy it while it lasts. Like a lot of other businesses crashed by the economy, your luck and income could come to a screeching halt. I can hear the brakes squealing now......Actually, you've said so little to defend your claim, that it is pointless to even pursue this argument. As I said if you have all the answers on how to acquire business without advertising, you should start an agency, write a book, or shoot for the Secretary of Commerce job. Then we can all be rich and not have to leave home to beat the path for sales or run ads, thereby putting all TV and Radio stations not to mention newspapers and magazines out of business. And YES, THEY DO SURVIVE ON ADS. NOT the subscribing public. Without the ads, those items would either be non existent or so expensive, the general public could ill afford to subscribe. ALL of your Radio/TV stations would then have to go the route of PBS, asking for donations. So DO NOT TELL ME advertising isn't necessary if you have a good product or service. THAT alone does NOT buy it.
Advertising is and always has been a staple of business before either of us were born, and I'm damned sure will be after we're gone. Lou/Tech@DP.NET

Thanks for that. I am bringing a tri-band UK cellphone, which the coverage maps suggest will work in the main areas. Just that having been brought up on American TV and movies with CB, and part of the movenemt to legalise in the UK, I felt like trying it!

One caveat:

This is not magic, nor a sure fire way to eliminate bleedover. All it is, are a few standard mechanical filters, wired in series, with an I.F. amplifier to compensate for the insertion loss of the filters. What it gives you, is sharper bandwidth skirts, which can help you reduce "scratch" bleedover from adjacent channels, when the interfering signals are NOT splattering badly. a reduction in bandwidth can also improve signal to noise performance, although the improvement will be slight, and probably not noticable.

What it won't do, is eliminate "desense", or front end overload, resulting from strong local signals, as these filters work in the I.F. stage, long after the front end RF stage, where the problem exists.

It also will not cure cases where local users are badly splattering. "Splatter" is actually sideband energy which spills out over adjacent channels, and cannot be removed without blocking the desired signal, as well, since the splatter components are "on channel".

I experimented with something like this, in the late 70's on a Midland SSB radio that I ran then. That Midland was not the best when it came to adjacent channel rejection. I added my own filters, in series with the standard one, and it sharpened the bandwidth, which I liked. It became easier to tell when people were off-frequency, and it did knock down adjacent channel scratch somewhat. But it didn't solve the biggest problem, which was front end overload. There simply was not enough dynamic range in the R.F. amplifier.

Some years later, I had a friend, who had one of the CBC devices installed in a Cobra 2000. I observed similar findings to my own experiences with the Midland, years prior. Yes, it made the receiver a bit "tighter", be could not eliminate splatter and front end desense.

Also, depending on which model you purchase, and what radio you install it on, it may work only on AM, as SSB normally uses a different (narrower) filter path.

Radio Shack used to sell an exact drop-in replacement for most of those

That sounds about right. I used to have problems with the carrier power fluctuating back and forth, by several watts. There's a second relay in the Tram, that's also the source of many headaches with power.

All that power, but who do they really talk to? It seems that as of late, that SSB'ers talk TO people, while many AM'ers simply talk AT people. And it's not always neccesary that they respond back.

Does anybody know the value of R130 in the Cobra 148 NW ST? It is the resistor that is connected to pin 10 of the PLL chip thru Inductor 501.
Thanks in advance

I am trying to determine if a less expensive model exists, as I have been told. I know about the Am-Com "ClearSpeech", The Gap "Hear It", and SGC's "ADSP2", (all $150+) but I was told some CB shops somewhere are selling an equally good unit for under $50. Can anyone substantiate that rumor with a make and model number?

I'll have to look up the receiver models. There were a couple that I worked with. Variable bandwidth from a hundred Hertz to tens of Kilohertz. Spectrum analyzer also. Frequency readout to Hertz. Long term stability somewhere on the order of a couple of parts in 10 to the 9th power. Received AM/FM/SSB. Wide band as well as narrow band FM. Really nice radios. Calibration only cost a couple of grand every year. In 1995 dollars, they went for around $60,000.00.

I got an old (like 1970's) CB out of the garage, hooked it up in another car, set it to channel 14, went back to my car (about 8 feet away) set mine to channel 14... walked over to the other one and someone was coming in clear, I tried to talk and I heard myself on my radio, and vise versa with the other one... but the conversation I picked up on the old radio wouldn't pick up on mine... just static... I didn't have a second man to drive around and check my range... but I'm going out to the CB shop tomorrow to have them check it out... I don't know what it could be...

Can anyone tell me what Brand is better than the others and why. Also what model of that Brand and why. Thanks for your time in this matter. Please Email me your response at shifferg@bellsouth.net . I've used a 10.695Mhz model in a radio for several years now and have had great results. It increased the adjacent channel rejection on both AM and SSB - which is what Lou says it will do - and didn't seem to add much noise to the reciever. If someone is overmodulating and creating additional sidebands which make it onto your frequency (bleedover), this will not help at all. To me bleedover and splatter are overmodulation at different levels, but some note a difference to the two. Then there is desense which is caused by very strong signals causing the automatic gain circuitry in your reciever to cut back the gain, and taken to an extreme level - intermodulation - where the signals saturate the front end and cause noise and sometimes even damage. Some desense and even intermodulaton can be combated by running your gain control at lower levels if it's enough of an issue for you to worry about.

I've considered using both the 455Khz and 10.695Mhz in the same radio but have never gotten around to it. Has anyone tried that?

Hi Dave,

Caveat well taken. This is certainly not a cure-all, only an improvement. I was/am fortunate enough to not have desense or front end overload play any significant factor in my CB comms. in my locality. As a test, I have operated on channel 5 USB while the "kilowatt crew" bantered about on channel 6 without any significant interference. I admit to being somewhat spoiled as what does make it past the increased IF filtering gets chewed up by the DSP unit and subsequently spit out into the "bit bucket." Take it easy now.

Hi Vinnie,

For the price, you really can't beat it as improvements go. The Grant XL already has a really good receiver to begin with and this was just icing on the cake...at a really good cost. No "peak & tweak," no linear amps, no overmodulated audio, and no receive pre-amp needed. I added this plus a SP-1a speech processor to the Grant and it make a really good package. Take care now. :-)

If it is work related, make sure you stick with a type accepted CB. Do not get a 10 meter rig that has been converted. I recommend the Uniden Grant.

And you are a prime example of what I mean when I allude to "communication deficits" by hammies.
For the second time, you have wrongly misinterpreted and accused one of "condoning illegal activity". YOU, wish to make it personal.
YOU,,feel anyone that talks about anything you erroneously misconstrue as "illegal" should be ostracized, such as you did to yourself. Get over it. You still owe him an apology from last time. And leave your personal bullshit at the door,

Perfect illustration. Your lid-like ways are exactly what I said they were,,,to YOU, speaking to one who dares talk about that of which you want censored is "legitimizing"...no wonder you suffer such great deficits....with statements like that, it's obvious.

Find a Uniden PC-122 or 122XL, a Grant XL or LT, or an older 148 if you can find an unhacked specimen. These are workhorse radios that stay on frequency, unless modified in some way. For sideband, accurate frequency is essential. Unmodded radios and stock mikes or a 636-L work great.

First off a lower angle of radiation would give you more RF energy. And would work worse locally and better for long path DXing. At a half wave you have a higher take off angle. There are many more things to consider for RF problems like ferrite beads, quality low pass filters no cb radio brand, looping your coax 7 times in a 6-12 inch circle, Line isolators, multi point ground system. And of course running a clean signal with out 100% modulation throwing Big IMD numbers and spikes up and down the band. But who said anything about rf problems? I didnt. Just wanted a place to buy a antenna. FYI if you read my post you would see he ordered one from the crummy copper.

A 2510 10 meter radio. Extra channels and power.

The guy has to make up his own mind if he wants a legal radio, a modded 10 meter radio, or a hacked up CB. He should check with the company he plans to drive for, to see if they require standard CBs, or don't care.

Just curious. I haven't messed with C.B. radio's in over 25 years,but ....can anyone tell me how my old radio set-up would compare to whats out there today ? Last radio was a Midland 13-898b with a hand full of extra channels and a Maco V.F.O. ,hooked to a Palomar Skipper 300 and a Starduster ground plane.Also had a set of 4 element beams on the verticle . Talked thru a D104. Would this still work today (for local and DX) or have conditions and equipment made all of this obsolete ? Thanks for your time !!

There is a splitter you can get that will let you do just that. I have on and it works "ok" but it does cut down on your transmitting range but seems to recieve the same or near the same as a regular antenna. I got it from JCWhitney Catolog it was about 20.00 I think. It uses your stock AM/FM antenna. you plug it and your CB into the splitter. There are 2 versions of this, one has a SWR light to help tune the radio and antenna this is the one I have, but the SWR's were still high so I still use a antenna matcher to get the lowest SWR I can. overall it works for short range and I really don't want to put a second antenna and drill holes in my brand new truck. hope this helps , here is the number for JCWhitney 1-800-529-4486

Hi all.

I have a 1990 Chevy 2500HD pickup truck. I have a Bazooka EL2150 (2x160=320 watt) Stereo Power amplifier running straight off of the battery.

Last night I also wired my Mirage 66 (CB Radio) straight to the battery as well.

The stereo amp has very good noise filters built-in, the CB does not.

The power switch to the stereo amp is turned on when the truck is running AND the radio is turned on.

The power to the CB is constantly ON, and is very quiet (noise wise) UNTIL the truck is turned on. Then I get quite a bit of ignition noise as well as winshield wiper noise.

I don't have a lot of money to spend ($5-$10) and I'm not ready to tackle some huge electrical engineering project like others have suggested in here.

Any ideas are welcome!
Thanks!

The best way to tell if it's going to be a simple or difficult job is to pull the coax from the radio. If the noise stays it's all comming from the power leads and you can use an inline filter to remedy the problem. If it goes away totally it's comming in through the antenna and you'll need to address the noise at it's source with filter capacitors. I had to do that myself with a windshield wiper motor - I just used a feed through filter capacitor on the positive lead and it solved the problem 100%, but you may not be that lucky. Here is a good URL for troubleshooting the problem - http://www.k2bj.com/Pages/Noise/Intro.htm. Good luck!

There was a NIB Grant XL that recently went for $150.00 'Buy It Now' on eBay. Personally, I think $150.00's a decent enough price for CB's SSB top dog. The Galaxy DX 2547 is also a nice base rig.

Ah! A classic station. As far as equipment goes, while there have been newer and better technologies to make going "out of band", a bit easier, what you have will still work just fine.

What you have to consider though, is the age of your "mothball fleet". Electronic components age, whether or not they're being used. Crystals drift, capacitors dry out, etc. A 25 year old radio, may have a lot of out of tolerance parts, which may make it work erratically or not at all. Also, that Palomar amp, at one time, used tubes that could be gotten for less than $10 a piece. Today, if you're lucky, and can still find them, they typically go for $50+ a piece. A set of replacement tubes can cost more than buying a new amp.

Look at a "Mean Green", smaller and more powerful than stock. It might move it just far enough from the header.

Get a better shield.....LOL

You said the radio is wired direct to the battery. This should only be done with the positive connection as the ground should be less the 2 feet long and bolted to a strong grounded part of the car. I like to use the bolts that hold the seats to the floor when possible.

So stop doing it, Dave.

He doesn't need either you or Jim to "legitimize" his activities. That sort of thing has been going on for years and isn't going to stop because of anal-retentives like you, Dave, or Georgie-girl Busch, or Doggie-bag Adairierre, or Aanal Aaron (whoever is playing him this week), or anyone else.

If you don't like it, go do something else for a change. Grow up! You guys neither make nor enforce the Rules.

Sure they are.

>they are radio pirates,,,

Not at all. They are freebanders. The term "radio" pirate is generally assigned to the unlicensed broadcast commercial band users, and the term is accepted as such by the general public and media. The FCC also usually refers to pirate operators as those who broadcast illegally on the FM commercial band, and freebanders as "illegal or unauthorized operator". A search on Ramsey electronics will assist anyone interested in messing around with such a hobby,,,as they offer cheap entry to such endeavors. Speaking of, the FM commercial band may be expanded and opened to even more low power FM stations very soon.........

Experience has shown that vehicle body grounds do not stay constant. I ground twice, once to body, and once to battery. Bonding the frame to the body with some braid is always a good idea.

DO NOT USE SOLID WIRE IN A VEHICLE. You have been warned. <:

NEW STUDY SHOWS TWISTEDHED CAUSE OF STRIFE IN NG

A USENET TRAFFIC STUDY FOCUSING ON REC.RADIO.CB INDICATES A DIRECT CORRELATION BETWEEN TWISTEDHED'S POSTINGS AND % OF NEWSGROUP STRIFE AND UNHAPPINESS.

(April 14, 2003) Panservice, a statistical group that studies Usenet traffic patterns, announced the results of a year-long study today. The focus was rec.radio.cb, a little-known enthusiast group with a small but dedicated following. Among them is an infamous and abrasive personality who calls himself "Twistedhed", known for igniting arguments and lessening the enjoyment of other newsgroup users.

Chief researcher Rheingold Redelius noted that "we were able to plot a graph of when specific conflict occurs. It is always when Twistedhed is active. On the days when Twistedhed appears, the strife-quotient jumps to an alarming 88.7% average, with peaks nearing 100.1%. When he is absent, such as on weekends, the strife-quotient plummets to an average of 1.6%."

While the US Constitution guarantees freedom of speech, individual internet service providers routinely ban their users from inflammatory or abusive Usenet postings. Redelius commented that, "all indications point to one conclusion -- that Twistedhed should voluntarily leave the newsgroup -- or be compelled by his Internet Provider to leave."

What's it matter, Georgie-girl? This is a CB newsgroup, dimbulb. I use both. You should be spending your time in a ham group, but of course nobody will talk to you there..

Besides, I stated that I would post my call as soon as the non-existent Aanal Aaron H. Voobner posted his. He never did. Why should I?

Sure they are.

>they are radio pirates,,,

Not at all. They are freebanders. The term "radio" pirate is generally assigned to the unlicensed broadcast commercial band users, and the term is accepted as such by the general public and media. The FCC also usually refers to pirate operators as those who broadcast illegally on the FM commercial band, and freebanders as "illegal or unauthorized operator". A search on Ramsey electronics will assist anyone interested in messing around with such a hobby,,,as they offer cheap entry to such endeavors. Speaking of, the FM commercial band may be expanded and opened to even more low power FM stations very soon.....

If a filter placed at the rear of the radio does not stop the noise (usually it does not), you must stop the noise at the source. Ford vehicles are notorious for extraneous fuel pump noise. The best way (I have found) to end the noise is to tie an electrolytic capacitor (I use 470uf) in parallel to ground (observe polarity) with both the power and sender wire of the fuel pump. This has to be done as close to the pump as possible. This worked wonders for every Ford vehicle this was done on and should work with all other makes/models if an issue.

Alternator whine (if the noise increases/decreases in pitch as fuel is applied/removed respectively) can be reduced by a similar method, this time with the main lead of the alternator. This is not always effective, but is easy and cheap.

As far as no one hearing you...a product of antenna/coax/radio and car voltage. When you vehicle engine is off, your voltage on the radio is 11-12V instead of 13.8V or better. This impacts your power output of the radio - dramatically. For example, if the output of your radio is 4W on AM with the engine running, it may only put out 2.5W with the engine off. Other than that, if you have a good antenna mounted well with low SWR, good coax, and your radio has good carrier output on transmit and audio when modulated...if no one hears you...might either be being ignored or may not have right location (you might not be close enough to the receiving station) for them to hear you.

Hope this helps, good luck. There are never any absolutes in this stuff.

Didn't got it here, maybe my ISP is blocking them.
About time they treated non-customers with the same lack of trust as they do customers... they block any outgoing e-mails with executable files attached, and bounce them back with a message.
I think they are also blocking downloads on my web space. I have a file uploaded, but I cannot download it and Xenu reports it as a broken link.

have a connex 3300 with no audio.

are there any common problems with this radio to cause this other than the obvious mic, wiring, cold solder.

i would appreciate any help.

tnx in advance.

Connex = notorious for blowing audio chip.
my advise,put the covers back on the radio apply blunt force trauma to the top of the radio with a heavy object, sweep the remains in the trash and try again with a radio that is type accepted. aka uniden, cobra, midland....

Hello All,

From now on I will be on the open road a lot,a nd because of that I have decided it is time to buy a CD Radio. I have a few questions though...

1) What is the best model(s) to get?
2) What is SSB?
3) What is the price of a good CB Radio?
4) Are there any good internet sites out there for CB Newbies?

Thanks In Advance,

Mike

Seems to work great. I do not know a lot about this radio, but from what I have been told, it meets it's specs. Power out is at 20 Watts.

Comes with , what looks like the original Mic, Power cord, and is set up for 151.710 (on my freq. counter)

I don't have a pic, but am working on taking one to send out.

Best offer + shipping takes it.

If I do not get any offers, It'll be put up on ebay.

Thanks for looking!

Go for a Uniden Grant LT. They are a great SSB radio and are being closed out at near giveaway prices on eBay and Yahoo auctions. I've seen new in the box Grant LT's at buy it now prices of $110-$115. I doubt you'll get a better deal on a new SSB rig. In fact, I recently sold my Uniden Washington base to buy a Grant LT. In my opinion, the Grant has better selectivity and sensitivity than the Washington.

By the way, the low prices have nothing to do with the quality of the Grant LT. Uniden has discontinued the radio and is trying to reduce their inventory.

Several years ago I did some tinkeing to improve the rx of a browning eagle. First thing I tried was a mechanical filter. This was an outboard unit that you connected by plugging the cable in place of one of the if amp tubes. Mostly this helped clear up interference from adjacent channels where the interfering transmitters were relatively clean to start with. Greatest improvement came from adding a Q-multiplier/notch filter.

2469. Linear Amp?

I have a Mirage 66 and I had it "Peaked and Tuned" with "Supertalk" added at the time of purchase.

I'm guessing that it's probably putting out about 20 watts or so, does that sound correct?

The radio has a "mic gain" and an "RF power" setting (not to be confused with an RF gain control). How should these be adjusted for maximum "Everyday/Real World" performance?

Should I run an amp?
If so, what kind and how much power do I need?

By the way, It's in a full sized chevy pickup truck with a Wilson 500 antenna.

For local talking your setup sounds just fine. Be sure to get an SWR meter and verifiy you have tuned the antenna to the channels you will use.
I'd suggest running the RF Power adjustment at Noon...or Halfway up.
That should give you a decent deadkey and good swing.
Amps are a whole other story. If you use one be sure to turn the RF Power back down or you will overdrive the amp.
If skip is your aim, an amp is pretty much a must....yeah...you can do some skip work with just a radio but with the millions of radio stations out there, a little fire in the wire goes a long way.....

I appreciate the help!!
Speaking of SWR, I've got an old beat-up PDC1 meter.
It gives me 1.0 on channel 1 and about 2.1 on 40.
I've adjusted the distance that the whip goes into the Wilson magnet mount base and that's the best that I can get.
Now, I do have a very thin piece of cloth between the magnet and the roof of the truck (as not to scratch the paint).

What's a good accurate meter that doesn't cost more than the radio did?

No I'm not trolling, I just simply stated that the connex was real bad about blown audio chips.
I was simply giving instructions on what to do with the rig if all attempts to repair it fail.

Give it a rest, I came from CB to ham and I still have friends in CB radio, we still get together at Jacksonville, Augusta, St. Louis, Hot Springs e.t.c. so I think I have a vested interest in both hobbies. I still 10-12 in my mobile and bump it down with all the goodtime gang from time to time. no mightyer than thou attitude here.....

Yeah I am sure they do... But, the real question is do you know any good CB radio manufacturers? I am considering getting the President Lincoln... What do you think of it? Additionally, a lot of places I am going around recommend that you tune your rig with an SWR meter is this necessary?

What you want is the carrier balance, and it depends upon the model.
Adjust for minimum carrier out on SSB, with no audio. Make sure that there is no audio, a shorting link in place of a microphone can do this.

COBRA 148GTL
Board = PC-412
PLL = MB8719
VR4 - Carrier balance.

COBRA 148 GTL-DX (Early)
Board PC-879
PLL = MB8719
Three loop crystals
VR4 - Carrier Balance.

COBRA 148 GTL-DX (MK2)
PLL = MC145106
One loop crystal.
VR7 - Carrier Balance.

> Also, I would like to know how to adjust the balance > and the bias. Thanks for any info.

The bias is important and, if set wrong, can cause poor audio or the destruction of your output transistors.
The exact procedure will depend upon which model you have, and will need the use of a good current meter.

Peter.

My problem with my Cobra 148NW was there was audio warble on SSB on 12 volts input but cleared up on 14 volts, so the 9 volt regulator was replaced with a Much better 8 volt Low Vin- Out regulator, and the radio no longer showed the 8 volt line changing with audio even with 11 volts in. That cured that problem, but the VCO ,not any of the crystal oscillators, still changes with Audio. Many changes was made on the unit to cure some of its short falls but this one still remains.

Oh on a peak reading meter maybe, real world around 10 to 15 watts

You can run it at full throttle, but I usually like to run them at 60 to 70%.

A lot of what's on that question. What's the size of the alternator? Is this for talking local or long distance?

I'd get rid of the Wilson unless you have height restrictions. Run a 6' SkipShooter, Quadwound or 102" whip, you'll get better performance than the Wilson.

A pair of cheap Cobra FRS radios works better then a pair of

I think you had better get ready to duck, as the "pro-legal" on the group will probably be letting you have it - both barrels.

Nice radio, but not supposed to be for CB use... and may not be that good for a beginner.
If you do get it, you must be careful not to stray onto Amateur frequencies (what it is supposed to be for), as this is very likely to get you in deep sh*t.

> Additionally, a lot of places I am going around

You mean tune the antenna with an SWR meter... and yes, you should.
I have seen a Lincoln with a burned board and components due to a high SWR... stupid b'stard locked the transmit on, and went down the pub.

SWR meters are usually cheap enough... cheaper than that repair was.

Peter.

Im not familiar with connex radios, but if it has a PA, hook a speaker to it and see if that works. Do you have receive audio coming from the speaker when turned on and on normal operation? If you dont, you most likely have a dead Audio Chip. It may be a TA7222AP 10 pin SIP (single inline package) chip mounted to the radio chassis usually on the same side as the channel selector, sometimes not. Check for a replacement chip at RF Parts http://www.rfparts.com

If you go MURS, a blister pack of Columbia MURS-2 portables can be found at Lowes for $80 and at Fry's for $80, unless you can find a sale.
Then you remove the helical dummy load from it, and install a BNC.
2 meter antennas only need about .5" cut off from a 1/4 wave. (18.5")

BTW, FRS radios by law can only have internal antennas. MURS is 2 watts TPO.

FRS is fun to play with. I always like the ones who complain about me being on "their" channel. I advise them to read Part 95. The exact same language is included in Part 95 & Part 97:

"No frequency will be reserved for the exclusive use of any station."

Like I said, I have no idea as to what this radio can or cannot do. All I know is it powered up, gave me 20 and I actually heard someone. I did not xmit due to not using the correct antenna.

There are 4 screws on the back terminal board(TB). 2 of which go to the speaker, so I am guessing this is an external speaker connector. The other 2 screws on the TB, 1 goes to nothing. Not even a ground. the last has one end of a cap tied off and a resistor.

If this will help, the controls on the front are tone, Chan(nel) Mon(itor), squelch, and power/volume.

Again, George Busch WA3MOJ AKA Valmont has proved to be predictable. He has been proved to have an AOL account, proved he is AKA Valmont, but will do exactly as predicted by attacking me with foul language, sexual innuendoes, harassment and his infamous changing of screen nics.
Yes Virginia, George Busch WA3MOJ has an AOL account, the more he whines about it, the more guilty he is.

Another nic for the bozo bin.....

Screen nic change, foul language, sexual innuendoes forth coming.....

You still might want to consider them. They also make a 150+ alt for around 3 bills, that will probably fit right where the stock one is.

Ya know, I was seriously thinking of installing a steel whip, but wouldn't it be best permanently mounted to the roof of the cab?

Kinda high, 102" on top of my full sized "Off Road" jacked-up truck!!

Think it would REALLY be that much better?

What's the story with all the "1/2 wavelength" crap to do with antenna's?

This thing got WAAAAAY off subject (which I'm sure is quite normal), but I appreciate the experienced advise tremendously!!!!!

Keep it coming.

I had good luck with a ferrite choke (part #273-105 at Radio Shack). I clipped that onto the antenna wire where it connects to the CB and the noise drop was dramatic. It's also exactly within your requested price range - $4.99.

You could always out a quick disconnect mount, then just swap out the antenna for a shorter one when off roading.

So you're saying that it WOULD be worth the effort?
Where can I find info on this "Quick Disconnect" mount?
Do I need to do anything to change some wavelength or just attach the whip as it comes?
You mentioned switching to a shorter whip when off-roading, what is the shortest I could go?

I run the Quad wound or Skipshooter around town. When off road, I use the whip because it will bend when it hits.If you just want to talk to other off roaders, you can go with a 2 to 3' antenna. You can always throw the longer antenna in the back and snap it on when the going gets clear.

The coils do need to be fitted, but the problem you describe is not caused by that.
The value of those two coils are not critical, take some from an old set or just find some about the same length, windings and wire thickness (thinner wire may not take the current).

As for losing channels, there are two options that spring to mind.
1. VCO off tune.
This will give you some channels, and the rest will be totally dead - no transmit.
The correct way to do this involves using a digital volt meter and adjusting at the top and bottom channels. A quick fix is to adjust it to make sure that all channels are available.

2. Channel selector or connections.
This would usually result in some channels being correct (often at one end), and the others are often repeats of the correct channels. Sometimes some of the channels may be dead as the PLL sees a miscode and shuts down transmit.
If it is the selector, usually it would need a new one (which may neot be easy to get), if connections or tracks broken, then they just need repairing.

Regards,

Peter.

Is that one of the newer versions of 148?
It does sound like, although technology is getting better, quality is dropping.

I have known RF to get back into the VCO on a new radio, causing distortion on SSB. This was due to the return path and re-radiating signal.
Is there a possibility that the FM audio path is still letting some audio through to the VCO while switched to SSB?

Peter.

I have a new Shack unit I bought off ebay for $25. Great deal. But the problem with them is you get about 1/4 mile range with the rubber duck antenna. You need a minimum of a replacement telescoping antenna to get any range. Also, the unit are heavy because 4 watts uses a ton of battery power.

They are truly not portable anymore.

Hello,
I know that many of us have a terrible time finding parts to repair our broken electronics, gadgets, etc. Sometimes you can find the part, but then it's real expensive because it's from a manufacturer or big company. On the other hand, people with weird parts left around often find themselves being wasteful and throwing them away. Because of this, the guys where I work decided it was ok to open a site for people to post and find parts without being hassled.
http://www.info-services.net/gpr
It is called the Global Parts Repository. If you have some odd parts around, post them. If you have any suggestions or want to help with the project, please send me an e-mail. I hope people find will find this useful.

2566. old qsl cards?

Among tons of photos inherited from her father my wife recently discovered what appears to be a couple hundred old postcards used as qsl cards from cb users. Typically they include a three letter and four number designation, some personal slogan or other, address, and a note indicating what channels the person monitors. As some indicate "Monitoring all 23 channels," I know they at least predate the 40-channel units. These come from over several states from Wisconsin to New Mexico.

I knew of qsl cards for shortwave radio stations, but never knew they existed for individual cb users. I'm wondering whether anyone can tell me more about these, as when they were popular, etc. Also, any idea if they have monetary value, and to whom?

Thanks for any info.

Great idea, Mike! I hope that you'll receive lots of publicity, that your site catches on, and that you'll have the right mix of buyers and KEYCLOWNS AINT US, Inc.

Memo
To: Aaron Voobner, Co-President
From: N8WWM, Co-President, best flamer in NG, and legal operator.
Subject: Recycling operation status report...

Voob...I got the 25 pound maul ready to drop on some more of that ILLEGAL FAGGOT KEYCLOWN EQUIPMENT AS FAST AS IT STARTS FLOWING. I hope my wife can drive a forklift, cuz we will need it in order to get all the crates of stuff to the new pre-destruction warehouse faster than I can smash 'em!

By the way, Do you know where the keys went to the hydraulic compactor's apparatus room? Can't find 'em anywhere. We are starting to pile up on the far end of the warehouse. The stuff has all been de-keyclowned, but I want to get it packed up for our inner city schools quickly. If we can't run the compactor I am gonna have a big pile of chassis sitting here after they are stripped out.

Also, that medical amplifier company that needs the 70,000 2SC2879's will get the order filled this week. I am de-keyclowning a bunch of train-built amps right now, and the demo crew wants to work OT on the job. I quoted the customer 75 cents each for the 2879's...is that OK with you?

There's an outfit that wants to couple the power mike and toy circuit boards to ultrasonic detectors and sell them as early warning systems for the blind. We need to look into this quickly. I understand the Helen Keller Foundation is willing to finance a factory for us to do the work and take 3 cents off the price of each unit to amortize the loan. Dude, we are gonna be rich!!! Authorize payroll to include an extra 250 bucks in each crew members check for the next 3 months. We got it, so let's share it. Afterall, it aint like the FAGGOT ILLEGAL KEYCLOWNS can do shit about it.

valmont = Jack Doff = Geogre

When you use them interchangeably, you confuse everybody.

Yes, they will preform out of band at reduced ratings if you have software which will program the radio. Maxon is not the best choice for a two way radio, hence the reason they are so cheap.

Valmont /aaron thats how stupid these fucking jackasses are they are in love with a fictional guy on the NG whom they call george, the biggest homo of all uses prodigy , aol and posts thru supernews. He then wants to accuse others of being everyone else. The problem is these assclowns are so fucking stupid that if I wanted to post anonymous, the funniest part is you say a few words that i do and now I am you, It is :proven" LOL the only thing proven was Landshark was caught dead to rights in a Transexual Newsgroup, lock, cock and barrel. Yes this is one of the newer 148s.
I had a Galaxy which RF was causing the PLL to come unlocked, and a 100 pf cap on two of the program lines stopped that problem.
On this Cobra I am trying to find the cause, it might take time but I am determined to find it. This radio does not have a FM mode.

Thats for shure, on my unit the AM receive was way down, and the first 455KHz IF coil was bad.
Changed it out and now AM recieve is much better. SSB still sucks on receive.

Amateur Radio Newsline™ Report 1344 – May 16, 2003

The following is a closed circuit advisory. Amateur Radio Newsline report number 1344 will follow.

Ladies and gentlemen, Amateur Radio Newsline's support fund administrator, Andy Jarema, N6TCQ.

I want to begin by saying thank-you to all of those who have contributed so far to keeping these Amateur Radio Newsline reports coming your way. As I said a few weeks ago, to continue bringing you the news and to continue to honor the accomplishments of youthful radio amateurs with the Young Ham of the Year Award, we have to raise about $1000 a month. I am happy to tell you that thanks to your generosity, we are now about 20% of the way to that goal. That's the good news. The bad is that we still have 80% of the way to go and the bills keep coming in.

I know that I have said this before but I have to again. The bottom line is that you, and only you keep all of this going. Its your tax deductible contributions that pay the cost of producing and distributing Amateur Radio Newsline bulletins. Its your generosity that makes possible the honor bestowed on a young ham operator every August.

Without any doubt, you are the most important part of the Amateur Radio Newsline family because it is you who tell us through your contributions that you want us to continue. And for that we are eternally grateful.

Remember, Amateur Radio Newsline is a federal 501 c 3, not for profit corporation, and, as I said earlier, your contributions are tax deductible. Our address is the Amateur Radio Newsline Support Fund, Post Office Box 660937, Arcadia California, 91066.

Thank you for taking the time to listen. Newscast number 1344 follows immediately.

Thank you Andy. Now, Amateur Radio Newsline report number 1344 with a release date of Thursday, May 15th 2003 to follow in 5-4-3-2-1.

The following is a Q-S-T. The tornadoes of May continue as ham radio lends a hand and the doors open at Hamvention 2003. Find out the details on Amateur Radio Newsline report number 1344 coming your way right now.

RESCUE RADIO: THE TORNADOES OF MAY CONTINUE

According to statics, May 4th through the 10th, 2003 was the most active week of tornadoes on record. This, as scores of twisters ripped across the nation's midsection, reducing hundreds of homes and businesses to splinters. We have more on the storms and the part ham radio played in the aftermath in this report.

It was a busy week for ARES and RACES volunteers across the nations mid-section. Nearly 300 tornadoes have been reported since the beginning of May. That’s nearly 100 more than the most recent comparable outbreak in 1999. And so far, May 4th to the 10th has been the most volatile time of all.

Tornadoes have been everywhere from Oklahoma and Kansas to the West and to Alabama and Tennessee here on the south. And ham radio operators have been on the job as severe weather spotters looking for approaching storms. They have also been part of the clean-up effort after they have hit.

Among the groups using ham radio is the Salvation Army. Its website says that nine emergency disaster vehicles were set up in Kansas and Western Missouri following twisters that hit there. Its communications arm -- the Salvation Army Team Emergency Radio Network was dispatched to each location to assist using Amateur Radio channels.

One twister that struck the Oklahoma City area late Friday the 9th approached the metropolitan area from the southwest, then skipped through the city. This storm snapped utility poles, flipped a light airplane parked at a local airport and ripped apart an elementary school. It also knocked out a lot of telephone communications bringing out emergency trained ham radio operators to fill in.

Not long after this tornado hit, the Federal Communications Commission declared a general communications emergency for the Oklahoma area. United States Amateurs were told that they could not use 3 point 900 MHz, plus or minus 3 kHz, unless they were handling emergency traffic. The FCC said the declaration was in support of ham radio communications by the Salvation Army's tornado relief efforts. The ban was in force for about 24 hours, terminating at 22:30 on Saturday May 10th.

And on Saturday, May 10th, the weather service posted more tornado warnings for parts of Indiana, Missouri and Illinois. And the Storm Prediction Center said severe thunderstorms were likely from eastern Oklahoma to western Ohio. In northeastern Kentucky, at least 17 people were treated at hospitals and more than two dozen homes were damaged Saturday night after a tornado hit in Lewis and Mason counties near Maysville. This put already weary ham radio communicators back on alert once again. Adding to the misery, torrential downpours flooded streets and fields in Indiana put hams there on call as well.

But it was not over yet. Storms with wind speeds of up to 150 mph hit parts of Central Kentucky early Sunday the 11th. Homes were damaged in Hardin, Hart and Mercer counties. Retired ARRL President George Wilson, W4OYI, who lives in Owensboro Kentucky says that there were two siren alerts indicating severe weather was on its way. He says that local hams involved in storm spotting duties geared up under the leadership of Emergency Coordinator Jake Jennings, KG4EMO. Thankfully, no twisters actually hit but one was spotted around midnight causing one of the alarms.

Severe weather alert systems and ham radio operators involved in ARES and RACES may be in for quite a work out in the days to come. This is because meteoreologists say that the 2003 tornado season is really just beginning.

For the Amateur Radio Newsline, I'm Don Wilbanks, AE5DW, in New Orleans.

President Bush has cleared the way for federal aid by issuing a disaster declaration for ravaged areas of Tennessee, Kansas, and Missouri Oklahoma. The tornadoes combined with straight-line wind, lightning and floods to caused 44 deaths from Kansas to Georgia. (ARNewsline™)

HAMVENTION 2003®: HAMVENTION WANTS TO STAY AT HARA!

The 2003 Dayton Hamvention is on and the big news is that it wants to stay where it is. Amateur Radio Newsline’s producer Bill Pasternak, WA6ITF, has that story:

The Hamvention wants to stay at the Hara Arena. So says the Dayton Daily News which reports that Hamvention organizers are in negotiations for a two-year contract to comtinue using the Trotwood Ohio facility. My colleague Henry Feinberg, K2SSQ, has that part of the story:

--

The Dayton Daily News article Bill refereed to quotes Hamvention production manager Garry Matthews, KB8GOL. He says that organizers are pleased with Hara Arena and want to keep the show in the area. Also, that no other local venue can comfortably hold Hamvention at its current size. This says Matthews, makes a move unlikely.

A story in the May 2nd ARRL Letter said exhibitors would prefer the show to be held in Columbus if Hara wasn't available. Indianapolis and Cincinnati were also listed as possible sites.

When asked by the Dayton Daily News, Matthews said that the article doesn't mean Hamvention organizers are looking for another site. But says KB8GOL, organizers do have contingency plans that would move the convention elsewhere if Hara couldn't host it.

Will Hamvention 2004 be at the HARA Arena? We should know more by Sunday the 18th when Hamvention 2003 comes to an end.

I’m Henry Feinberg, K2SSQ. Bill.

Thanks Henry.

HAMVENTION 2003®: SOCIAL HOUR WILL HONOR AWARD WINNERS

Now turning to the social side of Hamvention 2003 -- and after all -- the Hamvention is a major social event -- there is some very good news. Seemingly taking a cue from the highly successful ham radio cocktail hour at the National Association of Broadcasters convention, the Hamvention will host a similar gathering this year. As Hamvention General Chairman Pat Neff, N8IGS, told RAIN's Hap Holly, KC9RP, this gathering is to honor the Hamventions award winners:

Neff: "Theres going to a an award winners reception at HARA on Saturday. Its going to start at I believe 6' o'clock and it will be within two of the largest forum rooms that will be converted. But its only going to have a capacity of about 450 people."

--

In addition to drinks and horderves what else can those buying tickets to this gathering expect?

--

The award winners will be giving acceptance speaches there and, like I say, its going to be an informal to-do that will allow the average attendee to be able to possibly get to talk with the award winners as well.

--

Neff says that the decision to hold the reception at the Hara Arena came as the result of feedback from past Hamvention attendees. Many said it was hard to spend the day at the show and then travel across town for a banquet. With the banquet now history and an informal reception at the Hara taking its place, those wanting to attend need only buy a ticket and hang around. We will.

For the Amateur Radio Newsline, Bill Pasternak, WA6ITF.

HAMVENTION 2003®: BIG HAPPENINGS IN DX

Still with Hamvention news, this years D-X forum should be one of the better ones in recent histoey. So says moderator Jay Slough, K4ZLE, who adds that the scheduled speakers are a really impressive line up. For instasnce, Daily D-X Editor Bernie McClenny, W3UR, will be talking on the recent AH3D operation. And Al Hernandez, K3VN on hand with the ZL7C story. The ARRL's Wayne Mills, N7NG with a DXCC update, and if thats not enough, Tedd Mirgliotta, KB8NW, will be on hand to present the Northern Ohio DX Association Award for the 2002 DXpedition of the Year. It looks like there will be something for everyone at Hamvention 2003. (OPDX)

RADIO LAW: HR-1478 GETS SUPPORT FROM CQ MAGAZINE

CQ Magazine has joined the ARRL in asking hams to support House Bill HR-1478. This is the measure re-introduced by New York Congressman Steve Israel to expand the limited protections of "PRB-1" to homeowners' associations and restrictive covenants.

According to the ARRL, the 2002 version of the bill died without action. The new bill initially had 13 co-sponsors from both parties including the only two known hams in Congress. They are identified as Representative Greg Walden, WB7OCE, of Oregon and Representative Mike Ross, WD5DVR, of Arkansas.

The ARRL and CQ are both now encouraging amateurs to contact their representatives in Congress to request that they support and even co-sponsor the bill. (CQ)

ENFORCEMENT: PIRATE BROADCASTER SENTENCED TO JAIL

A Florida pirate broadcaster will spend the next nine months in a federal prison. This is the sentence handed down by United States Magistrate David A. Baker against Rayon Sherwin "Junior" Payne.

Payne's conviction is the result of an investigation that began in February of 1999. About that time the Commission's Tampa Office began receiving complaints from residents and broadcasters in Orlando of interference to the reception of licensed broadcast stations. The investigation lead them to Payne's unlicensed station after which he was charged with multiple counts of operating an unlicensed FM radio facility.

Payne pleaded guilty to two of the counts before Magistrate Baker who also sentenced him to one year supervised release in addition to the jail time. Once he is released Payne must perform 50 hours of community service and must not violate any Federal, State or Local laws of the Communications Act of 1934.

The FCC announced the sentence on Monday May 12th. The case was prosecuted by the United States Attorney's Office for the Middle District of Florida.

(FCC)

ENFORCEMENT: AN EXPENSIVE LESSON FOR MICHIGAN HAM

The FCC has told a ham to pay a $12,000 fine for willful and repeated interference, broadcasting of music and failing to identify with his call sign. Being ordered to pay is Scott E. Kamm, N0UGN, currently of Souix City Iowa but who had his statiion licensed to the town of Waterbury Nebraska when he was first cited.

As previously reported, last December the FCC T-hunted down a strong signal on the input to a local repeater to Kamm's Waterbury Nebraska residence. Agents then performed a station inspection where they found a two meter transciever set to the repeaters frequecy pair. But Kamm denied any knowledge of the jamming, telling the inspectors that he never transmitted on the system and that the radio gear was used for monitoring purposes only.

But the FCC refused to buy Kamm's story. On January 24th of this year the regulatory agency issued Kamm a Notice of Aparenlt Liability in the amount of $12,000. Kamm never responded to it. And so a few days ago on May 7th the FCC affirmed its earlier order and gave Kamm 30 days tio pay up. (FCC)

ENFORCEMENT: $2400 FINE FOR UNREGISTERED TOWER

The FCC has also issued a $2400 a monetary forfeiture to Morris Communications, Inc. of Greenville, South Carolina for failing to register an antenna structure. The FCC calls this one a willful violation of Section 17.4(a) of the Commission's Rules.

On July 8, 2002, the Atlanta Office issued Morris a $3,000 forfeiture notice for failing to register its antenna structure in willful violation. In its response, Morris admits that its tower was not registered, but argued that the forfeiture should be rescinded because it did not "willfully" violate the rules.

Morris claims that it made two good faith attempts to register the structure in 1999, but the Commission first rejected its application on erroneous grounds and later returned it without explanation.

But says the FCC, the Rules provides that, effective July 1, 1996, the owner of any proposed or existing antenna structure that requires notification to the Federal Aviation Administration must register the structure with the Commission. Abother section of the Rules provides that the owner of an antenna structure that had been assigned painting or lighting requirements prior to July 1, 1996 must have registered the structure prior to July 1, 1998.

Morris admits that its Adrian tower was not registered at the time of the inspection on May 7, 2002. Accordingly, the FCC says that that Morris violated the Rules and has ordered it to pay the fine. The entire fionding is on-line at: http://hraunfoss.fcc.gov/edocs_public/attachmatch/DA-03-1366A1.doc (FCC)

RADIO RULES: FCC RESOLVES COMMERCIAL BROADCAST SPECTRUM ISSUE

The FCC has released new procedures to allocate and license the commercial F-M broadcast band. This, where conflicting commercial and noncommercial uses are proposed. Since most new F-M and T-V channels can be used for commercial purposes and would be affected by non-commercial proposals, the CGC Communicator says that this decision may have widespread implications. (CGC)

RADIO RULES: FAA TO SEND CLEARANCE DATA TO FCC ELECTRONICALLY

According to a Primedia trade publication, the Federal Communications Commission and the Federal Aviation Administration have announced that tower and antenna airspace clearance data from the FAA will now be transferred electronically to the FCC. This will enable the Commission to process antenna structure registration applications faster and more accurately, and will save staff time at both ends. The electronic transfer of data is also expected to reduce the time it takes to get this information into the FCC's database from one to two weeks to only one day. More information is opn the web at http://beradio.com/ar/radio_currents_24/index.htm#tower1 (CGC)

HAM RADIO PUBLICITY: NPR FEATURES “HELLO WORLD - A LIFE IN HAM RADIO”

Tom Walsh, K1TW, reports over the Internet that National Public Radio featured ham radio in a recent Talk of the Nation segment. Walsh says that the final 15 minutes of the two hour program on April 30th was devoted to the new book "Hello World - A life in Ham Radio” and even featured callers including someone who is a QSL manager.

Tom says that you can still hear the program. Just taker your web browser to the National Public Radio archives and bring up the April 30 version of Talk of the Nation. Go to the second hour, find the last 15 minutes, turn your speakers up and enjoy. The URL is www.npr.org/programs/totn/index.html>http://www.npr.org/programs/totn/index.html (K1TW, K1KI, others)

NAMES IN THE NEWS: W9GIG TO DEPART THE IRA

ARRL Central Division Director Dick Isely, W9GIG, says that he will not stand for re-election to an official position within the Illinois Repeater Association. Isley has been a guising force within the repeater council for years.

It was Isley’s guidence that helped to create the National Frequency Coordinators Committee several years ago. He has also served with ther Illinois Repeater Associuation for many years and has become a main stay in the repeater coordination community.

According to his departure announcement, the decision to stand-down has nothing directly to do with his position within the ARRL but he says that does want to put more of his time toward League matters. Isley says that he has thoroughly enjoyed working for the Illinois Repeater Association but feels that it is time that new people step up to leadership positions. He also wished the group continued success in its work of providing efficient and fair Amateur Radio repeater frequency coordination to the hams of Illinois. (Via E-Mail)

INTERNATIONAL - ITALY: WOULD YOU LIKE TO FLY IN MY BALLOON

Remember the 1970's song Up-up and Away by the 5th Dimension? Well a ham radio group in Italy has come up with a 21st century Amateur Radio version of just such an event.

The Milan Chapter of the Italian Amateur Radio Society says that its planning a manned Amateur Radio Balloning Experiment to take to the sky on Saturday, May 17th from Mantova Airport. Operating on 144.330 Mhz upper sideband, the in-flight operation is slated to begin between 08:00 to 09:00 U-T-C and last between 1 and 3 hours. A-P-R-S will be used to track the balloon during the time its aloft.

More information on the flight is the groups wesite. That information appears on the groups website at www.arimi.it/rubriche/arbe.html (IT2SAI)

ON THE AIR: GRID CIRCLEING ROVERS WANTED

N9REP says over the VHF Reflector that the K9RN VHF Contest Group is now accepting applications for captive rovers during the June VHF/UHF contest. Wendell says that the terrain in and around grid square EN52 is very rugged and harsh and that the first requirement for rovers is a vehicle capable of handling any on-or-off road QSO task, particularly regarding grid circling.

Any team wishing to be a captive rover must supply their own approved vehicle. A list of vehicle manufacturers that appear to meet all of the demanding Rover specifications is at www.maximog.com (VHF Relector)

THAT FINAL ITEM: ITS T-HUNT TIME

And finally this wee, do you like hidden transmitter hunting? If you do then this one is for you. Here's Joe Moell, K0OV, has the latest information on the World Amateur Radio Direction Finding Championship games that are coming up.

Who are the best transmitter hunters in the country? That's what we'll find out when the Third USA ARDF Championships get under way near Cincinnati, Ohio on July 30. The sponsors, OH-KY-IN ARC and the Cincinnati Orienteering Club, promise two challenging radio-orienteering courses. One will be on two meters, and the other on 80 meters. This is a test of individuals, and it's all on foot. You'll have five transmitters to find each day, negotiating your way through the forest with your map, compass and direction-finding gear. If you can walk or jog a 10 km racecourse, you have the stamina to complete an ARDF event. If you're a senior citizen, don't worry about being trounced by teenagers, because there are a total of nine age categories, five for men and boys, four for women and girls.

This year, the USA Championships are an international event, combined with the International Amateur Radio Union (IARU) Region 2 ARDF Championships. If past events are any indication, there will be plenty of international experts in the sport on hand, so you'll have a chance to learn foxtailing tips and techniques from the very best. Positions on ARDF Team USA to next year's World Championships in the Czech Republic are open, so perhaps you can earn a spot for yourself. We're looking for good candidates in all age/gender categories, so encourage your kids and grandkids to give it a try.

For the most intense experience, stay in the dorms at Miami University of Ohio, in close contact with the other competitors. But space is limited, so now is the time to make plans. You can stay elsewhere nearby if you like. In either case, time is getting short, so get registered at the Championships Web site: www.ardfusa.com That's ardfusa.com

For lots more on foxhunting, including equipment ideas and techniques, go to www.homingin.com. Read about past USA Championships and get a link to this year's. That's one word "homingin" --- homingin.com.

From southern California, where there's some kind of transmitter hunt almost every weekend, this is Joe Moell, Kay-zero-Oscar-Victor, for Amateur Radio Newsline.

Don’t worry if you missed those websites Joe mentioned. You will find them I the print edition of this weeks Amateur Radio Newsline report. (K0OV, ARNewsline™)

Put the antenna's stinger down as far as it will go, and measure again. If it's a little better, but still not there, start cutting the stinger by very small increments.

Check JC Whitney, too,,,,they have alternators up to 240 amp for fifty bucks more.....

True, the mean greens are a 1 wire hook up, not sure about the JC Whitney's. Didn't know they were that many amps at JC.

Actually, you can retrofit the Collins Torsional Mode Mechanical Filters in the same position as where the ceramic filter is located. Both of these types have a 2K in/out impedance, not like the old style disc resonator filters that needed tuning caps on the input and output. You would need to use small diameter coax cable, like RG-174 to make the connections; this would give you the benefits of the mechanical filter. The part number series of the filters are 526-8695-XXX, where the last three digits specify whether it is an AM, SSB, or CW bandwidth. If you purchase them directly from Rockwell Filter Products, in Costa Mesa, Ca. they are right around 90 dollars, shipped. These are the same filters that some of the radio companies are selling as options for their receivers and transceivers for between 120 and 140 dollars.

You could also offer a non-flash alternative, give people the option to download or go to a non-Flash version.
Not all browsers support Flash, and not everyone wants it.

With the ceramic filter assembly, it looks like he has three CFU-XXX series filters in series. This gives you 12 elements. It's not a bad deal, especially when the circuit includes an embedded amplifier to compensate for the loss of the filter assembly. The crystal filter can help with desense, since it acts as a roofing filter, ahead of the 2nd mixer. Since the AGC voltage is derived from the 455kHz I.F. that 10.695MHz filter will help prevent AGC loop in the later stages from being captured by an off-channel signal. It looks like either a 2-pole or a 4-pole monolithic filter is used. If a 4-pole unit is used, that would work better.

One thing that helps in the Cobra 2000/2010/148 series of radios is changing that RF Gain diode to an HP 1N5757 PIN diode. The conventional diode that the Cobra folks use can be a cause of IMD products, if a strong signal is able to bias it into conduction.

I purchased a used Cobra 21LTDSTML with antenna. It is in great condition and seems to work. I have hooked it up on my truck and tried to get it to work, but cannot hear anything when I turn it on. It lights up and it seems to get a strong signal according to the meter on it. Do I need an external speaker for this too? I would appreciate anyones help with getting my equipment working.

We tune antennas to the radio. Some dummies actually trim the coax.

1.) as already mentioned the mic has to be plugged in to recieve on cobra radios.
2.) make sure the squelch is turned off (counter clock wise).
3.) Turn RF Gain all the way up (clock wise).
4.) turn the volume up (clock wise).
5.) Make sure the radio isn't in PA(public address) mode.
6.) Last but not least open the radio and see if there still is a speacker in it. Some people are known to remove them to add noise toys and echo boards and use external speakers.

I like mine on the back bumper. The beam characteristics come in handy. Around here, I'm in the middle of two groups on the same channel. I just point my mobile in the direction I want to talk or listen. I can also knock out an idiot and keep talking anyway by turning the vehicle. At least 6dB front to back.

I have a trucker 200 linear amp. I am wondering what the input wattage is for this amp. I have a Ranger RG-99 radio in my pickup. This radio puts out 12 watts stock AM, I am assuming this would be too much power input to this amp. Thoughts?

You still might want to consider them. They also make a 150+ alt for around 3 bills, that will probably fit right where the stock one is.

bucks more.....

Yea,,,and some are easy install, just as you say,,a single wire and no special mounting assemblies needed...will probably buy my next alternator through them......I've used the company a few times and have been pleased.

I too have used the, but for small items mainly.

When I put a larger alternator in my large car, I supplemented the stock 10 gauge with an 8 gauge to the battery. What good is 125 amps if you try to feed it through a small pipeline? My terminals were crimped, then soldered.

I'd be suspicious on anyone converting a radio, when they can't even spell "knob".

The DAK was a novelty radio, in its pristine stock form. Yes, they were known for some stability and reliability issues. But this particular radio is a bastard. It's worthless as a collector's piece, and ridiculous as a "user's" radio.

No doubt about it, the "wiggle" room is a good idea, even if one isn;t running something that sucks those type amps.

Never had anything that large in any of MY vehicles, but hey......"comes

If you dont even hear static, try an external speaker. If that dont work, try a different mic. If it is receiving at all. You should see

This one is a new one to me.
I got a used Galaxy Pluto that seems to have talkback in it.
Everything looks like it should inside. No wires removed, moved, parts cut or anything like that. But I get talkback. On sideband, I hear what it would sound like if I was listening on another radio on AM.
The radio works great other than annoying talkback that is not needed.
Anyone know of a cure for this? I allready checked the Galaxy site and other site on Google and Yahoo, but no luck. I've worked on CB Radios for over 15 years and never heard this problem before. Any help would be appreciated. You can respond to my e-mail at cobra666@budweiser.com

I read what you said. All antennas are not "semi" directional. A whip is omni-directional and is why I clarified such.

> Look before you leap.

Don't get so defensive when an inquiry is posed of you. I merely am asking why you claim an "antenna" becomes semi-directional when mounted on a hitch or bumper when it is an omni-directional antenna. I clarified
"whip" as it is omni-directional, no? You replaced it with a general blanket term of "antennas"....most mobile antennas are omnidirectional.
The radiating pattern is omni-directional from a single whip (antenna) mounted vertically and correctly on a vehicle, not directional, not semi-directional. It (the whip) may take on certain directional capabilities and capacities depending on the manner in which it is mounted, but it will continue to be more omni-directional than directional. No?
With that said, I fail to see how a single whip (antenna, mobile) (properly mounted, grounded, etc.) mounted on the hitch or bumper, makes the performance more directional than omni-directional. Perhaps you can enlighten me with your knowledge concerning such.

not sure on this radio
but typically, there should be a buffer to feed the audio stage, if the talkback volume is controlled by the volume control, u should be able to trace it back, some i have found r fed direct to the wipers of the radio.

if it is fixed volume, u should have a preset that controls it.

or how about the cheats way.. fit a relay operated by the ptt line that breaks the speaker contact or audio chip i/p / o/p on key up

Great info, Pete. I have a InRad 250 Hz CW filter installed in my FT-840.
The folks at InRad will custom build to suit your needs, (Even for a CB.)
however, you must order at least ten. At approx. $115 per filter, that's a tad too rich for my blood.

At $36, the CBCI channel Guard is a nice cost-effective way to improve a CB's ACR. It helps to start out with a really good receiver too. I really would like to throw that SGC ADSP2 board in Uniden Grant XL just to hear how it sounds though, but my wallet protests. Take care now. :-)

Jimmy,
For the most part, most CB radio final sections were never meant to be modified or adjusted to an antenna. Most were set for ~50 ohms impedance at the time of mfgr.

: We tune antennas to the radio. Some dummies actually trim the coax.

Scott,
Some antennas have specific desired coax lenghts, even different types of coax lines in series to match to the radio to the antenna feedpoint impedance. Cushcrafts half wave Ringo type antenna has a coax line setup and trimed as a capacitor.

Jim,
From what I've seen for the last two months, the
'owner' would probably be doing the 'group' a favor by closing "r.r.cb".
If you will notice, there are very few 'legitimate' posts, most of it's just more of the usual nonsense that has caused people to leave. I remember a brag being made several months (about a year?) ago about 'taking over' the group. I think 'they' have accomplished that by all the garbage that has become the 'norm' on "r.r.cb". Personally, I think it's time for a 'courtesy flush'...
'Doc

Twistedhed's Reply:

Good gosh, Doc...amps, freebanding, auctions, referrals for alternator sites, antenna information....business as usual...too bad you see the glass as half empty...I say it's half full. Still a great place to meet great folks. Don't sweat the small stuff...just move on past what you can't handle or don't like. Jim, I'm with Scott,,,any decent conversation that is informative is usually welcomed. Those interested in censoring certain venues of information, or worse,,,,,shutting them down, should move on.

This forum is supposed to be a place where people can talk about anything that used to be talked about on the rec.radio.cb Usenet newgroup before all of the techie types that aren't on ego trips left, and before so much of the focus shifted toward legal versus illegal operation.
It's also supposed to a place where the edges of the CB envelope, so to speak, can be discussed without the pro-legal operation types muddying the waters.

With the above in mind, discussions of GMRS, FRS, MURS, freebanding, amps, mods, etc. shouldn't be a problem.

I have built a transmitter for FM broadcast band that puts out about 100mw. By using parts from an old car rx the tx scans the band transmitting a tone of you choice. The tx stops scanning when a small microphone mounted outside the vehicle detects the tone coming from someone elses rx. You can imagine what this is good for as I have had more fun with it than you can possibly have with your clothes on. Just think about 1000 watts of a pure tone sounding off in someones car. Do you think there would be a market for something like this? The only thing I have obseved in testing that may be a problem is that most people who run the super powered steroes usually play a cd instead of lstening to FM but there are enough out there listening to the radio to make this fun.

For those out here who knew him, Bill was more than an electronics engineer and rf technician...he was a friend.

I don't have the details of his passing, but he has been battling cancer for quite sometime now.

Now he is in NO PAIN and straight with GOD. God Bless you Bill, we will miss you!

no there's a much simpler one than that.
has to be done in the dark though!

all u need is a set of jump leads or a really long run of coax braid (so u can be some distance away & not get mullered) connect jump leads together to make a long lead.

whip off your ht feed to the centre of distributor cap.

connect one end of lead to HT. creep up behind noisy car connect other end to 'offending' vehicles nice chrome exhaust pipe.

retire to safe distance.

turn your car over a few times...

bingo...thump thump stops cause mosfets in power amp blows...

Naturally, Georgie-girl can't spell or use proper punctuation. This is, after all, Rec.radio.CB and it isn't "owned" by anyone but the UseNet and Google. It certainly isn't "owned" by Georgie-girl Busch or Doggie-Bag Adairierre or JJ or Franky or any other dimbulb. Since you can't post anything but garbage, why don't you go back to your precious ham bands and protect them from "intruders"? It's obvious that you never use your hambands since you're always here posting garbage. No wonder they keep getting re-assigned!

Aanal Aaron was never correct about anything. He didn't know that hams were exempt from "type acceptance". He didn't know that Novice and Tech+ license holders were authorized to use ten meters. He thought
ALL 10 meter radios were illegal. He was a complete idiot! HAHAHAHAHA!

Hello Dino, and all:

I talked with Bills wife Betty today, (21 May 03) and she told me Bill died in her arms today, and could feel his soul leaving. But was relieved that Bills suffering was now ended. And that Bill is with the Lord.

Bill was always a straight shooter, honest business man, and a good friend. And always was a delight to talk to on the Ham or CB radios.
Conversations about radios, amps, antennas, mics, radio characters, conditions, bands, radio theory, and Electronics knowledge was gladly shared, always kept the radio conversations with a large listening audience, coming back for more.

Everyone usually joined in the radio conversations, and had a good time.

Radio antics with Bill was a great time as many joined in, and had a ball. Others enjoyed the great technical discussions, agruments, and Saturday Evening Antenna raising parties complete with a Pot Luck and BBQ.

We will certainly miss him. Lord Jesus be you with you Bill.

Our prays are with his wife Betty to ease her suffering.

You just need a couple of coils capable of handling about two amps of current. The exact amount of inductance is unimportant in this case since they are only intended to filter out most of your engine noise or other ac noise and at the same time allow the dc power to pass through unchanged. Just find some that will physically fit into the space provided.

Make sure your mic is plugged in. Otherwise, the internal speaker may be bad and you do need an external speaker or fix the internal one.

I have an old midland solid state that has cap for tuning to the antenna.
Most people didnt know how to tune them though. They would just crank for max forward power not understanding what this will do to modulation.

valmont,
You were talking about Bill. I was talking about your opinion on why he and so many others are not here. It isn't just because of the "key clowns", or "Voobner", but also because of all the trash posted in so-called retaliation.
If you 'filter' out the usual crap thats been the 'norm' here lately, there hasn't been a dozen posts in this NG in over a month. As was -also-stated in another 'venue', it's time for a

That is only if the antenna is designed to use the coax as a counterpoise, or if there is no place to mount an antenna such as on a fiberglass-bodied semi tractor. This may be true in those situations and relative to higher frequency HF setups (such as CB). Antenna theory is the same for any band, right? Then what would an operator do with a mobile on 75 Meters that would "require" 60 feet of coax in a Honda? Where would he put all that wire? Cushcraft 2 meter, 6 meter, and 440 base antennas are tuned by extend or reduce length. If you have to use coax to set it up, you are treating a symptom, not a cause. The correct way to set an antenna is at the antenna itself, not by dickering with coax. I have installed hundreds of thousands of antenna systems, and not one ever required a "certain" length of coax. If the antenna required counterpoise, then we knew that when we started. Thank the good Lord that the coax length thing is only "true" on CB, otherwise thousands of operators in other services would be out of luck.

Jim,
From what I've seen for the last two months, the 'owner' would probably be doing the 'group' a favor by closing "r.r.cb". If you will notice, there are very few 'legitimate' posts, most of it's just more of the usual nonsense that has caused people to leave. I remember a brag being made several months (about a year?) ago about 'taking over' the group. I think 'they' have accomplished that by all the garbage that has become the 'norm' on
"r.r.cb". Personally, I think it's time for a 'courtesy flush'...

can't handle or don't like. Jim, I'm with Scott,,,any decent conversation that is informative is usually welcomed. Those interested in censoring certain venues of information, or worse,,,,,shutting them

If only you could merely abide by rules or terms of services..you wouldn't have such problems and wouldn't have been reduced to the hypocritical, undignified lid you have become. Oh, and,,,,you really are......welcome.

To learn the technical TRUTH about CB Radio without all the hype from people who are just plain ignorant, check out the following books from CBC International. They're selling right now at a big discounts on our EBAY & AMAZON stores too.

Check it out! Go to this link:

http://cgi6.ebay.com/aw-cgi/eBayISAPI.dll?ViewSellersOtherItems&userid=lou@cbcintl.com&completed=0&sort=3&since=-1&include=0&page=1&rows=25

To see exactly what these books look like, plus all the specific, chapter-by-chapter details, see our Web at:

www.cbcintl.com

Some of the books included are:

BOOK #1: THE "SCREWDRIVER EXPERT'S" GUIDE To Peaking Out & Repairing CB Radios. List $25. The most popular "big dummy's" guide ever published on do-it-yourself CB repairs & modifications. Covers peaking of receivers, transmitters, modulation, mike problems, antenna & SWR problems, detailed frequency modifications for both crystal & PLL radios. Loaded with charts, illustrations, and specific instructions for most brands including the new export models. This latest edition also covers slider and broadbanding tricks, FM conversions, and much more!

BOOK #2: THE CB PLL DATA BOOK. List $20. The only complete reference source on CB PLL synthesizer circuits ever published! Detailed PLL theory explained in layman's terms. How they work, and how to modify them for many more channels. Includes specific PLL block mixing diagrams, truth charts, & IC pin function diagrams for nearly every PLL chip ever used. Covers all the most popular U.S. & export chassis, with specific listings of all models using the chip.

BOOK #3: UNDERSTANDING & REPAIRING CB RADIOS. List $42. Giant 370-page technical book for the professional repairman. Picks up where the "SCREWDRIVER EXPERT'S" GUIDE leaves off. Includes circuit descriptions & troubleshooting guide for 23- & 40-Ch., crystal & PLL, solid-state & tube, AM, FM, SSB, CW, American & export models. Covers test equipment (& where to find it), transistor basics, synthesizers, receivers, transmitters, power supplies, T/R switching, antennas, interference, parts & accessory sources. Over 350 illustrations including schematics, charts, and photos. Huge subject index also lets you look up repairs by symptoms. This is "must" reading for any serious CB technician!

Hi Guys....

I really hate posting this....But it has come to this...

To the imbred moron from the Detroit area, that has been ringing my cellphone, well, Buddy your time has come... you made the fetal mistake of forgetting to Block your Caller ID last night. I got your number boy... 1-313-962-7331...

I see that it's a unlisted number, Well, If there's anyone in here that is good at obtaining this sort of information... please feel free to e-mail it to me, at k8cpa@yahoo.com and I'll be glad to inform the owner of the line... me thinks it's some idiot calling from a business, and they think they're being funny... tis okay... I've got your number now, in fact, I called it today... seems it's a FAX Machine or an answering Machine with no message...

1-313-962-7331.....anyone wanna see what you can find?

Thanks,

First you have to realize what specific lengths of coax do. Usually this is 18ft which on 11M is an odd multiple of 1/4 wavelength. With a shortened antenna as most CB antennas are you can expect the impedance of the antenna to be in the 30 to 20 ohm range. This places an excessive load on the PA causing loss in power and distorted modulation. The odd multiple of 1/4 wavelength antenna inverts the impedance seen by the radio. That is to say if the impedance of the antenna was 25 the radio would see 100 with the cable. SWR would still be 2:1 but you can now more easily match the impedance of the radio to the antenna. Now assume we will do nothing to correct the mismatch which is the way most CBs are installed. You are still better off seeing the 100 ohm impedance than the 25. The PA will run cooler and have less distortion while putting the same amount of power to the antenna s it did at 25. This applies to HAM radio just as well. Back in the days of tubes, think they are still around, TX outputs were made to mach 50 and 75 ohm antennas. This meant it was adjustable from about 30 to a little over 100 ohms. If the tx was not capable of adjusting to the load you put in a piece of feed line and try again.

I am somewhat new to the CB experience, but I wondering how you would tune a midland 77-115 to a workman Saturn b-100 base antenna. I have been trying to tune them for a while with no luck.

No, you do not! You use a variable cap, a silver mica cap, a coil, or a toroid AT the antenna itself to match the antenna to the characteristica impedance of the radio--usually 50 ohms. Actually, a dipole is 75 ohms and one can hook up a radio with a RANDOM length of coax, and it will work gangbusters. What do you do if the radio is in the house and the dipole feedpoint was 46 feet from the nearest trees? I have NEVER used coax as a method of "tuning" an antenna. I just recently built and installed a "BIG COIL" antenna and set it up for 10 Meters. I used a mag mount I had left in my parts bin and the existing run of cable. The mag mount was for a VHF 2 Meter and the coax was a random length. Using my MFJ Analyzer, I resonated it for 28.610, a favorite local hang out for hams around here. Never once have I ever used coax as a tuning method.I didn't do it while doing the install for my IC706 or any other antenna, and my first mobile was done at the age of 16 with some very good teachers. Never even heard of "coax length" until I heard it from CBers. It wasn't true then and it isn't true now, except for rare circumstances.

> Busy little bugger huh?

Well, it seems like it after 39 years. And that does include making many of my own antennas/
Today, I just finished making a DrawTite-style hitch for my pickup. I looked at hitches and decided that I could do as well on my own. An S-10 has a lot of empty space under the bed, and it costs an average of $100 for a hitch + installation. So I went over to a metal supplier that sells to the public and bought a 6 foot piece of 3/16" wall X 2 1/2 square tubing. The mount itself is an "L" shaped affair that slides into the end of the receiver and fastens with a hitch pin. I then measured the width of the truck chassis center to center, and cut the tubing so that it extends just to the edge of the fenders (antenna exits to the side of the main "receiver".
The piece that was left over became the trailer tow bar receiver (probably will buy the ball receptacle), and I then bolted the center of the back rear, and had a welding shop to solidly weld this receiver to the main bar.
I used 1 1/2" bolts, drilled holes in the appropriate locations and used a garage jack to raise the assembly in place. I also drilled and tapped 1/4" holes for a couple of slack adjusting bolts to adjust any slack, or "wiggle" in the mount, tightening these bolts just enough to prevent the antenna assembly from moving around. With 1/4" nuts they can be snugged up, or loosened, as needed.
The cost for this little project? About $25, or so as opposed to 100 bucks. The antenna is a "screwdriver" popular among hams for multi-band mobile operation. Yes, I built it, too, so I AM very busy! .....and loving every minute of it!

Attorney General Ashcroft is visiting an elementary school.
After the typical civics presentation to the class, he announces, "All right, boys and girls, you can all ask me questions now."
A young boy named Bobby raises his hand and says, "I have three questions:
1. How did Bush win the election with fewer votes than Gore?
2. Why are you using the USA Patriot Act to limit Americans' civil liberties?
3. Why hasn't the US caught Osama Bin Laden yet?"
Just then the bell sounds and all the kids run out to the playground.

Fifteen minutes later, the kids come back in class and again.
Ashcroft says, "I'm sorry we were interrupted by the bell. Now, you can all ask me questions."
A young girl named Charlene raises her hand and says, "I have five questions:
1. How did Bush win the election with fewer votes than Gore?
2. Why are you using the USA Patriot Act to limit Americans' civil liberties?
3. Why hasn't the US caught Osama Bin Laden yet?
4. Why did the bell go off 20 minutes early?
5. Where's Bobby?"

Remember this when they come for you.

I scanned all the channels and could not hear anything other than static. Does anyone have any suggestions/reading materials for a newby?

Ashcroft's response:

"Now that the war is over, many of us are quitting our appointed Presidential posts to pursue lucrative book contracts. Some of us can't wait for the legal time requirements so we contracted through a ghost-writer. Either way, you can get your answers from whoever gets their book on the stands first.

As for Bobby, he has been arrested for suspicion of terrorism. You won't be able to contact him because he has no right to due process, an attorney, or a fair trial. If you have a problem with that, maybe you should tell us just how you want us to treat terrorists -- with the same rights granted to you by the US Constitution? LOL! If so, maybe you are a terrorist, too!

Hi Dino,

Bill passed on 5-21-03. Very sad indeed. I am having a lot of trouble with it all. Frank and I found out through one of his clients calling us and his aunt. I am so very happy to carry his name and to have been married to him for the 21 years and to work with him for the next 5 years at my shop. He had a cardiac arrest. I am told he passed at his house. I spoke with my former mother in law and find there is no service planned as of yet. These things are costly. He was a member of Immanuel Baptist Church in Highland Ca. It is such a tragic loss to us all. I am glad he remained at home and was cared for by his girlfriend and did not have to go to the hospital. God rest his soul. He will forever be in my heart and memory. He truly is a legend.

Don't get so defensive when an inquiry is posed of you. I merely am asking why you claim an "antenna" becomes semi-directional when mounted on a hitch or bumper when it is an omni-directional antenna. I clarified
"whip" as it is omni-directional, no? You replaced it with a general blanket term of "antennas"....most mobile antennas are omnidirectional.
The radiating pattern is omni-directional from a single whip (antenna) mounted vertically and correctly on a vehicle, not directional, not semi-directional. It (the whip) may take on certain directional capabilities and capacities depending on the manner in which it is mounted, but it will continue to be more omni-directional than directional. No?
With that said, I fail to see how a single whip (antenna, mobile) (properly mounted, grounded, etc.) mounted on the hitch or bumper, makes the performance more directional than omni-directional. Perhaps you can enlighten me with your knowledge concerning such.

Hope you get a great weekend out there,,,,,,dealing with some rain, but the fish are rising up at flies, the temps are mild (high 80's) and the crowds are gone.....truly the good life.

When in Mexico in November, 78LB Wahoo (Ono)
Yellow Fin, Dorado, Marlin. Always a fun time when fishing.

Take a ride through Niles Canyon for me....the water chutes (old dam) on the right hand side heading up into the hills make for a nice spot to chill...watch for the cars parked on the shoulder, usually can't miss it..you may just get lucky and have the place all to yourself. Have a good weekend.

Thanks, right back at you. It's my wife's & mine twelfth anniversary today, no children for 2 days. Going out to the sierra for a dinner train tonight, spend Sat. riding with the wife, dinner and a movie and then pick the kids up on Sunday morning.

So, who's ISP was he using when he was posting as "Taxi Driver"?
Three times a week, if I remember right... the three days a week that he did not post under his usual name.

He may only have one ISP, but that doesn't stop him posting from different ISPs or accounts.
Friends, relatives, work, Internet cafes, etc.

Peter.

YOU seem to be the one with an attitude, and I have a surprise for you. I NEVER touch the stinking, foul-tasting stuff!!! And, whassa matter, can't stand being contradicted on the myth of coax length to set up antennas? Now, I posted the trailer hitch to help people save a little money.

And I don't have to run down to the CB store to buy my antennas: I make my own, OK? It may a stretch at "hundreds of thousands",. but I have done a hell of a lot of them in 39 years.
That remains a fact.....just as much as it is a fact that "coax length" is bull*>

I don't need to. Now I'm going to provide an example, and I want you to make a logical response.
I have used this example before and NO one, but NO one has ever explained, or refuted this.

I run an HF, all-band, mobile called a "screwdriver" (named for the Skil cordless that runs it) that allows infinite tuning from 75 thru 6 Meters. This antenna is activated with a switch on the dash to move the loading coil up/down within the mast to achieve resonance. The antenna resonates on ANY frequency at an average 1:2 X 1 SWR at 50 ohms. I mentioned in another post that antenna theory is the same for any band, or frequency. thru out the HF/VHF spectrum.
Can we agree on that? OK, NOW! If the coax length so worshipped and revered by many CBers, is true then I would have to have a whole bunch of coax runs--each cut to a specific length for every band I run. Sixty feet for 75 meters (@ 1/4 wavelength) , about 32 feet for 7 Megs about 16. 4 feet for 20 Meters, 10.98 feet, 8.8 feet for 10 Meters (it comes out to 9 feet on CB as often avowed), and a whole bunch of other lengths in between. The additional problem with this is that the antenna is "fluid" and not frequency-specific within its entire range. I operate on ham, military, and FEMA frequencies, so in order to do this, according to the "CB Bible", I would have to have Lord knows how many different coax lengths in order to achieve this. It means that operation of this type would be inpossible considering that those frequencies range between 3.5 and 54
MHZ. For one thing, WHERE would you put 60, 32, 16', 10', and 8 feet in a Honda? Hmmmmm? Plus there would to be one heck of a coax switch to switch between feed lines. Quite absurd, don't you agree? Yet, I run ALL those frequencies, 3.9, 4.4, 7.2, 14.25, 21, and 28 MHZ and everything between with ONE feedline that is about 7 feet long. Nope! I have read most every book on antennas, including those in my reference library (I keep some books on hand). I have measured SWR at the trans-mitter, and at the antenna in the same installation. It comes up the same regardless of how long the coax is, and I find nothing that convinces me of this as a hard and fast rule. Like I said, I had never heard of "coax length" until I was introduced to CB and someone asked me, "Aren't you gonna trim the coax to the "right" length?" My reaction? "Say WHAAAAAAAAAAT"? Everytime I have run into an antenna that was hard to, or refused to, tune up, I found something else wrong with the antenna besides the feed line. That actually happened to me recently during installing radios in my truck; the antenna was defective.

So, Scott, explain to me how, if what you say OR your book guru, is true, then how is it possible to set up an antenna that is frequency agile over the entire HF band, is NOT "broad-banded" in the sense a CB op would see it, it is resonant on ANY frequency selected, ALL on a coax about 6.5
feed long? Please explain.

I _NEVER_ said to trim coax. I have proved it to myself that coax length does not matter (when the antenna, feedline and radio are 50 ohms).

I had started with the "required" 18 feet on my Firestik KW-7. I only needed
7 feet in a Jeep. So I cut off the extra. No difference. No change. No fuss.

Take your blinders off and turn up the AF gain. <g>

P.S. Jerry, I have no beef with you. I'm just answering your question.

Hello,
I have a Midland 77-115 that I use on 4x4 trips. It recently stopped working... :(The symptom is that it doesn't seem to transmit or receive... deathly quiet. But when I switch over to weather mode it receives just fine. I have heard that there were some manufacturing defects with this model but I was hoping to get some specifics of what to look for when I crack the case open.

Thanks in advance.

jerry, if not the liquor then its your hate for cb'ers causing your angry here and the many typos while discussing them. you might call claiming to install hundreds of thousands of antennas a "stretch" but down here in Texas we call it a lie and that makes you a liar. go somewhere else and try to impress them, unless you can knock a 10k bird slug in the corner while talking on your crappy homemade antenna where not going to be impressed around here.

73 de Tim (with about 55 feet of coax that works just fine)

The weather portion on most radios is totally seperate from the actual cb transmitter itself. Usually a weather board inside. The problem could be numerous things from a shorted cap, diode, transister or a resistor that went null. Even a dead PLL. These things can happen and never know what to look for by eye.

I'd start looking for a bad solder connection. Look for cracks or small rings around parts. Especially check any parts attached to the frame.

Parts age, frequency shifts. A tune up to factory specs by an experienced tech, with all the proper equipment, and an accurate freq counter, is a good idea after 4 or 5 years. Less if temperate climate or 4X4.

You are full of it< there are lots of antennas tha twould not match up to the impedances that a standard pi net will cover . As you said' "to match the antenna to the characteristica impedance of the radio--USUALLY> 50 ohms. Actually, a dipole is 75 ohms and one can hook up a radio with a

If all your antennas are in the impedance range you give you are right but the example I specifically stated is very typical for a CB installation with NO tunner and significantly less than 50 ohms, something you chose to ignore. While yes you could build or modify a tunner to cover this lower impedance I would rather spend my money on 6 ft of coax than a tunner. Those who dont understand this can read up on linear transformers. It is true that most installations DO NOT NEED THIS(worry about coax length) . If your SWR is below 1.5:1 for your CB mobile installation you do not need to do it. A lot of short CB antennas result in SWR above 1.5 even when optimally tuned. That is why certain manufactures of antennas started reccomending that you use 18ft of coax.

The CB myth is that triming coax will effect SWR, It will not.. SWR is determined soley by the impedance of the transmission line and the antenna. If the TX has a fixed non adjustable output impedance changing the coax length will not improve the mismatch beteween antenna and transmitter. If the tx out put is capable of variable impedance matching the addition of a 1/4 wl transformer may place it in the range of the tunner. Surley somemone with your vast experience, "hundredsof thousands of radios" Has come acrros a case where the impedance of the radio was out of range of the tunner.

It is hard for me to believe that someone who has installed "hundreds of thousands of radios" does not understand the operation of a simple linear 1/4 wl transformer. Or should I say it is hard to beilve that someone that doesnt understand 1/4 wl linear teansformers has installed "hundred of thousands of radios"

No problem, You are using a tunner built into the antenna, the same as the 1/4 wavelength transformer (18ft of coax) used by CBers to better match tx
to antenna.. Coax length doesnt matter when SWR is low and no one here ever said it did. I yet to here you say just what you think CBers or anyone else is trying to do when they trim their coax.

It's "tuning" and "tuner"
"Tunner" is a big, fat girl. <;

18 feet is not a half wave length for coax at 27.2 MHz. Velocity factor ranges from 66 to 80 percent of the speed of light in free space (300 km per second) You multiply your answer by the VF.

How does this help when the characteristic impedance of the coax is 50 ohms?
Now you have two mismatches, instead of one.

Do you understand what happens at 1/4 wavelength of coax? Just one book of many: Practical Antenna Handbook, Joseph J. Carr, 621.382 Read and enlighten oneself.

7 ft is nearly the electical equivalent of 18. 18 ft is 3/4 wl while 7 is just a little over 1/4 wl both odd multiple of 1/4 wl.

50 ohm radios need 50 ohm coax and 50 ohm antennas. If you have a problem, fix or match the antenna at the FEEDPOINT!

Well, the fact of the matter is that it depends on the harmonic content. Depending on the design, an amplifier can have quite low harmonics. I agree that output filtering will reduce the harmonics even further, but one has to look at the numbers to determine if that is really necessary for a particular application.

A "matchbox" is a variable matching device designed exactly for the purpose you want. It has insertion losses of perhaps 0.5dB(about 6%) but can reduce your match to near perfect. More times than not, the better match will offset the small power loss in the matching device...

Try searching an engine for "antenna tuner".

Hi,
The AM audio output to the speaker is low ,the receive signal on signal meter is normal.
On SSB the audio output is fine.
Could AF POWER AMP TA7222P IC6 be bad?
I cannot figure out what the problem could be.

Best regards,
Dan

A 2:1 mismatch will only give you a .5db loss. You could easily be better off without the tunner.

VF is only a measure of how quickly a signal moves thru a solid medium. It has no bearing on wavelength. Most mobile antennas are 1/4 wave at HF frequencies. To find the actual wavelength of an antenna (again in a solid medium) is 234/frequency in MHZ.
In air (free space)
it is 251,2 (rounded off).

Didnt say 18ft was a half wavelength, its 3/4. I started to type tuner as tuna but thought that would be too obvious.

If the 1/4wl of coax places the impedance seen at the TX end in rage of the

Yes I do, got the book, While this is not an explanation it is an example of what a 1/4 wl of coax does, I thought it would be more to the point.

Assume a 1/4 wl of 50 ohm coax. with a terminated with a 75 ohm load. SWR will be 75/50 0r1.5 ohms and the impedance seen at tx will be 50/1.5 or 33.333 ohms. Is that enlightenment enough. Do you find anything wrong with this. The ratio of impedance transformation depends on the SWR or impedance transformation ratio = SWR2. The termination and source end impedance of the line will also be related so that if the termination is greater than the impedance of the line the impedance seen at the source end will always be less than the impedance of the line and vice versa if the terminating impedance is less than the line impedance. Do you see any way this contradicts what I previously said or any way this contrdicts Carr, Orr, ARRL MIT.......

Works great if you can really do it. This is totaly impractical a lot of the times. a full length 1/4 wl antenna on a car at best will give you a 36 ohm impedance, How do you make this 50. Shortened antennas have even a lower impedance.

With a velocity factor of .66 (Most common). it is 3/4wl. This length is used because 6ft 1/4 wl is too short for peractical use.and 12 is a 1/2 wl that just repeats the antenna impedance without transformation.

This started out talking about mounting an antenna on my motor home, I assume we are still talking about mobile installations. Cant rember the last time I saw a mobile a CB antenna have a 50 ohm impedance.
About the closest I ve ever seen is about 35 ohms. This was with a nine ft whip on top of a school bus. BTW with this close of a match I wouldnt care how long the coax is either. I believe you should tune the antenna to resonace get it to the same impedance of the feed line if you can then match the output impedance of the tx to the impedance seen at the nput of the feed line. If you cant do the latter then you can play with coax length if it will help. Its obvious you dont know what to do when you get out of your 50 ohm world.

We all have... its called Microsoft.

Shortly after I first got onto the Net, I had a Web site automatically install software on my system - without my knowledge. The software was not even linked with the site visited. They had a pop-up for another Web site, who installed the software secretly, put it in my system tray and set my system to automatically run it at start-up.
It could just as easily been a virus, Trojan or dialer. So, I am careful what I allow my browser to automatically do and what functions I allow.

Peter.

Doesnt sound like the TA7222P chip is bad.
Maybe a shorted cap or diode related to the AM side since SSB works fine but it must be on the input side of the Audio Chip. All output from the chip to the speaker is the same for AM and SSB (Nothing Switches via mode switch). This is where a set of schematics come in handy. I do tech work in Northern California and never heard of this myself. I would like to know the outcome and fix if it is fixed.

A few oddball computers used the 16-bit 8086, but the industry standard XT and most compatibles (as well as the original IBM PC) used the 8-bit 8088.

>the most popular hard drive format was an 5mb MFM Seagate ST-502 type.

AFAIK, Seagate never made an ST-502. The ST506 was a HD interface standard (aka, ST506/412) for MFM, RLL and ESDI HDs. It was used in most XTs and some ATs. The ST506 was also the model number of a 5-MB HD by Seagate, but the 10-MB ST412 was by far the most popular in the XT.

If that application is illegal CB amps, harmonics don't seem to matter a great deal.

Quite right...

McCarthy was the leader of a political witchhunt for communists in the 1950's.
He and his cronies accused many, destroying the careers and livelyhoods of thousands of people, yet never once found a communist. For more info, see the movie "Citizen Cohn", visit your public library, or search the net (search for the term "McCarthyism").

Mike,

As far as SSB, please consider the following:
It takes 50% of the carrier power in audio power to modulate 100%
This means it takes 2.5 watts to modulate a 5 watt carrier to 100% modulation.
This also means that there is a 5 watt carrier plus two 1.25 watt sidebands (2.5 watts divided between upper and lower sideband) to modulate that carrier to 100%.
You can run (legally) 12 watts on SSB. This is a huge advantage as far as information (your voice). Single sideband has a very big advantage over AM.

I said "perhaps 0.5dB"... many tuners probably have an input power loss of only 0.2dB... but you're right... if your match is only 2:1 on a base ant...
I would do nothing.
But if it's 3:1 or more... the matchbox could be a viable solution.

TUBES AVAILABLE

I have a very good selection of tubes for HAM/CB/Audio/Antique/Transmitting
100,000+ NOS USA tubes in stock

I do not have a web site nor a formal price list ~~ Suggest that you Email me with the tubes that you need, along with the quantity of each tube, and I will check my current inventory and get back to you with availability and a quote.

This is my only business, it is not a hobby, so I strive to supply quality tubes at a very competitive price.

I have very few of the 'high end' audio tubes, but do have a good selection of all others.

Specialize in sweep, transmitting and ceramic tubes.

Please Email you needs to:

It's a shame how people feel about the internet. It reminds me of the crazy people who never leave thier hoses in fear of the out side world. I suggest investing in some "good" firewalls and virus protection if you are that insecure. Also update your DAT files for the virus scan once a week.

about how he's Valmont and always had an AOL account, otherwise why would he try to deny it so much? Also

yup, that's George AKA Valmont trolling the group

Yes George I have, but as Twist has said, which is now so true about you, "your opinion has been reduced to nothing" LMAO!!!! Sue me George, Sue me for slander.....Your a joke George LOL!!
Did you so want my attention that you had to change your screen nic twice in a week?

I fail to see where Twist started the flames. The original question was met by flames. A number of folks are getting tired of the instant flames over a question and Twist spoke out against the flames. Period.

I remember one amateur whose radio needed a tune up. He peaked what he thought was the output, but it was set to measure plate current. Yep, he peaked the plate current. His radio needed a tune up (as well as a new final :)

Radios are certainly more rugged than back in the vacuum tube days, but those used in mobile service sometimes do need to be checked out. When the sensitivity goes from 0.2 uV to 5 uV, something is amiss. Radios which sit nice and cozy between 65 and 75 degrees F all year long are unlikely to need tuning.

Bill was contracted by RCI to fix the problems with the plagued RCI 2900. This radio was HORRIBLE!!!

Bill came up with approximately 24 modifications for the 2900 of which RCI only used about 14. One thing that Bill was big on was a GOOD RECEIVER! RCI didn't think it was important as we all are just stupid CBers. Bill designed and engineered a MOSFET front end for most CB radios and I have the last one he ever did in my Cobra 2000. Wally from Wally's World has one in his too. This MOSFET front end was also installed in RCI radios. Lower noise and higher gain!

The modified 2900 with only 14 of the 24 mods became the RCI-2950. It was a great radio and if you took it to Bill, he would do the rest of the mods (minus what the radio was capable of).

RCI relied on Bill through the years to work out problems that the engineers in china-land couldn't figure out...or didn't want to figure out!

Its too bad really, RCI could have been an EXCELLENT chassis rather than second to Uniden.

Bill has worked on radio for almost 30 years! People from all over the nation sent radios in to him. If you walked your radio in, he would let you watch him work on it and answer all of your questions.

I want to clear up one thing too...

Gayle was his wife for 21 years and they later got divorced; but they remained friends. Betty was his girlfriend for the last couple of years.

Did that once with a new HT. 5 KHz off. The replacement was also 5 KHz off. That's when I realized that Rat Shack probably couldn't set 'em up right and I set the thing up right. The guys on the repeaters noticed it and yep, put it on the radio test set and they were both off 5 KHz. Other than needing tweaking to the proper frequency, it works fine.

On the Road Again-and Again
FCC officials rack up $2.8 million travel tab with industries they regulate http://www.openairwaves.org/telecom/report.aspx?aid=15

By Bob Williams and Morgan Jindrich

Federal Communications Commission officials have been showered with nearly $2.8 million in travel and entertainment over the past eight years, most of it from the telecommunications and broadcast industries the agency regulates, a new study by the Center for Public Integrity has found.

The FCC is preparing to relax several longstanding ownership rules for broadcasters and other media outlets. Those rules are widely credited with preventing the complete takeover of local and national media outlets by huge conglomerates such as Viacom, Tribune Co. and Rupert Murdoch's News Corp. Critics are particularly incensed the commission has held only one official public hearing on the controversial proposals, which are expected to touch off a major new round of media consolidation.

The $2.8 million paid for FCC commissioners and agency staffers to attend hundreds of conventions, conferences and other events in locations all over the world, including Paris, Hong Kong and Rio de Janeiro.

The officials often serve as speakers or panelists at the events, but many times go only as attendees. They often stay for the entire event at glitzy hotels such as the Bellagio in Las Vegas, even though they are only scheduled to give a single speech or serve on a single panel, FCC travel records show.

All told, agency officials have taken more than 2,500 such industry-sponsored trips since 1995. The Center's report analyzed trips costing more than $250 that were paid for by sources other than the FCC. The trips occurred between May 1995 and February 2003. (See searchable version of the trips database)

FCC officials took 330 such trips to Las Vegas during the period, 173 to New Orleans, 102 to New York and 98 to London. Other popular destinations included Orlando, San Francisco, Miami, Anchorage, Palm Springs, Buenos Aire s and Beijing. (See listing of top destinations)

While the vast majority of the trips were sponsored by the telecommunications and broadcast industries, some were paid for by universities and international organizations. Still others were sponsored by companies that put together trade shows and conferences for a variety of industries.

Two top FCC policy advisors have taken more than 100 trips each during the period. FCC commissioners have taken dozens of trips each, often staying at posh hotels or resorts on the industry tab. Some of the sponsors have special dinners or other events to honor the FCC officials in attendance. They are sometimes provided with cars and drivers.

The biggest industry sponsor of the trips was the National Association of Broadcasters, which paid $191,472 to bring 206 FCC officials to its events. NAB, which represents radio and television stations nationwide, has lobbied aggressively in recent months to keep the current FCC rules limiting media ownership in place.

That was not always the case, however. Major networks Fox, CBS and NBC left the NAB two years ago because of the association's support for the current media ownership rules. The independent broadcasters who comprise the vast majority of NAB's membership worry they will be gobbled up by networks or media conglomerates if the rules are relaxed.

Viacom, which owns CBS, sponsored seven trips on its own, costing $9,581. Viacom spent $6,901 to bring FCC Media Bureau Chief W. Kenneth Ferree and Susan Eid, a top legal advisor to Chairman Michael K. Powell, to a company management conference in March 2002. Ferree, the chief architect of the proposal to relax the media ownership rules, did not respond to an interview request from the Center.

The second biggest sponsor of trips was the National Cable and Telecommunications Association, which spent $172,635 to bring 125 FCC officials to its events. Coming in third was the Consumer Electronics Manufacturers Association, which spent $149,285 to bring 103 FCC officials to its events, primarily its glitzy annual Consumer Electronics Show held in Las Vegas each year. CEMA heavily lobbies Congress and the FCC on a variety of issues including digital television, broadband deployment, consumer home recording rights and spectrum management.

Other big sponsors include the California Cable Television Association (80 trips, $108,242); the Federal Communications Bar Association, which represents communications attorneys that practice before the agency and includes several FCC officials as members (74 trips, $42,399); the Association of Local Television Stations, and NATPE (70 trips, $58,813.36); the Telecommunications Industry Association (38 trips, $43,506); and the Satellite Broadcasting and Communications Association (34 trips, $30,601).

FCC Chairman Powell has chalked up the most industry sponsored travel and entertainment among active commissioners during the period covered by the study-44 trips costing $84,921. Powell, the son of Secretary of State Colin Powell, almost always flies first class due to a pelvis injury he suffered in a vehicle accident while serving in the U.S. Army. (See all of the trips taken by Powell)

Powell has been an unabashed proponent of deregulation throughout his tenure with the commission and has called for doing away with most or all of the current ownership restrictions, pointing out they were put in place before the advent of the Internet, cable and satellite broadcasting. He scheduled the June 2 meeting on the ownership rules, despite criticism from consumer groups and some fellow commissioners that the matter had not been properly vetted in public hearings. (See all of the ownership rules up for a decision on June 2)

Kathleen Abernathy, a commissioner since June 2001, took 14 trips costing $16,185. Michael Copps, a commissioner since June 2001, took 14 trips costing $15,410. Kevin Martin, a commissioner since July 2001 has taken 12 trips valued at $14,857. He took another seven trips valued at $8,966 while working in a previous job as a legal advisor at the agency. Jonathan Adelstein, who joined the commission in December 2002, took three trips costing $2,998. (See a complete list of trips by current and former FCC commissioners)

Powell did not respond to a request for an interview on his travel.

Abernathy declined to be interviewed about her travel, but issued a statement saying she at times accepts reimbursement from outside groups for travel expenses to conserve FCC resources.

"The Commissioner believes that meeting with a diverse range of groups, including industry, consumer groups, and other interested parties, serves a crucial information-gathering purpose that is necessary to effective decisionmaking," said the statement. "The Commissioner occasionally travels to meet with interested parties for this purpose, particularly where parties seek to provide a tour or demonstration that cannot be provided in Washington, D.C."

None of the trips examined were sponsored by consumer groups or individuals.

All of the trips appear to have been legal under government guidelines. Other agencies routinely accept similar travel and entertainment gifts.

An FCC ethics official, who spoke only on the condition his name not be revealed, says each trip is scrutinized by the agency's Office of General Counsel to make sure it is both legal and seemly.

"We first look to see if the sponsor has any matters before the agency and what those matters might be," said the ethics official. "With that as background, we talk to the individual and weigh if there will be appearance problems. There are a lot of safeguards built in."

The ethics official said almost all trips to major trade shows and industry conventions are approved, however. "On the big shows, there is an assumption that it will be widely attended by people representing a wide variety of viewpoints," he said. "Those are a lot less troublesome for us than smaller events where the attendees might all have the same viewpoint on a particular issue."

Telecommunication industry representatives and some FCC officials defend the trips, saying they help educate regulators on important issues and provide a voice to small companies and individuals who can't afford to travel to Washington or hire a lobbyist.

"We need to understand what the industry is doing and the industry needs to understand what we are doing," said Robert Pepper, chief of the FCC's Office of Plans and Policy, who took 104 trips costing $149,595 during the period studied, second highest among agency officials. "We need to get outside the Beltway in order to do that." (See complete listing of trips by Pepper)

Pepper said the FCC should pay for such trips in an ideal world, but that isn't possible in an age of tight agency budgets. "I'm not crazy about having the industry pick up the tab, but I think it is the second-best option we have in tight fiscal times like now," he said. "The other option is for us to just stay home. That doesn't benefit anyone."

An independent federal agency called the Office of Government Ethics collects summary reports on travel and entertainment paid for by sources other than Uncle Sam and is supposed to advise individual agencies on proper policies. The agency has no enforcement power, however, meaning that the ultimate authority on industry sponsored travel is the head of the individual agencies.

Office of Government Ethics Director Amy Comstock declined to be interviewed for this study. She said through a spokesperson that industry sponsored travel and its relation to government ethics were not subjects she comments on.

Some consumer advocates are less hesitant to speak out. They say that the trips are unseemly and represent an improper coziness between FCC officials and the businesses they regulate.

"It is silly to say they [FCC officials] don't lose some of their objectivity when they are being wined and dined like they are at these industry events," said Mark Cooper, director of research at the Consumer Federation of America. "You would have to be superhuman not to."

Other critics worry that the trips could dull the objectivity of FCC officials and make the agency too chummy with the huge and politically powerful industry it is supposed to regulate. What's more, they say, the industry enjoys much better access to FCC officials because of the trips, access that isn't available to the public.

"The problem for me is the access and the personal face time the industry gets with these top officials they bring out to their events," said Andrew Schwartzman, president and CEO of the Media Access Project, a consumer advocacy group that works on telecommunications issues. "It's impossible for the public to get the same kind of access with those officials."

One government and business ethics expert says he is particularly troubled by situations where the FCC has sent many people to the same event, all on the industry tab.

"Large numbers of people going to a single event almost always causes an appearance problem, even if everything is on the up-and-up," said Stuart

Gilman, president of the Ethics Resource Center, a Washington group that advises businesses and non-profits on ethics issues. Gilman was a top official at the federal government's Office of Government Ethics from 1988 to 2001.

Each year a large contingent of FCC officials head off to certain big events sponsored by broadcast and telecommunications associations.

The Consumer Electronics Manufacturers Association paid $45,737 to bring 27 FCC officials to its glitzy Consumer Electronics Show in Las Vegas in January. Most were put up at the glittery Bellagio Hotel & Casino. The association provided cars and drivers for some of the officials, including Chairman Powell and Commissioner Abernathy.

The National Association of Broadcasters spent $24,601 to bring 14 FCC officials to its annual convention in Las Vegas in 2002, including Chairman Powell and Commissioners Copps and Martin. Not far behind was the National Cable and Telecommunications Association, which paid $21,447 to bring 13 FCC officials to its annual convention in Chicago last year, including Chairman Powell and Commissioner Copps.

That was down from previous years for the NAB and NCTA conventions, however.

In 1999, NAB spent $26,113 to bring 27 FCC officials to its convention and NCTA spent $32,060 to bring 25 FCC officials to its convention.

Although they brought fewer FCC officials to their conventions last year, both NAB and NCTA spent more in travel and entertainment on each person.

NAB spent an average of $1,757 in travel and entertainment for each FCC official it brought to its 2002 convention, compared to an average of $967 in 1999. NCTA spent an average of $1,650 per FCC official for its 2002 convention, compared to an average of $1,282 in 1999.

Gilman said he would take a long, hard look at any event where more than two officials from a single agency attended on the industry tab.

"Are they sending the right message to the public if every commissioner and every senior bureaucrat head off to a single event every year?" said Gilman. "Are they maintaining an appearance of impartiality?"

Some critics of the current system say having the agency pay for all trips would help maintain a clear and proper separation between FCC officials and the industries they regulate.

But some FCC officials and industry representatives say having the FCC pay for all travel would effectively isolate the agency and rob smaller players of input in the decision making process.

"If you are a regulator proposing rules that can affect thousands of employees, it is only sensible to learn as much as you can about that business," said Dennis Wharton, a spokesman for the National Association of Broadcasters. "To the critics, I would say the alternative is to have the taxpayers pay the freight for this type of trip. At the end of the day, everyone wants informed decisions."

Taxpayers do pick up some of the tab on many of the industry-sponsored trips.

For example, Commissioner Kathleen Abernathy traveled to France last November to attend a conference sponsored by IDATE, a foundation supported by about 20 international technology firms including Motorola, Nortel and IBM.

IDATE paid $2,646 for Abernathy's flight, hotel and transportation to and from the airport for the two-day conference in Montpellier, France, located in the south of France on the Mediterranean Sea. Abernathy was also reimbursed $175 by the FCC for three days of per diem meal expenses she incurred on the trip.

In February 2003, the FCC's Competition Policy Division Deputy Chief Gregory Cooke traveled to London to attend a conference on European telephone directories. The sponsor, a conference company called Whitaker Associates, paid $900 to cover Cooke's airfare, lodging and some meals. He was reimbursed $629 by the FCC for the rest of his expenses for the trip.

Former FCC Commissioner Harold Furchtgott-Roth says he found industry-funded trips useful, although he would have preferred to have had them paid for by the agency if funds had been available.

"It almost always benefits the public because the commissioners are better informed when it comes time to make decisions," said Furchtgott-Roth, who took 58 industry sponsored trips costing $51,483 during his tenure as a commissioner from November 1997 to May 2001.

Roy Stewart, chief of the Office of Broadcast License Policy in the FCC's Media Bureau, took 107 trips, more than any other FCC employee. Until last year, Stewart had been head of the agency's Mass Media Bureau since 1989. He lost that job in a restructuring ordered by Powell in March 2002. That restructuring put Stewart under new Media Bureau Chief Ferree, a former communications lawyer who first met Powell in college at Georgetown.

Stewart says he considers travel to industry events a major part of his job.

"It is important for a government official like me to sit in a room with the industry and hear their concerns," said Stewart.. "Then it is my job to come back and relate those concerns to the chairman and the commissioners."

Furchtgott-Roth says commissioners and top FCC staff are in constant demand as speakers and must carefully choose which events they attend.

"Everyone on the commission could go to a lot more events if we chose to, but, frankly, most of them just aren't that much fun," he said. "I tried to pick events where I could get my message out to a lot of people and media or where I could gather a lot of information about the industry folks who don't have the time or money to get to Washington or hire a lobbyist."

Pepper, the Office of Plans and Policy chief, said he turned down far more events than he actually attended, even though he took 104 trips on the industry tab.

"Frankly, I could have traveled five days a week, 52 weeks a year if I had chosen to," he said. "I have always been very selective. I have to be.

Furchtgott-Roth says he never voted one way or another on a particular issue because he had accepted travel and entertainment from an industry group or individual business. He said he doesn't believe any other commissioner has, although he said the practice probably raises some legitimate questions.

"I understand people questioning there being so many of these trips, particularly when the same people seem to be going to the same events year after year," he said. "It's important to remember, however, that this is a big part of the jobs of many FCC officials, including the commissioners. They have an obligation to educate themselves and help educate others."

Schwartzman of the Media Access Project says it is probably beneficial, in an odd way, that top FCC officials attend the same big events each year.

"If they get lobbied hard at the broadcasters convention in April, the odds are they will get lobbied just as hard by the other side at the cable convention in May," said Schwartzman. "I don't doubt that they hear a variety of views as a result of all the different events they attend each year."

But there is one group FCC officials rarely or ever hear from on the convention and conference circuit, according to Schwartzman. The public.

"The only ones getting left out of this whole process are the public," said Schwartzman. "That is the real problem here.

Hi John,
I found and open diode- D21- part number 1N60P.
This diode is in the noise blanker section.
I will get one this week and see if it fixes the problem.

Same BS on a Bronco, remove front drive shaft, bend a little of the tubes around the clutch rod, pain in the ass. Shake, rattle

Probably is. I found a post he made saying that the home owners association wouldn't let him put up a tower. He was crying then on how CB'rs had antenna's up, but he as a ham couldn't have a tower.

2999. "Serious" SWR question??

I have not had a radio for 25 years. I understand you should have your mobile coax to be 18' (full wave length) for best SWR. If I also insert:

1) A pre-amp
2) An SWR/Mod/Watt meter

And of course I have added 2 short jumpers bringing the full coax length to the antenna somewhere around 21'

I seem to be having a problem getting SWR down now. Should I reduce the length of the coax going to the antenna from 18' to around 15' to make the whole length equal 18'??

(15' + 18" + 18" = 18')

Thanks!!!!!!!!!!

IF you have a properly installed antenna, the length of the coax will not matter.

18' is about a 1/2 wave and not a "full wave".

In the mobile, ditch the pre-amp (unless you meant a pre-amp with and AMP :-) and the power meter! You should be watching the road and not the meter! :-)

If you want to get into a discussion of "electrical half wave lengths" of coax, well that is for a different thread.

My best suggestion for you is to buy a Wilson 1000 antenna. If you want to run fiberglass antennas, buy the Wilson antennas! I'd go with the trucker series before the fiberglass though... http://www.wilsonantenna.com/

No fish bait O' Wise Ass of the CB group. I just did a lot of reading on the web. I see the length and where the swr meter is positioned is important while checking swr. That way I can work on antenna position/ adjustment.
After that, the shortest length posible.

Steve,
The bit about 18 feet for the feed line is an old "wive's tale", has no truth to it, and never has. The 'correct' length for a feed line is how ever much it takes to get from one place to another except in special cases such as dual antennas.
18 feet of coax has no particular significance at 27 Mhz.

No, leave it 18' from the back of the meter to the antenna. There is some math involved with what I am about to say, I will dodge the math...

Those that said the length does not matter are only partially correct...It does NOT matter how long the coax is. it DOES matter where in this length of coax your meter is placed. Most meters (unless you have a high-dollar caloric wattmeter - or something like that) need to be placed 1/2 wavelength increments from the antenna. Ideally, the meter could be placed at the base of the antenna, but this is rarely practical. on wavelength away (~18 feet) is desirable. (I'm not going into electrical wavelength math or velocity factor of coax, etc....just generally speaking).

Old ancient CB/HAM folklore was to prune the coax to drop your SWR - this is not good practice as you are only fooling the meter into thinking the SWR is good. Put 18' of coax from the meter to the antenna. Keep all other jumpers in 3' increments (good practice; although I find 6' works better for me). Check SWR. If you cannot get the SWR down, the antenna you chose probably will not work on your vehicle...either reposition the antenna location or try another antenna. Find a CB shop that has several varieties of antennas and will let you swap them out until you find the one that works for you.

Find someone with an antenna analyzer (MFJ makes a great one!)

If you are going the magnet-mount antenna route...definitely go the Wilson (R) route.

Just my two-cents worth.

I guess. It depends on the home association rules.
If you didn't know, housing developments sometime put down rules when they are built, so as a purchaser you are obligated by those rules. That's why when I was buying my house's I made sure none of that crap existed.

NYB said;
> (I'm not going into electrical wavelength math or velocity

Then speaking in general;
18 feet of coax (any type/kind) is not one wave length, 1/2 wave length, or any other particularly significant length of feed line at 27 Mhz.
This; (492 x VF)/f (in Mhz), is how to find an electrical 1/2 wave length of any feed line.
'VF' is the feed line's velocity factor. There are no coaxial feed lines that have a VF that will make 18 feet an electrical 1/2 wave, or a full wave, or a 1/4 wave. It -is- an example of a very small bit of scientific fact that, when mixed with a lot of ignorance, is then turned into a 'CB' electronics myth.
There -are- times when an electrical 1/4 wave, or 1/2 wave, or full wave is desirable or useful. Those special circumstances are NOT normal or desirable in the average antenna installation. If it happens to take 18 feet to reach from the radio to antenna, then fine, use 18 feet.
If it takes more, or less than 18 feet, that's fine too.
The 'trick' is to tune the antenna! Not the feed line.

Hello Moparholic:

OH yeah thats what you need..... Yeah put in a 24 foot length of 2 inch OD Aluminum Tubing, as a mast, say 3/16 wall thickness, and get that antenna up there and be somebody, yeah.....

Don't forget to guy wuy wire, at it base.

Uh, what happens when a Firestick hits a tree? Does it break, regardless of where it is mounted? I would suppose you have to check the mount type right????

Hello group! I have been a scanner enthusiast for years but I have now set my sights on cb radio. I just got back from the Blue ridge Mountains (visiting a friend) and he has a new rig. (base station. Galaxy Saturn, hallicrafter stuff, moonraker antenna.) As I live in the city, in a condo, I cannot put up a moonraker. Also my wife won't appreciate mobile's going into the cars. I would like to get a portable (cb or ham, ham that can be "modified") so I can go between all the vehicles and home (I have a discone in the attic for scanning) Are there any FAQ's out there I can find. Can I go beyond the 4 watt limit as well. Thank you very much.

Ouch! I've got some tough news for you. Portables (if you mean handheld) do not work well at all at 27 MHz. The antenna and ground are simply too inefficient. FRS units would likely do a better job. Also, in the city, 27 MHz is not very good. Long wavelength equates to difficulty in 'bouncing' around between buildings. Rat shack used to make (maybe they still do) a unit with the FRS transmitter built into the base of a mag mount. This got all of the power to the antenna and you'd likely get a couple of miles out of the thing. FRS handhelds will do a fair job; but they aren't going to get far from inside of a vehicle (it will shield both the transmitted and received signal pretty well - figure a 10 dB loss, not pretty with the low erp permitted on FRS). 27 MHz CB with a good external antenna would be good except for the city. Ideas, gang?

First, 18' is 1/2 wave.. and the "coax has to be 18 feet long" myth is just that... a myth. Point to point, plus a little for "breathing room" (if you have to move something, etc) is the right length.

Nope.. You should check your ground at the antenna, read the directions on how to use the SWR meter again, and then tune the antenna properly.

Forget about coax length. Fix your antenna's ground. Most mobile installations have about 30 ohms. This is about 1.5:1 SWR. Stop!
Resonance is better then 1:1. If you've added 20 ohms to your match, you are defeating your purpose. I use 7 feet of coax in my mobile. That reaches from my radio to the antenna mount.

...uh oh, here we go again...

Forget about the length of your cable. Instead, make sure you have:

1. A good RF ground at the radio. If you can't mount the radio directly to the vehicle chassis (preferred), run several ground wires (12- to 16-guage stranded wire is fine) of different lengths to different points on the chassis. Keep them as short as possible and don't make loops.

2. A good RF ground at the antenna. Sand the paint off the metal, clean with a good solvent, and seal the joint to prevent rust and corrosion (a small bead of RTV works well, but don't use grease or oil-based sealants). Same with the antenna and stud threads -- make sure they are clean of oil/grease, and use a rubber grommet or wax to prevent water from reaching them after it has been screwed on. Also, make sure the location of the mount is solidly connected to the chassis -- i.e, if the RF has to pass through a door hinge, run a thick wire or grounding strap from the door to the chassis.

3. Quality coax and connectors. DON'T use foam coax! DON'T use crimp or twist-on connectors! Take some time to learn and practice soldering coax connectors. If you get good at it, you will probably have people knocking down your door with wads of cash to make them a good cable! Also, if you have excess coax, coil it into a figure 8 and NOT a loop -- a loop will create a kind of choke/balun and put RF on the outside of your coax (which is where you DON'T want it!). Using a figure 8 keeps the RF inside the coax where it belongs.

BTW, at 27 MHz, 18' of RG-58 is 1/2-wavelength on the outside and 3/4-wavelength up the middle.

> If I also insert:
>1) A pre-amp

The most common problem with antenna cables is the connectors. The more you use, the more likely one will fail. With that in mind, I suggest you use the SWR meter to adjust the antenna but remove it for normal operation. After all, you really don't need it after the antenna is tuned, right?

As for the pre-amp, you might find that it will benefit you no more than turning up the volume knob. If that's the case, trade it in on a bigger antenna and a field-strength meter (which will tune your antenna better than an SWR meter).

>I seem to be having a problem getting SWR down now. Should I reduce the Forget about the length -- check your grounding!

BTW, don't strive for a 1:1 SWR. Theoretically, the antenna will show 36.5 ohms when it is resonant (most efficient), which will give you a 1.5:1 SWR. You might be able to use some stupid CBer tricks to get it down to 1:1, but you will lose efficiency either by losing antenna resonance or by leaking RF somewhere in the system. Just remember that a dummy load will show a 1:1 SWR, but it doesn't work very well as an antenna.

Tell that to Yaesu... The two FT100D's I bought needed tune-up right out of the box. The frequency was off by a few hundred hertz, even after warm-up.. one was putting out too little power (78 watts, advertised 100), the other was putting out too much (121 watts) for the finals to handle for long...

Of course both radios blew up within a week of my owning them, so I went and bought an ICOM 706MkIIG, and have been happy with it. No problems whatsoever.

No.. sometimes quality control at the factory sucks, especially with makers such as Cobra, RCI, Yaesu, ADI/Pryme, and Alinco.

So, "Valmont"/George/Dougie/whoeveryou'repretendingtobethisweek, Reach down between your legs, grab ahold of your shoulders, pull REALLY hard, and get your head out of your ass. You're wrong.

Oh, and before you go calling me a keyclown, I'm an Amateur Extra.. I don't need these radios for "freebanding".. I have plenty of legal bandwidth to use.

This works out to a paltry $350,000 per year. For an organisation that size, this is chickenfeed. It's clearly the sign of a government agency that's trying to keep business travel to the bare minimum.

Guys like you seem to think that a business trip is a "perk". For people who do a lot of travelling on business, the novelty of jetting to Las Vegas for a week quickly wears off and becomes, first an inconvenience, then an annoyance. In many cases, it has caused marital strife, and in extreme cases, divorce.

You've convinced me - that the FCC is being responsibly run on a tight budget.

I am using one of those black plastic hump mounts sitting on the passenger seat to remove regularly. Should I run a removable wire from underneath the dash to the radio chassis and hook it up whenever the radio is in the truck?

I am using a 3 x 5" (3 magnets) magnet mount positioned in the middle of the roof on top of the truck.

I have been looking online at LR-240 (or equivalent) that has foam & foil.
What do you suggest with "no foam?"

I need to stick with .240 (no .400 "RG-8")

I will make my own jumper cables instead of the "ready made" junky Radio Shack ones I am using right now.

I do not have a frequency counter on the radio I am using now. I do not want to get rid of the Dosy TFC-3001 I am using now. I also do not want to lose the Palomar HD-450 "Pre-amp" I am using either... ;-)

I have a direct line from the battery to the Palomar right now. 10 amp line with a 40 amp fuse.

Yes.....the SWR rises a little with the Palomar "inline"

Once a year or so, I put it on the scope, etc, and make sure it's all lined up properly, yes...

It's been off, too, but due entirely to the vibration and abuse it sees in the truck.

Contrary to your cranium-rectum-inverted thinking, radios DO need to be lined up from time to time. Slugs in tuning coils DO move over time, due to vibration, etc...

Again, pull your head out of your ass. You're still wrong.

Heh.. First off, It's not a Mack.. It's a Ford.

Second off, even radios installed in 4-wheelers need alignment from time to time... What? Is mr. anti-key-clown actually advocating people transmit off-frequency, in violation of FCC rules?

Hrm.. Maybe you're the buttplate.

What you need is a whole lot of the basics. For that, I highly recommend you find yourself a copy of an ARRL manual. And who knows -- you might even learn how to use that "pre-amp" legally!

That's the same old CBer mentality of 'bigger is better'. There's nothing wrong with RG-58 if it's used for its intended purpose. If you run legal power it works just fine. You can even run RG-174 for a few feet without problems. And you don't need teflon unless you plan on wrapping it around the exhaust pipe.

For what it is worth, it really depends upon the length of the coax.
Several feet won't make any appreciable difference; if you are running 120 feet out of the shack to a 50 foot tower, then it may make an appreciable difference. Obviously, if you're that concerned, use hardline :)
The reality here is that many of us have jumped on minor differences to make a point. The length of the coax doesn't make a difference if the whole system is matched (50 ohm radio, 50 ohm coax, 50 ohm load). If a vertical is over real good ground, it may be as low as 36 ohms. At this point, coax length makes a difference. A halfwave will reflect whatever the load is. A quarter wave will transform the load. Something else can transform a resistive load into a complex load (resistance plus reactance). It isn't all as simple as some of us make it out to be.

Here's a better thought: there are a whole lot of variables that can make a much greater difference than the fraction of a decibel gained from super-duper coax, and for a whole lot less money. Need a few 10ths? Wash your vehicle. Need a few more? Clean your connections and tune your antenna with a field strength meter. Need even more gain? Drive to the top of a hill, or find a reflection off a big metal building (mobile -- that's why there are wheels on the bottom of those Suburbans). Too much noise? Try an external speaker and any cheap 5-band audio equalizer. And the best improvement you can get, of course, is from changing to the basic 9' stainless whip, which will net you between +2 to +9 dB right away (depending on which over-priced 'Vunderschtick' the salesman was pushing the day you walked through the door). Any one of those things can improve your signal more than NASA-grade coax, and the total cost of ALL of them is probably less than the difference between the prices of coax.

I've noticed a difference between 20 gauge and 16 gauge.
Speakers & coax. Short 10 foot runs, too.

No meter, you can't watch the harmonics swing the meter! Damn, Frank.
Take all his fun away. I think mag mounts suck. Real grounded mount.
Especially for more then 100 watts. Keep coax short. RG-8X is fine.

I just finished flipping through Practical Antenna Handbook, 3rd edition, Joseph J. Carr, 621.382. Time to flip through again...

Same place in the library you will find the ARRL manual (621.384)

I have heard of him. I actually talked to him once before I knew who he was.
At the time he was telling me about a RadioShack walkie talkie he was talking on that was capable of moding to 25 watts, only that model. I did believe him, no reason not too. Then later I looked it up on the net. I found tons of moding info although not a thing regarding the one he was

Can anyone help me with information regarding a Maxon SM4450 programing cable.

Does anyone know if there is a generic cable that would do the job.

Bill did indeed do some of the design and engineering for the rci 2950 and other radios. But I must say that the engineers did not always do as Bill requested. At times the manufacturer did not see any reason to spend the money or this radio would have been better out of the box. In the Orient where this radio is manufactured and tested they do NOT test on the air. It is not allowed there. So their testing is somewhat limited. Therefore the radio is somewhat less quality than if they could test it live on the air. This info comes direct from the horses' mouth, Mr. Jim Peng and Bill himself. Bill actually worked in house at RCI on the 2900 and on the 2950's for several years. He later worked on the 2950's out of the house contractually due to the long over 100 mile travel distance to work. He did do wonders for the 2950 as Dino has said. I am thankful that our shop was trained by Bill himself for over 6 years. No one will ever be another Bill though. He is and will always be a radio legend. .-------Gayle Good Pay attention, Scott: I said "several ground wires (12- to 16-guage stranded wire is fine) of different lengths"... Is there something you did not understand about the word "several"?

Who said "butcher"? Just drill the friggin' hole! If you ever want to sell the truck, just use some touch-up paint (you have an Ace hardware nearby, right?), and plug the hole with a chrome hole-plug. If anyone cares that there is a hole in the roof, just point out that the plug is chrome -- they'll love it (been there, done that). Most of all, don't be a wimp with your truck -- if there is one thing that turns my stomach, it's a truck-owner that's a pansy! Shit, man, don't be a wuss! If that's not possible, just mount the antenna on the bumper. Oh, but that might leave a mark... forget I said that. You are running out of options here.... is the truck for 'show' or for 'go'? When you make up your mind and break out the welding torch, drop me an email.

I have one... actually, I have two, but just use one of them (firewalls, not hoses).
Unless you get a firewall, you have no idea how many people are trying to get into your system. It seems to be a common belief that only companies are targetted and that personal users are safe.

> and virus protection

Have that too.

> if you are that insecure.

It isn't a matter of being insecure, just basic precautions.
Have you seen the figures for systems infected? Obviously, too many people think that you don't need this protection or that a three or five year old anti-virus is fine.

Some time back, some people on this group were getting attempts to infect their systems, and a I got a message from Net3media claiming that I sent them an infected e-mail... at a time when I was not even on-line.
Someone, possibly on this group, with us in their address book must have had the virus, which selects one person to claim to be while trying to infect others in the address book.

> Also update your DAT files for the virus scan once a week.

I update it when a new one comes out.

In any case, an anti-virus and firewall would NOT have stopped that software from being put on my system and they would not stop a site from placing a dialer on a system or changing the dial-up settings.

We should all have the choice of what software we have on OUR systems, to tell someone that they "must" have certain software installed or that they are "crazy" for not wanting it is not much better that putting it on their system without asking.
If I go to Flowgo.com, I expact to need Flash or find it useless - it is a site dedicated to fun Flash movies. But, if a site is not about Flash or Active-X, I expect to get a choice of viewing software.

Regards,

Peter.

They're both made by the same manufacturer, Ranger, However, based on aesthetics and features, the nod definitely goes to the DX 2547. (IMHO) Add a CBCI Channel Guard IF filter and a SP-1a speech processor and you're all set.

Greetings all, it's been a while since I have posted, been working lots of overtime.

I recently aquired an older Starduster 11m antenna NIB at a garage sale, and I am not all that familiar with them, are they any good?

Hi All;
For Sale,
This Audiovox, 23 channel CB Converter is the model CBC-100. It appears to have NEVER been used, comes with original box & manual & bracket.
Purchased in 1977, it is still like-new, how many of these have survived 25 years :-)
It plugs into your car/house AM radio tuned to about 1400khz., runs off 12vdc, measures 4-1/2"w x 2"h x 5"dp.

Yes you were, incognito as Valmont, what a joke. I see you are not enamored with Richard cranium anymore, it's me again. That's ok George, everyone knows how obsessed you are with this group and all that are here. It's very typical of a troll to take others screen nics and use them for his jollies of trolling.

Next move, Valmont posts backing George. George posts usual BS and continues calling me name, accusations, harassment, vulgar foul language.
Same crap George has done for over three years under different ISP & hundreds of different screen nics.

Now for a real sideband radio...

If you are actually talking skip with that, it will soon end. The solar flux will drop soon. This is just a short burst.

The length of the coax is not important unless you have problems with the outside of the coax shield coupling with the antenna, thus having antenna currents on the surface of the coax. The test for this is to wind 5 or 6 turns around a large ferrite toroid as close to the antenna as you can get. If the SWR looks normal problem fixed. On the other hand I would suspect the SWR meter and extra coax cable couplings to be the cause. Bad or poorly soldered, crimped, connectors can cause SWR problems.

Also using too many cheap coax splices etc. will do the same thing. Most people don't realize that the PL-259 and SO-239 are NOT 50 ohm impedance connectors like the BNC, "N" connector, and SMA etc. When they use the white Teflon inside the PL-259 and SO-239 they come close, like around 36 ohms otherwise they are more like 25 ohms. At HF, 11m, the impedance bump thus the SWR departure, will be small as long as the splices are keep to a minimum and the length of the splice too.

Shame you know nothing about radio, a 1/4 wave has a high angle of radiation.

Faulty logic.........
Especially since almost EVERYBODY does that anyway.

Example:
I have a $1500 racing bike. (bicycle not motorcycle)
I have a recharchable 32 watt light for it.
The light is "removable" for "convenience & no damage" to bike
Are you saying I should drill a hole in the Easton aluminum frame to make it "permanentï¿½?
WHY cause damage and make something permanent that only gets used about 5-10% while I am in the vehicle.
UNLESS I mount it PERMANENT (somewhere) in the truck.........It sits in the seat UNTIL some PERSON is in the passenger seat.

Not really. If the SWR meter reading changes based on position in the feed line then you have problems with the antenna coupling in to the outside of the coax, antenna currents. It is the antenna currents on the outside, shield, of the coax that is responsible for the SWR meter reading variations as the meter is moved from one point in the line to another. The fix is to get rid of the antenna currents flowing on the outside surface of the coax shield. Once that is done you'll find the position of the SWR meter doesn't matter. I've gone through this exercise on my van using three different antennas for different Ham bands.

If you like I can go through the math in detail to show you that the SWR does not change based on the measurement position in the line for a losses transmission line. At 11m the loess in RG-58, or larger cable, can be neglected for the short runs used in a mobile installation.

While the loss from a short run of RG-58 can be neglected, the sound of the signal DOES change. With #20 speaker wire and RG-58, the resulting signal was tinny. With #16 speaker wire and RG-8X, the sound was fuller with good base response. This affected voice on my CB. I went from tinny to full range. I was asked what kind of box I was using. Transmit & receive were improved. I will never use RG-58 again. I remove it from all ready made antennas and replace it with RG-8x. This also removes the crimped on connectors.

Steve, it's quite simple, you don't want to have a good installation in your vehicle. Everyone is telling you how to do it right the first time. You don't want to hear it, because you have in your mind how to do it right.

Enjoy your half-assed radio with your half-assed antenna. Don't complain when the fuel pump noise blanks out all but those near you when the engine is on. Don't complain when no one can hear you over the next hill.

We tried. If you're already an expert, you don't need to ask.

OK. Right.

I know who I am, and I am convinced Landshark is a real person, as well as Twistedhed, Jim H., Moparholic, The "Real" Frank G., Leland, Jerry O., Jay in the Desert, Sideband, Keith H., "Doc", Dino, Brian G. & Randy are as well.

On the other hand, WhoTF are B.P., pleco, valmont, Transhark, and all the other one or two time posters?

If you can't help the folks asking a question, then STFU!

I will now ignore every one of your posts until JUNE.

I hope all the others will join me in boycotting you.

You asked how to make it 50 ohms I gave you a way to do it. It depends on the type of mount you have otherwise it is very simple.

Now THAT'S faulty logic. The point is not to make it permanent, but to make it operate properly. Obviously your 32 watt light operates as intended when mounted as you described. But your radio system works on different principles than a flashlight.

> WHY cause damage and make something permanent that only gets used about >5-10% while I am in the vehicle.

Again, faulty logic. The amount of use has nothing to do with the fundamental operational requirements of the system.

Once again.......... hell, just skip it.

You have a radio system with an amplifier capable of several hundred watts. That much power, when not used properly, can cause harmful interference to other radios, including broadcast, business, emergency, and even aircraft radios. It can screw with non-radio electronics, such as automotive electrical systems and hospital equipment. If you are really reckless, it can cause cataracts. And with just one-tenth of that power you can get a pretty nasty RF burn (don't ask me how I know). Even worse, using that amp with a CB can land you a fine of up to $17,000, although the first offense is typically just a few thousand dollars.

You call that a toy?

If its 3:1 you need to work on antenna unless you have an antenna that is about 2 ft tall.

BTW got the radio in my motor home and radio tuned after modification to the radio. Replaced the capacitor on the output of the radio with a compression type variable. Tweaked the cap for max power out consistent with not squashing my modulation envelope. SWR is 2;1(short antenna). Oh yes, I had to use 18 ft of coax to get my built in tuner to work right . It would not match all the way down to 25 ohms, maybe if my cap were bigger it would have and I wouldnnt have 6 extra feet of coax in the overhead

Sorry, flash is not a standard of all WEB design. If you don't want anyone to look at your WEB page, don't make a page that doesn't have flash on it. Your WEB page is useless if no one wants to use flash plugins.

So which had you rather do , use 18ft of coax which will transform the impedance of the antenna to a high enough value that it dosent squash your modulation or build a tuner at the antenna. Also which do you think is easiest for someone who doesnt know how to build the tuner. Do you think it would help or hurt antenna sales to sy you had to build/buy a tuner to go with their antenna.
Radios work best when matched to the antenna . They work almost s well when the impedance of the antenna iis somewhat greater than the radio, a 2;1 will not be noticed if the impedance of the antenna is higher than the radio. On the other hand if the impedance of the antenna is 2:1 lower than the radio modulation will begin to suffer. This is something I just proved , if only to myself, while installing my radio in my motor home. I actually made the output circuit in my radio variable to tune it to 25 ohms, didnt work this low, I suspect not enough cap, maybe not enough coil either. Anyway made the coax length 18ft and tuned radio to 100 ohms which it did easily. After all of this I realised I didint need the variable output ,all I needed was the 18ft of coax. So as far as I am concerned if you dont have the experience, knowledge, and tools the best way to install a CB antenna is to use 18ft of coax. This makes the system very forgiving to imperfections. One other thing I noticed was that the rx worked noticably bettter using 18ft. With the 4:1(25 to 100) impedance change cause by the coax this would mean I now have twice as much voltage at the input to the rx(a 6dbincrease on rx).

Yeah, what brand has the impedance matcher.

99 percent of them dont though. Only some base loaded antennas. As far as the Antron goes(piece of junk) conversation was about mobile antennas.

99 percent of the time this works, sometimes it dont, 18ft works all the time. That why antenna manufactuers recommend it. it makes it plug and play so any idiot can install an antenna.

You missed the point: The length of the coax doesn't change the SWR at all -- it only fools the meter because the meter is usually located at the wrong end of the cable (i.e, at the radio). Antenna manufacturers tell you to use 18' because it assures a reasonably accurate measurement even with a poorly grounded radio. That way they don't get as many complaints from people saying the antenna is bad, when it really was the installation that was bad. If you want to test your system, change the length of your coax and see if the measured SWR changes. If it does, you have a problem (usually poor or no RF grounding of the radio).

Using 18' of coax is what I classify as a "stupid CBer trick".

It is definitely a "perk". If it is anything otherwise, why don't they turn down these illegal gifts? There is nothing forcing them to go to Las Vegas for a week on someone else's dime, is there?

Wrong. Accepting freebies (whether travel or gifts) is not acceptable under the law. And accepting them from the very people you are supposed to regulate is highly questionable. Even in the current Republican regime.

Mine. All you need is a coil (three or four turns of thick, solid wire), a small varicap (100pF works fine for 27MHz), and a small metal box to hold them. The coil is connected between the center conductor of the coax and the antenna, and the cap goes from one side of the coil to ground. Since the impedance of the antenna is usually lower than the 50 ohms of the coax, the cap should be put on the coax side of the coil. This is called a step-down L-pad (or L network). Adjust the coil by spacing the turns, and tune with the varicap. Real simple stuff, and you don't even need to adjust the whip. Need a schematic?

Let me see if I've got this straight. The size of the conductor
in the speaker leads, and in the coaxial cable made a diference in the 'tone' of your signal. Is that right?

actually the other day i talked skip i think it was last monday . it was around 7:00 at night here in canada and some guy asked for a radio check so i gave him one . found out he was in Chessapeak Bay (bad spelling) . was kinda cool talking that far on 4 watts :)

Hi Brian,

Everyone who is serious about professional and proper amplifier design (and operation), uses some form of filter on the output. No filtering is bad news...

Does your Skywave Amplifier have any filtering on the output..? Even a block diagram is missing from your web site.

Everyone holding on to something..?

"I agree somewhat with Frank on this one". I even like the marker generator statement, very funny Frank. But I would include output filtering on even a class A ampliflier. No amplifier is without sin, regardless of the application.

No, it has no output filtering but the harmonic content is shown in the specs. This amp has a regulated bias source... something that no other comparable amp has, to keep the harmonic content down. It certainly could be improved by additional filtering, perhaps another 10dB, but the harmonic content was thought to be low enough that it wasn't a necessity... in an attempt to keep the price competitive and maximize reliability with fewer components. Thanks for your comments, always willing to discuss engineering strategies with you.

That's like selling a brand new car without a transmission: all you get is the body and the engine, everything else is extra.

True, Class A RF power amps do show some even harmonics (which makes them great for audio amps). However, if one feels the overwhelming compulsion to run an unfiltered RF power amp, Class A is the only option.

No You missed the point. I NEVER said anything about coax length effecting SWR. I take that back, I said 1 thing about it . "Length of coax doesn't change it". Length of coax DOES change the impedance seen by the radio. If you dont understand the difference you have a lot to learn. The name of the game is matching impedance of the tx to impedance of the antenna/feedline system. Any feedline will transform the impedance of an antenna for better or worse unless the SWR is 1:1 or the feedline is 1/2 wl long or multiple there of. In either these two conditions the radio will see exactly the impedance of the antenna. In the world of CB and mobile antennas this is a rare occurance. By using an odd multiple of 1/4 wl(18 ft of .66 velocity factor cable) for a mobile CB installation you can almost always be assured that the transformation will effect the system for the better. As far as this being a stupid CB trick Enginneers have been doing this since there was radio to match impedances. A lot of the times in microwave it is the only practical way to convert from one impedance to another. Definitely not a trick and definetly not stupid.

Yes there is a myth that triming coax will effect SWR but I NEVER said that. Seems you like to read and see what you want to see instead of what is really there.

Lets say you install a 1/4 wave stainless steel whip, and you measure an SWR of 1.56:1.

Do you:

a) trim coax
b) trim antenna
c) build a matching network
d) go have a cold one

You made my point, Unless you use some kind of matching device CB antennas in mobile installations are rarely that good of a match to 50 ohms and need something to extra match them. Using 18ft of coax will do it almost as well as your tuner, a hell of a lot easier and cheaper, and the poor shmo that doing it doesnt have to know a thing about antennas and can have the mechanical ability of a chimp. The losses left by the final mismatch will probably less than the insertion loss of your tuners.

Yeah it will tune but 3:1 is a pretty good indication something is wrong on

The answer is somewhere in this book:

Practical Antenna Handbook, third edition by Joseph J. Carr, in your library at 621.382.

Mr. Carr explains coax, matching networks, BDW's conjugate match and all the other good stuff.

3:1 is a 25% reflected power. The matchbox would take at maximum 10% power... so with a 3:1 match initially... the box is definately be worthwhile and you would stand to gain 15% power increase over doing nothing.

I'd rather have 1.56:1 and resonance, then 1:1 with 20 ohms of resistance.

1.5 is only 4%. I'll make that up with the antenna at resonance.
4% is only noticed by RF power meters and folks that get "anal".

The whole story, up to now….

(Knock at the door) Aaron opens door wearing his skimpiest thong underwear

Aaron: Hi Sparky! How are you!

Sparky: I'm good Aaron. Is dinner ready?

Aaron: Almost. In the meantime, you can snack on me, but we need to hurry before George gets here.

Sparky:(screaming) Aaron! Will you shut up with the advances! I already told you I've started to like women now! Now leave me alone!

Aaron: OK, OK! I just thought we could be like the old days again.

Sparky: No, I'm really going to stick it out this time.

Aaron: (sniffling) Ok Sparky, have it your way. I'll respect your wishes.

Sparky: Where's George? Do we have to wait for him to eat?

Aaron: Yes, he's bringing the salad.

Sparky: OK. Got any snacks?

Aaron: I think so, let me check.

(knock at the door)Aaron answers the door.

Aaron:(exclaiming) George! My God! What happened to you?

George:(crying) I was just out minding my own business, following this little girl, and all the sudden, wham! Her Dad must have seen me and punched me. I had just asked if she wanted some candy too. I think I could have had her. Then the Dad pulled out of the window of my Pacer, and beat me some more. I think he dislocated my shoulder too.

Sparky: Can we eat now?

Aaron: Sparky, can't you see George is hurt? Go get one of the steaks for George's black eyes. And while you're in the kitchen Sparky, get some ice for his broken nose and busted lip too.

Sparky: OK, but I ain't eating the steak that you use on George's eyes!

Aaron: OK, whatever!

(Sparky spends fully 5 minutes trying to figure out which steak is the smallest, so he can have the biggest…then finally he returns)

Aaron: God Sparky! Why did you take a bite out of it? It's raw, for Christ's sake!

Sparky:(unintelligible mumbling caused by mouthful of raw steak)

Aaron:(grabs steak from Sparky and applies it to George's eyes) There now George. Is that better? Aaron knows how to make you feel better, doesn't he?

George: Yes Aaron, it's much better now. Thanks, you know I bruise easily.

Aaron: Hey Sparky, light the grill.

Sparky: Hey, those steaks ain't half bad raw! Do we really need to cook them?

Aaron: My God Sparky! Sometimes you act like a Neanderthal! Light the damn grill!

(Sparky goes out back, turns on the gas, clicks the igniter repeatedly, nothing happens. Goes back inside for matches and returns)

Aaron:(just as Sparky lights the match) NO! STOP!

(loud explosion)

Sparky: (screaming) I'm on fire! Somebody help me!

(Sparky runs back through the house with his beard on fire, screaming for help. Aaron and George race behind him with teacups filled with water)

Finally, Aaron and George manage to catch Sparky and beat out the fire in Sparky's beard with the teacups.

Sparky: Thanks guys! That was close! I saw my life flash before my eyes.

Aaron: No prob Sparky. You know we love you.

George: Speak for yourself, Aaron! Faggot!

Sparky: Can we eat now?

George: Well, we could if you hadn't blown up the grill!

Aaron: It's OK Sparky. We'll just grill the steaks on the stove.

Sparky: I don't wanna wait! I'm getting dizzy. My cholesterol must have dropped below 300.

George: Here, drink this.

Sparky: What is it?

George: Bacon drippings. It will bring the cholesterol level back up in your blood.

Sparky:(drinks greedily) Burp! Thanks George.

George: No problem. Hey Aaron, you still have that "Little Girls Gone Wild" video?

Aaron: I think so…check over there in the gay porn by the VCR.

George: Faggot! (looks for the tape)

Sparky: I'm hungry! Let's eat.

Aaron: Just hang on a minute. Let me get these damn steaks cooked. (throws the steaks in the pan)

George: (tearing his eyes off the video) Sparky, get the salad and dressing ready, will ya? I'm busy now.

Sparky: OK, George. (Sparky sets the table)

Aaron: How do you guys like your steaks?

Sparky: Raw is fine with me.

George: (rubbing his crotch while watching the little girl video) I don't care. Yeah, raw is fine with me too.

Aaron: (mumbles) Damn weirdo's…

Aaron: (grease splatters on Aaron's hairless chest) Ouch!

George: Aaron, do you mind if I take this video home with me?

Aaron: Sure, take it. You know I don't like females.

George: (under his breath) Faggot!

Sparky: Can we eat now?

Aaron: Yep! Steaks are done. (Aaron places them on the table)

Sparky: I'm first George! That's my steak!

George: Whatever Sparky! Hell, I'm just gonna leave now. (grabs the video and heads for the door)

Aaron: Where you going, George?

George: Um…uh…I'm not really hungry now. I think I'll just watch this tape at home.

Sparky: Good! Gimme his steak.

Aaron: OK George, see ya later.

George: Bye

Scene: Much later in the evening after George has gone home to watch his kiddy porn, we return to find Aaron and Sparky enmeshed in each other's arms.

Aaron: Sparky, I knew you would come around.

Sparky: Well Aaron, I kind of feel guilty…almost as if I'm slipping back into my old self. I've really tried to kick this man habit, but I can't seem to stop having feelings for you.

Aaron: Well Sparky, I always knew we were meant for each other.

Sparky: I only ask one thing of you, Aaron.

Aaron: What might that be, Sparky?

Sparky: All I ask is that you don't breath a word of this encounter to George.

Aaron: Fair enough. I know he's a bit of a bigot.

Sparky: Yes he is, but he's still my only real friend. You know, I can't count the times that he's tried to save me when I've gotten in over my head on the newsgroup.

Aaron: I know Sparky, and he's done the same for me. I really love him, but I can't let him know that.

Sparky: So, we're sworn to secrecy, right Aaron?

Aaron: Absolutely! Remember, we did take the ACK pledge.

Sparky:(chuckles quietly)

Sparky: (tentatively) OK Aaron, I'm all yours.

Scene: Fade to black…

The AKC rules? Yeah, right!!

Sounds like Jimmy has alot to learn..

SWR is a measure of the impedance mismatch between the output of the radio and the transmission line & antenna system. If changing the length of the coax changes the SWR, then there is an impedance mismatch in the system, which is USUALLY because of a pisspoor RF ground at the antenna, but there are other causes that can pop up to cause such behavior.

18 feet is a 1/2 wave section (not taking into account velocity factor), not 1/4 wave, at 27 MHz.

Using 1/2 wave between the antenna and the transmitter can only mask any problems in the antenna system. Losses and mismatches will still exist, and will still cause problems, regardless of the length of the coax..

The trick is to actually fix the problem, not cover it up. After all, Radio isn't Congress.

d. Go have a cold one.

A 1/4 wave SS whip (if it has a good RF ground) has an input impedance of around 30 ohms. 1.5:1 is an acceptable (and preferable) SWR in this installation. Don't touch it. It'll get out.

Read the specs and youll probably find that its 7watts of power from the Speaker... not the transmitter...

Ive got a walkie talkie here with 5watt CB plastered over the box and thats what it refers to...

Cocaine is nothing but BAD. The people who say they can control IT are lying to themselves, or don't have the money to spend on it. Been there, done that, got the t-shirt and the record to prove it. It started as a small amount, maybe twice a month,circa1985. Then ecalated rapidly to an eighth of an ounce or more a week. I realize this doesn't appear to be alot to people without jobs, but to a person with a 8 to 5, safety sensitive job, it is alot of missed sleep. At first, the sex was great, did it more ways than the law allows. But this rapidly faded into nothing. The major concern just becomes getting more of the shit. When the supply of powder became harder to locate in this area, crack was always available. So, this became the easiest way for me. Did that for about 5 years before being caught in a suviellance camera and getting arrested.

Got 4 years defferred ajudication, meaning that if I don't get in trouble for the time on probation, I will have no conviction on my record. Just recently finished that sucessfully. Actually, in Texas, you can get off probation by doing all your community service(120 hours for me), and doing 1/3 of the time, which I did. Cost of my fun, about $7500 for the lawyer and the probation fees.

You know, the bad part is that I still crave the shit. But, now I know
the white monster is always lurking in the back of my mind, and I cannot surrender to the call.

Incidentally, I did lose one friend I grew up with, to suicide, directly related to cocaine. Also, a co-worker aqquired AIDS through the sharing of needles while injecting the shit. That was in the early days of AIDS, when everyone thought they would never get it. He is DEAD now.

In closing, the only real advice I have for anyone thinking of trying the shit is.....PLEASE DON'T DO IT! DON'T DO IT FOR ME, THOSE THAT LOVE YOU, YOUR WIFE, HUSBAND, GIRLFRIEND OR BOYFRIEND. IN SHORT, DON'T EVER TRY COKE. IT IS NOTHING
BUT A FELONIOUS WASTE OF MONEY.

I can't make it any more simple than that.

See Ya, Randy
